Books and Equipment

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) for each local education authority and (b) for each Key Stage and for post-16 provision, expenditure per pupil on books and equipment for the most recent year for which figures are available and for each of the preceding two years. [59172]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information on expenditure per pupil on educational equipment, furniture and materials, which covers books and equipment, for each local education authority for the period 1994–95 to 1996–97, the latest year for which figures are available, is set out in a Table, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Separate information on expenditure per pupil on books and equipment for each Key Stage and for post-16 provision is not available.

The Government have substantially increased provision for local authority spending on education in 1998–99 to £19.4 billion. They have also pledged an extra £19 billion for education throughout the UK in the next three years and provided an extra £2,000 over and above increased RSG levels to purchase books during 1998 to every school with more than 100 pupils in England as part of the National Year of Reading. In addition £102 million will be provided jointly by the Government and local education authorities in 1998–99 for the National Grid for Learning and an additional £954 million for schools capital in 1998–99.

Internet Publishing

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy to require all task forces and equivalent bodies sponsored by his Department to publish their working papers and minutes on the Internet. [58771]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The Department is committed to open government and abides by the principles laid down under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

In any dealings with task forces and equivalent bodies we will impress on them our Department's commitment to openness and point out that proposed Freedom of Information legislation may identify and embrace these bodies.

Some of the larger task forces currently publish information on the Internet and any future bodies will be encouraged to consider an Internet site.

Home Economics

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to include home economics in mainstream education. [58962]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home economics issues are already covered by the National Curriculum. Food and textiles are, for example, covered by National Curriculum design and technology. Further home economics elements are addressed by other National Curriculum subjects. Diet and nutrition are covered by National Curriculum science and budgeting by National Curriculum mathematics. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority is currently reviewing the National Curriculum. Proposed changes will be submitted to the Secretary of State in the spring of next year. There will follow a full consultation on agreed proposals.

Schools (Drug Abuse)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the expenditure by his Department on programmes in schools highlighting the dangers of drug abuse in 1997–98. [58825]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department supported approximately £6 million of expenditure for drug education and prevention work, through the Grants For Education Support and Training (GEST) Programme in 1997–98, increased to £7 million in 1998–99 through the Standards Fund programme. This support was made available to Local Education Authorities, to assist schools in delivering effective drug education and managing drug-related incidents on schools' premises.

In addition, the Department supported £1.5 million of expenditure for the training of youth and community workers, which included among its objectives the effective delivery of programmes of drug education and prevention.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of the Welfare to Work programme to date in the West Midlands. [57735]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 2 November 1998]: Government Statistical Service figures, covering the period from January 1998 to the end of August 1998, show that in the West Midlands 14,530 young people had started on New Deal and that 1,772 had started unsubsidised employment; 457 subsidised employment; 154 on the Environment Task Force; 136 on the voluntary sector option; and 489 on Full-Time Education and Training option.

We have a comprehensive evaluation programme to measure the impact of New Deal nationally, regionally, and locally. I will publish further detailed findings of this programme as they become available.

Disability Services

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will announce his proposals for the expenditure of the money allocated to specialist disability services. [58574]

Ms Hodge: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment announced on 28 October 1998, Official Report column 340, a fund of an extra £30 million over 3 years to improve job opportunities for disabled people. The money will provide:

- 1,500 additional supported employment places to test new ways of helping disabled people move into open employment and to boost the subsidy to employers;
- extra help with work costs through Access to Work for an additional 4,000 disabled people;
- an increase to the Job Introduction Scheme subsidy from £45 to £75 a week helping to support a further 3,000 opportunities over three years.

In 1999 a range of organisations will be approached with the aim of developing initiatives which will test ways of increasing the scope for progression from the Supported Employment Programme into open employment. The additional help under the Access to Work programme and the Job Introduction Scheme will be managed by the Employment Service as part of their normal support to employers and disabled people.

Early Years Education

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he plans to set a target for the universal provision of early years education for three year olds whose parents want it. [59170]

Ms Hodge: The £390 million additional funding we have made available for England over the next three years will enable the participation rate of three years-olds in early education to approximately double to 66% by 2002. We will consider future targets in the light of this expansion.

New Deal

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what statistics he is collecting to monitor the progress of ex-offenders on the New Deal. [59174]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Information is available specifically on ex-offenders only for those entering the New Deal early. I can report that 2,294 ex-offenders have entered New Deal early. Monitoring of ex-offenders relies on clients volunteering this information.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he plans to reply to the letter from the hon. Members for Bath and for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) of 30 September 1998, on the education and training option under the New Deal. [59167]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I will be issuing a letter by the end of this week.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have found (a) subsidised and (b) unsubsidised employment under the New Deal for 18 to 25 year olds in the Tynemouth constituency to date. [59009]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government Statistical Service figures show, to the end of August 1998, that in the Employment Service Tyneside North Unit of Delivery, which covers the Tynemouth constituency, 62 18–24 year olds have found unsubsidised employment and 29 have started on the New Deal employment option.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) the employers currently employing New Deal trainees under the subsidised employment option and (b) for each (i) how many New Deal trainees they are employing and (ii) what percentage their New Deal trainees are of their total workforce. [59173]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Across the country, around 29,300 companies have been signed up to New Deal. The current Employment Service systems do not allow us to monitor number of starts on the Employment Option by employer. We are currently looking at setting up an employer database that will allow us to monitor New Deal information by employer.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of subsidised unfilled vacancies for New Deal trainees. [59171]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Employment Service information systems cannot provide this information.

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many disabled job seekers have (a) sought help under the New Deal, (b) found suitable programmes and (c) moved on to permanent employment or longer-term training. [59078]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Government Statistical Service figures of people with disabilities show that, to the end of August 1998, (a) 19,880 have entered New Deal, (b) 360 have entered the Voluntary Sector Option, and 280 have entered the Environment Task Force Option, (c) 1,090 have moved from Gateway to the Subsidised Employment Option and 2,100 have signed-off to start unsubsidised jobs and 940 participants have entered the Full-Time Education and Training Option.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have found employment through the New Deal to date (a) in total and (b) in each target group. [57143]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 29 October 1998]: Latest figures, combining GSS figures to August with provisional management information to September, show that, since New Deal for 18–24 year olds started, over 30,000 young people have found work. Of these, 21,460 have gone into unsubsidised jobs and 9,020 have entered subsidised employment.

Figures for New Deal 25+ will be available in the Government Statistical Service's statistical First Release, which will be published in December.

No figures are available yet for the success of the New Deal for Lone Parents since its National launch on 26 October. Information from the pilot areas combined with provision for new claimants up to 25 September show 5,439 lone parents have moved into jobs or increased their hours of work.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 18 to 24 year olds who left the New Deal for non-subsidised employment had returned to the New Deal programme by 30 September. [57871]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 2 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 29 October 1998, Official Report, column 230.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by outcome, for those delivery units for which the information is available, the numbers of young people who have left the New Deal to date. [59177]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The latest Government Statistical Service figures show that the total number of people leaving New Deal to the end of August is 32,080. Of these, 17,300 have entered unsubsidised employment, 3,470 have transferred to alternative benefits, 1,810 have gone to other known destinations. The destinations of the remaining 9,510 is unknown. Breakdowns for the 143 individual Units of Delivery can be found in the Library.

GSS statistics to the end of September will be published on 26 November.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the costs incurred centrally in supporting the early implementation of the New Deal for young people. [59168]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The central costs incurred by the Employment Service and DfEE to the 30 September 1998 in supporting the early stages of the introduction of New Deal amount to £45.6 million. This includes infrastructure costs, preparation and implementation costs and Marketing costs.

Schools

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received about the policy of naming and shaming schools; and if he will make a statement. [58542]

Ms Estelle Morris: The names of schools which have been found by OFSTED to be failing their pupils, or to have serious weaknesses, are a matter of public record, as are those which have received good reports. All inspection reports are published and are available on the Internet.

There is general agreement that failing schools must be identified and tackled urgently in the interests of their pupils. In May 1997 the Government found a number of schools which had been under special measures for up to three years and took action to ensure that these schools were turned round, closed or given a fresh start. All schools coming into special measures from September 1998 will have two years to improve, be closed or, in exceptional circumstances, given a fresh start. Local authorities with schools which have now been on special measures for over two years have been asked to submit plans for urgent action. The Secretary of State will not hesitate to use his new power to direct the closure of such schools if that is necessary to ensure pupils have the quality of education they deserve. When such action is taken, it will be made public.

Study or Training Leave

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when he expects the right to time off for study or training to become available to 16 and 17 year olds; [57679]

(2) when he expects the regulations surrounding the right to time off for study or training for 16 and 17 year olds to come into force. [57680]

Mr. Mudie: We are working towards an implementation date of September 1999 for Part III of the Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998 (Right to Time Off for Study or Training).

Course Vacancies (UCAS)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many course vacancies existed in the institutions engaged in the UCAS scheme immediately following the UCAS clearing procedure in (a) Autumn 1998, (b) Autumn 1997, (c) Autumn 1996 and (d) Autumn 1995. [58979]

Mr. Mudie: Although throughout clearing Universities and Colleges notify UCAS which courses have vacancies and these appear in the national press and elsewhere, they do not declare the number of vacancies. Figures for the number of vacancies are therefore not available centrally.

Jobfinder's Grant

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has to extend the jobfinder's grant to people who work fewer than 30 hours a week; [58878]

(2) what plans he has to extend the jobfinder's grant to non-New Deal applicants. [58879]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Jobfinder's Grant has always been available to jobseekers unemployed 2 years or more since its introduction as a national programme in April 1995.

Jobfinder's Grant is a one-off payment of a grant of £200 paid at the discretion of Employment Service Client Advisers who decide if the grant is required to help with the client's transition back to work.

During 1998, eligibility was extended to all New Deal participants. Due to the range of opportunities available on New Deal 18–24 it was decided to make Jobfinder's Grant available at Employment Service District Manager discretion.

I am currently considering whether to extend the Jobfinder's Grant to people who work fewer than 30 hours per week. Indeed all Employment Service programmes and services, including Jobfinder's Grant, are constantly being evaluated to look at ways of enhancing the provision to meet unemployed jobseekers' needs in the ever changing labour market.

Science Exam Results

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the grades achieved at (a) GCSE and (b) A level in each science subject in (i) schools and (ii) further education colleges in Staffordshire in each of the last five years. [57945]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 4 November 1998]: The GCSE and GCE A level data requested for schools and colleges in Staffordshire are shown in the following tables.

Millennium Bug Busters

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many millennium bug busters are currently in post. [59220]

Mr. Mudie: As at 5 November, 253 people had completed training under the Bug Busters Programme. 430 had started training and a further 1,294 were booked to go on courses.

Further Education (Business Links)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to restrict off site collaborative provision between colleges, universities and business. [56698]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is concerned to ensure high quality and value for money in collaborative arrangements between further education colleges and business. In furtherance of these objectives, the Further Education Funding Council has made changes in the arrangements for such provision with effect from 1 August. First, colleges are prohibited from transferring funding to employers as part of a collaborative arrangement to provide education and training to their employees, except for the hire of equipment or premises. In addition, the funding guidance for 1998–99 stresses the need for colleges to address identified growth in their local communities. Should colleges seek to operate outside their local area, they would be expected to liaise with colleges in the locality concerned, thereby eliminating unhelpful and wasteful competition.

As regards higher education, we have no plans to restrict universities' collaborative arrangements with business.

Civil Servants (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin of civil servants in his Department, by grade, as at 1 October 1997; [56743]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin of civil servants in his private office, as at 1 October 1997. [56745]

Mr. Mudie: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 5 November 1998, Official Report, columns 666–70.

Young Offenders (Profiles)

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what data he has collated on the ability profiles of young offenders. [59077]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply.

The Prison Service collates information on literacy and numeracy standards among prisoners from basic skills screening tests carried out near the beginning of sentences. The tests are not compulsory and not all prisoners are screened. The results of the basic skills assessments in 1997 for juveniles and young offenders are given in the table.

There are no centrally collated statistics across the probation service in England and Wales concerning the ability profiles of young offenders.

Juvenile/young prisoners basic skills assessment tests—1997

		Standard (%) [1]
Literacy	8,697	30	38.5	31.5
Numeracy	8,633	43.6	38.8	17.6

[1] Standard: Level 1 indicates basic functionality in literacy and/or numeracy, above level 1 is higher while below level 1 indicates a clear deficit in literacy and/or numeracy

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Objective 5A

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many claims for funding the UK has made under Objective 5A for modernisation in agriculture, in each of the last three financial years. [56485]

Mr. Morley: Aid for on-farm investments was implemented in the UK through the Farm and Conservation Grant Scheme. Although the scheme closed to new applications in 1994, grant continues to be paid on planned investments. The UK has made a claim in each of the last three years to the European Commission for expenditure incurred in the previous calendar year as shown in the table.

£ million

Year	Amount claimed
1997	1.3

Countryside Stewardship

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the maximum amount of money the UK is entitled to reclaim from EU funds under the Stewardship Scheme for 1998–99. [56487]

Mr. Morley: We expect to be able to reclaim a maximum of £5.8 million from the EU for Countryside Stewardship in 1998–99.

Pigs

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he has taken to provide assistance for the pig rearing industry during the last three months; and if he will make a statement. [56923]

Mr. Morley: In the last three months the Government have supported all measures proposed by the EU Commission to meet the present crisis. These include:

re-introducing export refunds on fresh and frozen bone-in carcase meat and extending the payment of export refunds to boneless cuts;

a further increase in the rates of export refunds on fresh and frozen carcase meat as from 15 October, this time by around 30 per cent.;

following the UK pig industry, the introduction of an Aids to Private Storage Scheme as from 28 September.

all Ministers have had regular meetings with pig industry representatives.

In addition, my Ministerial colleague, Lord Donoughue, hosted a pigmeat seminar on 7 July which was aimed at caterers. This was the first part of a programme of events that seeks to improve communication and understanding between the domestic pigmeat industry and the catering and food service sector. The second stage of the campaign, a seminar for 16 November, when Lord Donoughue will again take part. The ultimate objective of this programme is to increase the usage of pigmeat products in the important catering sector, thereby improving market opportunities for UK pig producers.

I and my Ministerial colleagues will use this and every other opportunity, including our regular meetings with the retail and processing sectors and Parliamentary debates, to make it known that the British pig industry produces a quality product to high welfare and other standards. It is of the utmost importance for this to be fully appreciated and taken into account by processors, retailers, caterers and the final consumer.

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of piglet mortality rates in the United Kingdom, and of the economic value this represents. [57925]

Mr. Rooker: A MAFF founded survey of pig producers co-ordinated by the University of Exeter estimated the average rate of pre-weaned piglet mortality in England for 1996–97 at 12.4 per cent. This represented a cost to the producer of about £1.30 per finished pig.

Calf Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the scheduled end of the calf slaughter scheme on the beef market. [57297]

Mr. Rooker: We expect that some of the calves which might have been slaughtered under the Calf Processing Aid Scheme will be slaughtered on farm, some will be slaughtered as young calves for pet food and some reared for beef. We do not anticipate any significant effect on the UK beef market. Closing the Scheme on 30 November, as we have announced, will not affect the beef market until the beginning of the year 2000 when the calves reared as beef start to come on the market.

BSE

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the costs of the current BSE inquiry. [57085]

Mr. Rooker: The estimated direct cost of the BSE Inquiry is £10 million, excluding departmental costs and legal support for departmental witnesses.

Meat and Dairy Prices

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish figures to show the typical relationship between prices paid by shoppers in supermarkets and prices paid to British producers for a range of meat and dairy products. [57293]

Mr. Rooker: The Ministry does not hold or publish figures showing the relationship between prices paid by shoppers in supermarkets and prices paid to British producers for meat and diary products. Figures for the farm to retail price spread for beef, lamb, pork and bacon are published by the Meat and Livestock Commission in "UK Market Survey—Monthly Supplement", copies of which are in the House Library.

Meat Inspection Standards

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of standards of meat inspection carried out in other EU countries. [57725]

Mr. Rooker: All fresh meat produced in the EU which is intended to be sold for human consumption must be produced in accordance with EU harmonised hygiene rules. Amongst other things these rules require full ante-mortem and post-mortem checks by official veterinarians. We do not have specific information on the standard of meat inspection in other EU countries. It is for the competent authority in each Member State to ensure that such rules are followed in practice and it is the European Commission's responsibility to ensure that individual Member States comply with their Community obligations. The Commission's Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) carries out regular programmes of inspection visits to all Member States. If necessary, the Commission will take infraction proceedings against those Member States whose arrangements are considered inadequate. Reports of FVO visits are published on the Commission's website on the Internet (hhtp://europa.eu.int/comm/dg24/health/vi/reports). A list of the relevant reports will appear each month in MAFF's Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report and BSE Enforcement Bulletin.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the value of hill livestock compensatory allowances in current prices for each year since 1975 for (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland. [57500]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 2 November 1998]: The following tables give the information requested in respect of both HLCA payment rates and HLCA expenditure. The rates for the Severely Disadvantaged Area and Disadvantaged Area apply throughout the UK. Additional supplements are paid in the Severely Disadvantaged Area which falls within the Highlands and Islands Enterprise (HIE) region of Scotland. Payments in the Disadvantaged Area and the HIE supplements commenced in 1985. Expenditure data for 1976–78 are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Quarantine Exemptions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many exemptions have been given from quarantine regulations for cats and dogs over the last year; and on what grounds. [58661]

Mr. Rooker: None. However, commercially traded cats and dogs imported into the UK from EU Member States are exempt from quarantine if they can comply with the requirements of Council Directive 92/65/EEC. This allows commercially traded cats and dogs to be imported into the UK without the need to enter quarantine providing they: have been born on and kept on the holding of origin since birth; have been vaccinated against rabies when at least 3 months old; have remained in the Member State of origin for at least 6 months following vaccination against rabies; have undergone a blood test following vaccination to ensure that the rabies vaccination has been effective; are permanently identified; and are accompanied by a health certificate signed by an official veterinarian of the Member State of Origin verifying compliance with the requirements of the Directive. Further checks on compliance are conducted following each animal's arrival in the UK. 95 dogs and 22 cats were imported into the UK in 1997 in accordance with these requirements.

Slaughterhouses (Stunning)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to amend the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995 to introduce a maximum stunning to sticking interval for (a) pigs, (b) sheep and (c) cattle; and if he will make a statement. [58168]

Mr. Morley: The Government have no immediate plans to amend the Regulations in this way. However, we await the European Commission's proposals to amend Directive 93/119/EC on the protection of animals at the time of slaughter or killing. As Community rules apply in this area, we believe that changes, such as the introduction of maximum stunning to sticking intervals for head-only electrically stunned animals, are best addressed in the context of developing those rules. We continue to press the Commission to bring forward their proposals.

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the total value of subsidies, in current prices, paid to farmers in the United Kingdom for each of the last 10 years through (a) his Department and (b) the European Union. [57506]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The total value of payments to farmers made through this Department in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

Year	£ million
1989–90	305
1990–91	358
1991–92	393
1992–93	568
1993–94	1,307
1997–98	1,547

Most of these payments are in respect of EU-funded CAP and environmental measures.

Information on payments made direct to farmers by the EU is not held centrally.

Recreational Fishing

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many licences his Department has issued for recreational fishing under Part 2 of the Merchant Fishing Act 1995; and if he will make a statement on the percentage of the British quota allowed for recreational fishing; [57948]

(2) if he will exempt recreational boats from periodic MAFF species bans; [57949]

(3) when he proposes to introduce a register for recreational fishing; and how many staff will be employed by his Department to administer these records. [57950]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 9 November 1998]: European Union regulations on annual total allowable catches and quotas require that all landings be counted against a Member State's share of the total allowable catch for each quota stock. All vessels over 10 metres in overall length which fish for profit are required to submit landing declarations for quota stocks. The landings made by all other vessels, including fishing vessels of 10 metres and under in overall length, and for which separate quota allocations operate in the United Kingdom, are monitored by Fisheries Departments. Where allocations are exhausted steps are taken to prohibit further landings unless additional quota allocation can be made available. However, this does not prevent recreational anglers from fishing provided they return their catch to the sea. Occasionally temporary closures may operate to ensure that sufficient allocation is held back for seasonal fisheries.

Separate allocations are not made in respect of vessels exclusively engaged in recreational fishing. Nor are such vessels licensed by the Fisheries Departments under the provisions of the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1967 and we have no plans to do so. The registration of vessels under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 is a matter for the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

Hens (Welfare)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will encourage EU Agriculture ministers to support a ban on battery cages for egg-laying hens. [58293]

Mr. Morley: We have made clear our view that the EU should set an early date for the phasing out of the battery cage and will continue to press for this in the ongoing EU negotiations.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the proposed EU directive on the welfare of egg-laying hens. [58295]

Mr. Morley: We have received a number of written representations and have met with industry representatives and welfare organisations to discuss the proposals.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the additional costs to UK consumers of an EU-wide ban on battery cages for egg-laying hens. [58296]

Mr. Morley: The EU Commission estimate that the significant changes they propose in the standards for caged hens will cost between 1.2 and 1.56 ecu (80p—£1.11p) per EU consumer per annum. No estimate has been made of the additional cost to consumers of a ban. In practice this would depend on a number of factors including the available supply of shell egg and retail contracts.

Badgers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the badger population of England and Wales. [58592]

Mr. Rooker: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has made no direct estimates of the badger population of England and Wales. A report to the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (1995) based on surveys carried out in 1988 for the Nature Conservancy Council suggested pre-breeding badger population sizes of 195,000 in England and 35,000 in Wales. A report by the People's Trust for Endangered Species (1997) suggest that badger activity in Britain increased by 77 per cent. between 1988 and 1997. I understand those responsible for producing these figures are reviewing them, although no revisions have been published yet.

Farmers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers have taken early retirement in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate he has made for the figure in 1998–99. [57937]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 3 November 1998]: Figures are not available. There has been no Government funded early retirement scheme for farmers in the UK in the last 10 years, nor will there be one in 1998–99.

Exports (Russia)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the total values, in current prices, of UK agricultural exports to Russia for each year since 1992; and what estimate he has made of the figure for 1998 to 1999. [57931]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The table shows the value at current prices (prices at the time of trade), as recorded by the Overseas Trade Statistics of total agricultural exports to Russia between 1992 and 1997:

1993	208.169
1994	148.029
1995	136.225
1996	119.118
1997	157.479

Note:
The January-August 1998 figure is £105.319 million. No estimate has been made for 1999.

Flood Prevention

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will increase funding to the Environment Agency for flood prevention measures. [58677]

Mr. Morley: Funding of the Environment Agency's expenditure on flood defence is met mainly by levies on local authorities. The cost of the levies is reflected in local authorities' Standard Spending Assessments (part of the Revenue Support Grant settlement). Capital works are also eligible for MAFF grant. Following the Comprehensive Spending Review, MAFF is making £23 million of additional funding available over the next three years for capital works. The distribution of this funding between operating authorities (of which the Environment Agency is one) will depend on the relative urgency and priority of their planned works.

Sheep Quota

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many complaints his Department has received about allocation of sheep quota from the national reserve; what was the total amount of compensation (a) offered and (b) paid to complainants in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [58676]

Mr. Rooker: Extraction of information on complaints by farmers referring to sheep quota national reserve allocations could be achieved only at disproportionate cost. No compensation has been offered or paid as a result of complaints made direct to the Department about sheep quota national reserve allocations.

Ragwort

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give further guidance to highway authorities and landowners on the containment of ragwort. [58538]

Mr. Morley: The Highways Agency seeks to control ragwort on the trunkroad network in accordance with a code of practice for routine maintenance.

General advice on control of injurious weeds, including ragwort, is available from MAFF Regional Service Centres. I am actively considering ways in which this could be more effective.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Syms: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many vets are employed by the Meat Hygiene Service; and how many of these are foreign nationals. [58491]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 600.

Food Standards Agency

Ms Shipley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whom the Government have consulted on the funding of the Food Standards Agency. [58993]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The White Paper 'The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change' set out the Government's proposals for funding the Agency. This has been the subject of full public consultation and discussion with a wide range of organisations and individuals. The Government will consult further at the next stage on detailed proposals for recovering the new costs associated with the Agency from the food industry in a way that is administratively simple and fair to small businesses.

Agriculture

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the written representations he has received from Labour hon. Members in each of the last three months about problems facing the United Kingdom agricultural industry asked him to take action to help the industry. [58985]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 November 1998]: We have received a large number of written representations on the current difficulties of a range of sectors. Many of these representations have called for measures targeted at the current situation, a look at longer term issues and for a constructive dialogue both with our EU partners and within the UK.

Genetically Modified Seeds

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that no genetically modified seed will be proposed for inclusion on the national seed list unless and until a marketing consent for that seed has been granted under Part C of Directive 90/220. [59045]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 November 1998]: Marketing of the main agricultural and horticultural species cannot take place until a variety has been added to the UK National List or the EU Common Catalogue. For genetically modified varieties, marketing is also dependent on the promulgation of a marketing consent under Directive 90/220/EEC. National Listing would not, therefore, on its own, be sufficient to permit the marketing of a genetically modified plant variety. It is currently MAFF policy not to propose the addition of genetically modified plant varieties to the National List unless and until the relevant consent has been promulgated under 90/220/EEC.

Sellafield

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the Minister for Energy in the Republic of Ireland concerning the commissioning of the mixed oxide plant at Sellafield; and what response he has made. [59212]

Mr. Rooker: A letter has recently been received from Joe Jacob, T. D., Minister of State, Department of Public Enterprise, Republic of Ireland, expressing concern about the Environment Agency's proposed decisions to Government on the Sellafield Discharge Authorisations and the operation of the Mixed Oxide plant at Sellafield. The letter has been passed on to my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment for a joint reply on behalf of both Ministers.

Potato Seed Testing

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the dates on which he or his predecessors have exercised the power under Regulation 11(3)(c)(ii) of the Seed (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (as amended) to require the testing of potato seeds for disease, pest resistance, general characteristics and consumer quality; and if he will provide details of each such occasion and the reasons for it; [59043]

(2) for what reasons he is proposing to abolish his power to require the testing of potato seeds for disease, pest resistance, general characteristics and consumer quality under Regulation 11(3)(c)(ii) of the Seed (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (as amended). [59044]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The tests for disease and pest resistance, general characteristics and consumer quality required in regulation 11(3)(c)(ii) of the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (as amended), have been published annually in the September and/or October edition of the Plant Varieties and Seeds Gazette since 1985.

This requirement was introduced in 1985 for potatoes for the same reasons as the other requirements of regulation 11(3)—that is to encourage breeders to screen varieties before entering them in to the statutory system and to deter them from entering varieties which had little chance of addition to the National List, at a time when the trialling system was overloaded and heavily subsidised. Some limited use may have been made of such data to persuade applicants to withdraw applications with little chance of success.

A fundamental review of the National List trials system was undertaken in 1992, in consultation with plant breeders. Following this, a streamlined system of trials for Value for Cultivation and Use (VCU) was introduced. This addressed the problems arising from the volume of applications for addition to the National List. The staged reintroduction of fees for official VCU trials in 1994 and 1995 reinforced the measures already taken to streamline the system. The requirement to submit the results of tests required pursuant to regulation 11(3)(c)(ii) had no value once the pressure on the system was relieved. A requirement to provide information which serves no purpose and which is not used places an unnecessary and unjustifiable burden on applicants. I therefore propose to revoke regulation 11(3)(c)(ii) for the same reason as I propose to revoke the rest of regulation 11(3).

Thursday 12 November 1998

HOME DEPARTMENT

Senator Pinochet

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received a formal extradition request for Senator Pinochet via diplomatic channels. [59966]

Mr. Straw: I received a formal request for the extradition of Senator Pinochet from the Spanish Government on 11 November 1998. The request was submitted through diplomatic channels.

Video Recordings

Mrs. Fiona Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to make any changes to the authority responsible for making arrangements for the classification of video works under the Video Recordings Act 1984; and if he will make a statement. [59967]

Mr. Straw: I have today laid before both Houses details of my proposal to designate Lord Taylor of Warwick and Ms Janet Lewis Jones under section 4(4) of the Video Recordings Act 1984. The British Board of Film Classification (BBFC) earlier today announced their intention to appoint Lord Taylor and Janet Lewis Jones, subject to Parliamentary approval of the designation under section 4(4), as their Vice-Presidents. I propose to designate them, in that capacity, to replace Monica Sims.

I have placed in the Library a copy of my designation proposal and the text of the letters I intend to send at the time of designation to Lord Taylor and Janet Lewis Jones.

I believe that Lord Taylor and Janet Lewis Jones have the necessary understanding of the issues relating to the responsibility of a designated authority and I expect them, along with the President, Andreas Whittam Smith, to provide strong leadership for the BBFC.

Convicted Murderers

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of convicted murderers who (a) have served and been released and (b) who are in prison and expect to serve (i) less than their tariff, (ii) their tariff and (iii) a period greater than their tariff; and in the latter case, what was the median period by which their period served exceeded their tariff. [59399]

Mr. George Howarth: The readily available information relates to all life sentence prisoners, both mandatory and discretionary. No such prisoner can expect to be released on licence before the expiry of the tariff, which is the period deemed necessary to be spent in custody to meet the requirements of retribution and deterrence.

Of the 265 life sentence prisoners released between April 1996 and October 1998, three were released on tariff expiry, 90 within one year of tariff expiry and 172 more than one year after tariff expiry. The information required to calculate the median period for the latter could be obtained only by examining individual prisoners' records.

In his announcement of 9 July 1998, Official Report, columns 587–88, my right hon. Friend set out revised arrangements for the review of life sentence cases which will enable more prisoners to be released at or close to tariff expiry where it is safe to do so.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted murderers have, in the past 12 months, been set tariffs of (a) four, (b) five, (c) six, (d) seven, (e) eight, (f) nine, (g) 10, (h) 11, (i) 12, (j) 13, (k) 14, (l) 15, (m) 16, (n) 17, (o) 18, (p) 19, (q) 20 and (r) over 20 years. [59415]

Mr. George Howarth: The number of convicted murderers for whom a tariff was set for the first time in the period 1 November 1997 to 31 October 1998 (inclusive) was 315. The tariffs are broken down by length in the table.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department against how many persons action was commenced as alleged illegal immigrants in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997 and (iii) 1998; and how many persons were (a) detained as a result of such action and (b) removed as illegal immigrants, broken down by country of origin. [59201]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The numbers of persons against whom enforcement action was initiated under sections 3(5), 3(6) or 33(1) of the Immigration Act 1971 is given in tables 5.1 (Total enforcement action), 5.2 (Illegal entrants) and 5.3 (Deportation action) of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom, First Half 1998", issue 24/98. Copies of this publication are available in the Library.

Information on the numbers of enforcement removals, including those who left voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated by nationality, are given in the table.

Regrettably, reliable information on the total number of persons detained each year following enforcement action could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sussex Police

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) civilians and (b) police officers of what rank, are employed in the civil and administration support units of the Sussex police. [59461]

Mr. Boateng: I understand from the Chief Constable of Sussex that there are 185 civilian staff employed in Administration Support Units, known by the Sussex Police as Criminal Justice Support Units (CJSUs). Seven police officers of inspector rank oversee Sussex's multi-skilled units, of which the CJSUs form a part. The inspectors also have other responsibilities.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appeals to immigration adjudicators were (a) allowed, (b) dismissed and (c) withdrawn in the first and second quarters of 1998, broken down by category of appeal and nationality; and what were the figures for 1997. [58745]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information regarding the outcome of appeals to the immigration adjudicators, by category and nationality for 1997, is given in table 8.1 of the Home Office report "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1997" (CM4033), a copy of which is in the Library.

I regret that the same information for the first two quarters of 1998 is not yet available.

Firearms Compensation

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been claimed under the Firearms Compensation Scheme; and how much has been paid out to date. [59213]

Mr. Boateng: At 6 November 1998, payments totalling £61 million had been made to 49,300 claimants under the compensation schemes for large and small-calibre handguns. The value of the remaining claims cannot be determined until they have been examined in detail. I outlined the measures we are taking to speed the processing of these compensation claims in my reply to a written question from the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 28 October 1998, Official Report, columns 179–80.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Mr. J. P. Cooch of Newton Preston will receive his final payment for the confiscation of his handgun in August 1997 following his letter of 1 November. [59266]

Mr. Boateng: The Option A and B elements of the claim were paid on 16 January 1998. The Option C element of the claim, which will require individual consideration of the evidence of value provided, will be dealt with as soon as possible. I outlined the measures that we are taking to speed the processing of these compensation claims in my reply to a question from the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 28 October 1998, Official Report, columns 179–80.

Radar Detection Devices

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to restrict (a) the sale and (b) the use of devices to detect the presence of police enforcement radar at the road-side. [58831]

Mr. Boateng: Tests by Government scientists on these devices show that they are largely unreliable and ineffective and that, where they do alert drivers, it is often too late because the vehicle has already been detected by the police detection equipment. However, officials from the relevant Government Departments are considering what action might be taken to make their use illegal since they are likely to incite drivers to speed in the belief that they will avoid detection and prosecution.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions apply to the (a) sale and (b) use of devices to detect the presence of police enforcement radar at the road-side. [58830]

Mr. Boateng: None apply. The police were, from time to time, bringing prosecutions for use under section 5(b) of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 until a recent Divisional Court judgment held that police speed detection equipment does not fall within the meaning of that section.

Racism (Police Forces)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take following the statement by the Chief Constable of Manchester relating to racism in his police force. [59072]

Mr. Boateng: Individual chief officers of police are responsible for ensuring that they deliver their services fairly to all sections of society. More generally, this is a matter which is currently being considered by the inquiry which my right hon. Friend set up into matters arising from the tragic death of Stephen Lawrence and it would not be appropriate for me to comment in advance of the report of that inquiry.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to London councils on dietary and housing provisions for asylum workers. [58953]

Mr. Hutton: I have been asked to reply.

We have not issued guidance of this kind to local authorities. It is for individual local authorities to assess the need for services in each case and to decide on the kind and level of services provided.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to ensure hostels for asylum seekers are adequately funded and regulated. [58954]

Mr. Hutton: I have been asked to reply.

Special grants will be made available to local authorities in 1998–99 to reimburse them towards their costs in accommodating asylum seekers. How and where local authorities provide accommodation for asylum seekers are matters for the individual authority concerned. However, local authorities would need to be satisfied that any accommodation provided was suitable, having regard to the needs of the asylum seekers concerned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

European Business

Ms Perham: To ask the President of the Council when she will publish the Government's proposals for improving the arrangements for the Parliamentary scrutiny of European business; and if she will make a statement. [59592]

Mrs. Beckett: I have today published a White Paper entitled "The Scrutiny of European Business" (Cm 4095) and placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses. This document confirms the Government's commitment to effective scrutiny by Parliament of business across all three pillars of European Union activity, and sets out the key elements for an enhanced system. I have today also announced that a debate will be held on Tuesday 17 November to approve the procedural changes outlined in the White Paper, which the Government hope can be introduced from the beginning of the next Parliamentary Session.

Official Report

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee when he expects the CD-ROM version of the Official Report for the remainder of the 1997–98 session to be made available to hon. Members; and what steps he is taking to reduce the time between the end of a Session and the release of the corresponding CD-ROM. [59398]

Mr. Allan: The CD-ROM version of the Official Report for the period from Easter 1998 until the summer recess will become available next month. The disk containing the proceedings for the remainder of the Session is expected to be produced by March 1999. Discussions with the Stationery Office as producers of the disk are currently taking place about ways of ensuring more expeditious production of the necessary data and improved methods of data quality control, both of which may contribute to reduced delivery times.

PRIME MINISTER

Correspondence

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Prime Minister when he will reply to the letters of 26 October and 1 November from the right hon. Member for South-West Norfolk concerning the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale). [59493]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister replied on my behalf on 6 November 1998.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Film Industry

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings have taken place of (a) the Action Committee and (b) the Film Finance Forum in respect of the film industry. [58485]

Janet Anderson: The Film Policy Action Committee has met three times since it was set up in April 1998 to oversee the implementation of the recommendations made in the document "A Bigger Picture". It is due to meet again on 25 November 1998.

We expect to make an announcement regarding the establishment of the Film Finance Forum shortly.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Early Years Development

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress being made by local authorities in preparing early years development plans. [58877]

Ms Hodge: All Local Education Authorities in England have Early Years Development Plans for 1998–99, demonstrating how the maintained, private and voluntary sectors will provide a free, high quality, early education place for all four year-olds in their area whose parents want one. Plans which extend to child care will be drawn up for 1999–2000.

Home Economics

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the use of specialist teachers of home economics to prepare young people as home leaders. [58961]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home economics is not a discrete subject within the National Curriculum and is largely dealt with under the umbrella of National Curriculum design and technology. National Curriculum design and technology covers a great deal of ground, and the main need now is for generalist teachers who are able to teach across the breadth of the subject. However, many currently practising teachers have had a background in home economics training.

Likewise, home leadership is not a discrete subject within the National Curriculum, although there is a formal defined requirement for there to be a balanced and broadly based curriculum which promotes the spiritual, moral, cultural, mental and physical development of pupils and which prepares such pupils for the opportunities, responsibilities and experiences of adult life.

Secondary Schools (Parental Choice)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of parents in Doncaster Borough, when selecting a secondary school, obtain (a) their first preference, (b) their second preference and (c) neither. [59311]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not collected centrally. Doncaster local education authority has informed my Department that 97 per cent. of parents gained a place for their child at their first preference secondary school for admission in September 1998.

Trainee Teachers

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of (a) the Bursary Scheme for Student Teachers, (b) the Priority Subject Recruitment Scheme, (c) the Shortage Subject Support Scheme and (d) the Priority Subject Recruitment Scheme in Wales; and what research he has commissioned on financial support for trainee teachers. [59169]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 11 November 1998]: We keep incentive schemes under constant review. The Priority Subject Recruitment Scheme was established in 1996, building on lessons learnt from the Bursary Scheme for Student Teachers. Similarly, the new Secondary Subject Shortage Scheme, which is intended to enable trainee teachers who would otherwise not be able to do so to start or continue a course, is being monitored by the Teacher Training Agency, who administer the scheme. Evaluation plans are currently being developed for the substantial new financial incentives for maths and science students to be introduced next year, which were announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for School Standards on 27 October 1998. Regular surveys of students' income and expenditure are carried out by my Department. The Priority Subject Recruitment Initiative is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the areas of responsibility within his Department which have seen the largest real-terms increase in spending since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes. [59458]

Mr. Mudie: The areas which have seen the greatest increases in spending in real terms between 1996–97 and the plans for the current financial year are: schools capital (including the New Deal for Schools); specialist schools; local government education standard spending; and the new programmes on class size reduction; on literacy and the National Grid for Learning within the Standards Fund; and the New Deals within the Welfare to Work programme.

Disability Rights Commission

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will assess the proposals contained in the Equal Opportunities Commission report, Equality in the 21st Century, as a model for a proposed disability rights commission; and if he will make a statement. [59489]

Ms Hodge: The Government have completed their consultation exercise on the role and functions of the Disability Rights Commission and the responses are currently being considered. The proposals were based largely on the recommendations provided by the Disability Rights Task Force before Easter. The Government have recently received the Equal Opportunities Commission's wide-ranging proposals for changes to the law. These will be considered carefully and the Government will have regard to their relevance to the Disability Rights Commission. Legislation to create the Disability Rights Commission will be introduced as soon as the parliamentary timetable allows.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow parents at feeder schools to grammar schools to take part in any ballots to decide the future of the grammar schools; how he defines a feeder school; what plans he has to extend the ballot to parents of children at other primary and secondary schools; and if he will make a statement. [59389]

Ms Estelle Morris: Our proposals setting out how parents might participate in any ballot about whether grammar schools should cease to have selective admission arrangements are set out in the draft Education (Grammar School Ballots) Regulations 1998. The regulations were laid before Parliament on 21 October and are due to be debated by both Houses within the next few days.

Independent Schools

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the system of inspection for independent schools; and if he will make a statement. [59359]

Ms Estelle Morris: I announced on 29 July new arrangements for regular educational inspection, with published reports and follow-up action, both for schools in the Independent Schools Council associations and for others with pupils assisted from public funds. Educational inspection of the remaining mainstream independent schools will be covered in our forthcoming review of the statutory registration and monitoring system. Inspection of children's welfare in independent boarding schools will be improved in the ways set out in the Government's Response to the Children's Safeguards Review (Cm 4105), a copy of which is in the Library.

Regional Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) by month and (b) by region, expenditure on the New Deal for young people during 1998 up to the most recent available date. [59166]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Expenditure that has been brought to account for the delivery of the new deal for young people, up to the 30 September in total is £47.14 million. This is broken down by the seven ES regions and Scotland and Wales as follows:

Region	April	May	June	July	August	September	Total

This is in addition to the centrally managed funds for Capital and Marketing expenditure.

Children (Care Homes)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of looked-after children educated in care homes with education have been diagnosed with (a) psychiatric and (b) emotional and behaviour problems, (i) currently, and (ii) in the last three years. [59209]

Mr. Hutton: Information is collected centrally on the anonymised care histories of children who are looked after. Although this includes placement information, it does not record details of the child's medical or psychiatric history.

A national survey of the mental health of children is being conducted by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and will collect data in the Spring of 1999. The ONS are also to undertake a feasibility study in 1999 to determine whether a similar survey can be conducted focusing on "looked after" children as a separate group.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Kingston Communications

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will grant an extension to the Kingston Communications PTO licence in accordance with the recommendation of the Director General of Telecommunications. [56034]

Mrs. Roche: The Secretary of State will consider a licence application from Kingston Communications in the usual manner and advice on the applications will be sought from the Director General of Telecommunications.

Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements exist to involve his Department in the negotiations being undertaken by the Department of Health on the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme. [58325]

Mr. Battle: The Department of Health is conducting the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme negotiations on behalf of HMG. DTI and other Ministers were consulted in advance on the terms of the negotiation and will be similarly consulted prior to conclusion of the negotiations. In the interim DTI is kept informed of developments as member of an official level DH-chaired interdepartmental group.

Regional Assistance (West Midlands)

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the amount per head of population of selective assistance, and EU economic regional assistance (a) in Stoke-on-Trent and (b) in the West Midlands in each of the last three years. [58834]

Mrs. Roche: The figures in the following tables show the amount of Regional Selective Assistance grant offered and accepted in the West Midlands Assisted Area (WMAA) and the amount per head. There are no separate RSA figures for Stoke-on-Trent which is not part of the WMAA and companies based there are not therefore eligible for RSA. The amount of European Structural Funds approved in programmes available in Stoke-on-Trent—Objective 2, Rechar, Objective 3 and Objective 4 has been collected within the most appropriate recording area—North Staffordshire—and compared to that in the West Midlands Region. No ESF figures were readily available for 1996 and 1997.

[1] ESF information is available only from centrally held databases in the ESF Unit. Information has been requested but provided only for Objective 2 and Rechar on a regional basis in time for the deadlines for this exercise. Figures do not therefore contain the amounts approved in Objective 3 at all. Objective 4 was not available in the UK unit 1998.

[2] ESF regionalisation has allowed the incorporation of ESF in all programmes including Objective 4 which has been available only from 1998.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total cost of the Minister for Trade's visit to Cuba on 2 and 3 November, including air fare, hotel and subsistence for him and his accompanying officials. [58559]

Mr. Wilson: [holding answer 9 November, 1998]: The total cost of my visit to Cuba and Colombia from 2–4 November including two accompanying officials was £9,985.85.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which members of the Cuban Government the Minister for Trade met during his visit on 2 and 3 November. [58560]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 9 November 1998]: During my visit to Cuba, I met the following 19 members of the Cuban Government (listed in chronological order):

Regional Grants

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account is taken of (a) transfer pricing policies between UK subsidiaries and overseas parent companies and (b) the accounting policies of companies when determining profitability for the purposes of regional grants. [58793]

Mrs. Roche: The impact of a company's transfer pricing policies and accounting policies on profitability forecasts are taken fully into account when appraising applications for Regional Selective Assistance, particularly in relation to assessing project viability and overall economic benefit to the UK.

Post Office

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in determining the future status of the Post Office, he will ensure that the existing network of main post offices is maintained. [58799]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The terms of reference of the current review are predicated on a public sector Post Office maintaining a nationwide network of post offices, as well as continuing to provide a universal postal service with a uniform tariff structure. At the start of the review the Post Office were asked to suspend their Crown Post Office conversion programme, so that the matter could be considered in the context of the review. The issues are now being drawn together and we hope to announce our conclusions shortly.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the investment needs of the Post Office in each of the next five years. [59338]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Post Office's investment needs for the coming years are being considered in the context of the current Post Office Review.

Telecom Providers

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to require telecom providers to advertise their prices in a standard format. [59304]

Mrs. Roche: The regulation of telecoms operators in the UK is a matter for Oftel. Oftel is encouraging the fixed link operators in the UK to finance the development of a pricing comparison model to provide residential consumers with information so they can compare what their telecoms bill would be with different telecoms suppliers.

Twelve leading telecoms operators, including BT and the leading cable companies, are participating in the development process with Oftel. The intention is that when successfully developed the model will be used to publish price comparisons and that the first figures should be available next year.

The Government therefore have no plans to require Oftel to oblige operators to publish comparative pricing information as Oftel is already facilitating this with the industry's co-operation and agreement.

EU Consumer Affairs Council

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Consumer Affairs Council held on 3 November. [59968]

Dr. Howells: The Council discussed but did not reach a common position on a decision regarding the funding of Community activities in favour of consumers for 1999–2003 because of disagreement on the overall budget. The Austrian Presidency will try to reach agreement before the new year.

The Council agreed resolutions on the consumer dimensions of the information society and on the need for clear operating instructions to accompany technical consumer goods. An open debate was held on preparations Member States were making for the Euro.

There was also an exchange of views on the issues Member States would like to see in the Commission Action Plan for Consumer Policy Priorities 1999–2001. The Commission indicated they propose to issue a plan in late November.

The Commission gave brief presentations on their proposed directive on the Distance Selling of Financial Services and on their information campaign on consumer health and food safety. A list of the 'A' points approved at the Council has been placed in the Library of the House.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of the World Trade Organisation as the forum in which to conduct future negotiations on a multilateral agreement on investment; [59182]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on a multinational agreement on investment. [59257]

Mr. Wilson: It now looks most unlikely that negotiations on the multilateral agreement on investment (MAI) will resume. The Government remain committed to the development of international rules on investment. Our assessment is that the World Trade Organisation is an appropriate forum to develop such a framework, and this view is shared by our EU partners. However, any WTO negotiation must be on the basis of a fresh agenda that takes proper account of social, environmental and development issues.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Child Witnesses

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if the Lord Chancellor will issue a practice direction for trials involving child witnesses to simplify court dress and language. [58671]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are urgently considering responses to the report, "Speaking up for Justice", published on 10 June 1998, which made recommendations covering these points. The Government hope to make an announcement shortly on how they intend to take this work forward.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Waste Emissions

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish a breakdown of the content of unauthorised emissions from United Kingdom commercial aerobic/anaerobic digesters since January 1996. [56747]

Mr. Meale: Aerobic and anaerobic digestion is used throughout the United Kingdom in processes such as the treatment of sewage sludge and biodegradable, industrial, organic effluents (eg from food processing). These processes produce mainly carbon dioxide, methane and ammonia together with trace organic compounds. In the anaerobic digestion of sewage sludge, the methane is normally burnt to produce heat and power. The emissions into air from these processes are not the subject of specific controls. In consequence, it is not feasible to provide a breakdown of the content of unauthorised emissions.

The aerobic digestion (composting) of garden waste etc. is subject to waste management controls. The activity generally takes place in the open and potentially harmful emissions are controlled by operational procedures and conditions on siting.

Social Housing

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the capital investment in publicly owned and other social housing at 1994–95 prices in (a) 1979–80, (b) 1984–85, (c) 1989–90 and (d) 1994–95; and what is the amount planned for 1999–2000. [58591]

Mr. Raynsford: Figures for gross housing capital expenditure by local authorities (excluding grants to the private sector and mortgage lending) and through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme are as follows. Future levels of housing capital expenditure by local authorities reflect the programmes decided by authorities in the light of allocations from central government and the amount of their own resources (e.g. useable capital receipts, contributions from revenue) that they choose to use. The Government's spending plans for 1999–2000 include around £1.03 billion (£0.899 billion at 1994–95 prices) for local authority housing capital expenditure (other than allocations specifically for private sector grants); the corresponding figure for 1994–95 was £0.87 billion. The 1999–2000 figure includes some £570 million (£497 million at 1994–95 prices) released through the Capital Receipts Initiative, some of which authorities may choose to invest in private sector stock renovation or on housing-related regeneration.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the compliance cost assessments published by his Department since 1 May 1997. [58280]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 5 November 1998]: Compliance cost assessments published by my Department between 1 May 1997 and 31 May 1998 were listed in my answer to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) on 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 430–32.

Road Works

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the cost of dealing with the backlog of maintenance on (a) trunk roads and motorways and (b) local authority roads. [58702]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The Highways Agency estimates that some £300m per annum (1998–99 prices) is required for capital maintenance works to ensure that the condition of trunk roads does not worsen. This contrasts with the figures of £226m spent in 1996–97 and £219m in 1997–98 (Highways Agency Annual Reports). The allocation made in the Comprehensive Spending Review will be sufficient to enable us progressively to tackle the resulting backlog.

There is no central government estimate of a backlog of maintenance on local authority roads. The outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review was an increase of £46m in each of the next three financial years in the Highways Maintenance Standards Spending Assessment which forms part of the calculation of Revenue Support Grant to local authorities. Local authority spending on non-principal road maintenance is funded entirely from this grant and local taxation. It is for the authorities to determine the level of expenditure necessary on these roads.

Maintenance of local authority principal roads is supported by resources from the local transport capital settlement. This funding is given following consideration of the bids made in each authority's Transport Policies and Programme submission. I am planning to announce the settlement for 1999–2000 in December.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he proposes to ensure that bus lanes are properly enforced. [59482]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Responsibility for proper enforcement of bus lanes is a matter for the Police. Local Transport Note 1/97, Keeping Buses Moving, provides clear advice on enforcement. Decriminalised parking enforcement in London has resulted in a better level of enforcement, and is an option open to other local authorities to pursue to support the police.

My Department's role is to investigate promising methods for improving the effectiveness of enforcement and disseminating the results to the police and local authorities. In this context, London-wide implementation of the use of video camera technology for enforcement of bus lanes is in progress following successful trials. The police and local authorities elsewhere may wish to consider the possibility of such an approach in their areas.

Environmentally Safe Technologies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce measures to encourage the development of environmentally safe technologies. [58602]

Mr. Meale: My Department encourages business to manage its environmental performance responsibly, using a systematic approach and reporting publicly on performance. The Research Councils support research into new technologies. The Energy Efficiency and Environmental Technology Best Practice Programmes also support collaborative R&D projects and demonstrate the benefits of applying new technologies, and they promote existing good practice technologies and techniques. Environmental regulations, including implementation of the EC Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive, will continue to require industry to use best available techniques, taking account of the costs and benefits. The DETR/DTI Joint Environmental Markets Unit sponsors the environmental technology industry and supports export initiatives. The effectiveness of these programmes and measures is monitored and kept under review.

HGV Drivers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure the security and reliability of the smart card technology under consideration by EU transport ministers for the monitoring of HGV drivers' hours. [58712]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In agreeing the framework European Union (EU) Regulation to pave the way for the use of digital tachographs, the Government secured an amendment which requires the type-approval for the system to ensure that it is capable of resisting attempts to alter the drivers' hours data. Such tests must be carried out by experts familiar with up to date tampering techniques. The technical specification for the proposed system is now being worked up by a technical committee comprising all EU Member States. I can assure my hon. Friend that security remains our paramount concern and that we will continue to do all that we can to ensure that the proposed system is as secure as possible.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the areas of responsibility within the Department which have seen the largest real terms increase in spending since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes. [59456]

Mr. Meale: The Government took the decision on coming to office that they would retain the previous Administration's spending plans for 1997–98 and 1998–99. Only relatively minor adjustments to the Department's spending plans, therefore, will have occurred in respect of expenditure up to date.

The Government were able, however, to announce the results of their Comprehensive Spending Review in July this year and this made significant adjustments to the Department's spending plans for 1999–2000 onwards. Details are set out in the White Paper "Modernising Public Services for Britain: Investing in Reform (Cm 4011) presented to the House in July 1998.

The White Paper makes it clear that there will be a total real terms increase in the Department's spending of over 18 per cent. between 1998–99 and 2001–02. This represents an underlying real terms increase of 34 per cent. after taking account of the one-off consequences of existing rail franchise contracts, the new Public-Private Partnership for London Underground and the revised Channel Tunnel Rail Link concession. Within these totals there will be major increases for expenditure on improving energy efficiency (a real terms increase of nearly 90 per cent.), housing (nearly 50 per cent.) and regeneration (37 per cent.). There will be significant real terms increases to other programmes too.

The key expected outcomes from the Department's programmes are set out in the White Paper. Further information on targets will be included in the Public Service Agreements which the Government intend to publish shortly.

Air Quality and Transport Targets

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he intends to set local targets for (a) improving air quality, (b) improving road safety, (c) improving public transport and (d) road traffic reductions. [59497]

Ms Glenda Jackson: With regard to (a), the Air Quality Regulations 1997 set air quality objectives for seven pollutants, to be achieved by 2005. Authorities are required to review and assess air quality to determine whether these objectives are likely to be met. Where it appears that these objectives are unlikely to be achieved, the authority must declare an air quality management area.

In general, it will be for local authorities to set targets on the basis of national targets (where these exist) and advice from the Department. Local transport plans will need to include an appropriate set of targets and indicators for measuring the extent to which plan objectives are being met. The Department is today issuing draft guidance for local authorities on local transport plans. This advises on the use of targets, including those relating to relevant statutory provisions.

Transport Decisions

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he proposes to make decision-making on transport more accountable to local people. [59499]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone", has established the national policy framework to produce a transport system which is safe, efficient, clean and fair. Delivery of the policy depends, to a large extent, on action at a local level and local transport plans will be essential building blocks of the new deal for transport. The Government attach a high priority to effective public involvement, which will be a key feature of local transport plans. Our wider proposals for modernising local government will increase the accountability and responsiveness of authorities more generally. Transport users and local authority interests will also be involved in the Commission for Integrated Transport, which will be advising Ministers on decisions on transport at the national level.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has had from train operating companies concerning the renegotiation of their franchise. [59501]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Connex South Central has made formal representations for an extension of its franchise to the Franchising Director, which he refused on value for money grounds. Great North Eastern Railways has approached both the Franchising Director and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for a franchise extension and this is still being evaluated. In several other cases, additional passenger benefits have been negotiated arising, for example, from breaches of existing contracts and from changes of control.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the Government's policy on the renegotiation of rail franchises; and if he will list the criteria by which franchise extensions will be granted or put out to open tender. [59500]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are prepared to renegotiate franchises where this would provide additional benefits for passengers and represent good value for the taxpayer. Criteria will be published in due course. Following the objectives, Instructions and Guidance which we issued in November last year, the Franchising Director has already been able to negotiate additional passenger benefits arising, for example, from breaches of existing contracts and from changes of control.

Sky Glow

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he proposes to deal with the problem of sky glow from street lighting. [59498]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are no statutory controls on street lighting and we have no plans to introduce any at this stage. Street lighting is the responsibility of the highway authority concerned.

Good design, installation and maintenance practices can do much to reduce the adverse environmental impacts of street lighting. My Department has issued advice on this subject in "Road Lighting and the Environment" and, with the Countryside Commission, has published a guide "Lighting in the Countryside: Towards Good Practice". Both of these refer to ways of reducing light pollution and sky glow. Much of the advice contained in the latter document is equally applicable in urban areas.

Buses

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many bus passenger miles were travelled in the United Kingdom each year since 1979. [59496]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The following table summarises the available published data, in passenger kilometres travelled on buses and coaches, for Great Britain:

	Billion passenger kilometres
1979	56
1980	52
1981	48
1982	48

Trans European Network

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the United Kingdom's total commitment to the funding of the EU Trans European Network programme; and what is the TEN funding to which the United Kingdom will be entitled. [59495]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The United Kingdom's total contribution to EU finances is not hypothecated to individual programmes such as the transport Trans European Network (TEN) programme. In common with the other 14 Member States, the United Kingdom has no automatic entitlement to TEN funding. However, we have, as detailed in my reply of 3 November 1998, Official Report, columns 465–66, been successful in securing awards of TEN funding since the commencement of the transport TEN programme in 1995, and expect that we shall continue to be successful in securing funds for United Kingdom projects and studies in the future.

Incineration (Safety)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what trials have been carried out to determine whether cement kilns can safely burn tyres. [59479]

Mr. Meale: The Environment Agency has regulated tyre-burning trials at the following cement works: Blue Circle Cauldon, Northfleet and Westbury. Currently, Cauldon is authorised to burn chipped tyres on a continuous basis and has done so for around four years. Northfleet successfully conducted trials in late 1996 but has yet to apply for permission to burn them on a continuous basis. At Westbury three trials have taken place. Despite the earlier Westbury trials being successful in reducing overall emissions to the environment, the third trial resulted in a breach of one of the authorisation conditions. As a consequence the Agency took enforcement action and the trial was, and continues to be, suspended.

Castle Cement's Ketton works was authorised to undertake trial burning of tyres in July 1998 and it is anticipated that trials will commence in January 1999.

Historically, Blue Circle's Hope and Weardale works and Rugby Cement's Rochester works have burned tyres. Hope works is applying to burn tyres on a trial basis but Weardale and Rochester works are not currently authorised to burn tyres on either a trial or continuous basis.

The results of all the trials can be found on the public registers which are maintained for each IPC process and which can be inspected at the Agency's regional offices and the relevant local authority offices.

Waste Management

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statutory provisions govern the mixing or blending on site at cement works of (a) cemfuel and (b) other products derived from recovered solvents before being fed directly into the kiln. [59477]

Mr. Meale: As a waste recovery operation the blending or mixing of waste solvents to produce secondary liquid fuels, including 'cemfuel', for cement kilns falls subject to the provisions of the EC Framework Directive on waste (75/442 EEC as amended). The Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 are the main means by which we have implemented that Directive.

The waste management licensing system provided for by the 1994 Regulations and Part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 applies to both waste recovery and waste disposal operations. However, Regulation 16 of the 1994 Regulations excludes from licensing any recovery or disposal of waste where this is carried out under an integrated pollution control authorisation (that is an authorisation under Part I of the 1990 Act where the activity is or forms part of a process designated for central control under section 2(4) of that Act). This recognises that processes controlled under the integrated pollution control regime, such as cement kilns, should not be subject to superfluous control under the waste management licensing regime.

Under the Special Waste Regulations 1996, establishments or undertakings which carry out disposal or recovery of special waste are prohibited from mixing different categories of such waste or of mixing special waste with non-special waste unless it is permitted under a waste management licence; carried out under an authorisation under Part I of the 1990 Act; or a waste management licensing exemption applies.

Out-of-town Retail Stores

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to implement the proposal contained in the McKinsey report on granting planning permission to out of town large retail stores. [59460]

Mr. Caborn: The Government continue to be committed to the revitalisation of town centres and to the policies set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 6.

Ministerial Code

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of his Department's compliance with paragraphs 44 and 46 of the Ministerial Code in respect of the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale). [59492]

Mr. Prescott: My hon. Friend the Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) has not contravened these or any other provisions of the Ministerial Code which governs the conduct of Ministers and Parliamentary Private Secretaries.

London Transport

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what targets London Transport has been set for 1998–99. [59965]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Tables showing the targets London Transport has been set for 1998/99 are as follows. All targets relate to average performance throughout the year.

Notes:

Lifts and escalators

1. This year's targets for lift and escalator availability on the Underground are lower than last year. That reflects the short term impact of the increased levels of investment in the Underground following the announcement of an extra £365m of funding for the Underground. We will be expecting improvements in future years as the benefits of the investment programme become apparent.

Journey time metric

2. This year's targets include a new target for excess journey time. This is based on a new measure LT have introduced—the journey time metric. The journey time metric is a system developed for measuring customers overall journey time on the network. It breaks down a journey into its component parts (ticket purchase time, access time to platforms, platform waiting time etc.) and measures them in a way which reflects customer's perceived time rather than actual time. This is done by the application of weightings. For example, people dislike waiting for trains, therefore a weight of 2 is applied to the actual wait time (doubling the figure for time spent waiting on platforms).

3. L.T. use this measure to build up a scheduled journey time, reflecting the amount of time a journey should take in free flow conditions, when there is no queueing, every train runs precisely to timetable, and there is no disruption. The excess journey time is then calculated by observing the difference between the scheduled journey time and the observed journey time. Both measures have the relevant weighting applied, and the difference between them will be the excess journey time.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gibraltar

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what items will be on the agenda for his next meeting with the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs under the provisions of the Brussels Agreement on Gibraltar. [58817]

Ms Quin: We have not yet settled with the Spanish authorities the details of the next Brussels Process meeting.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has evaluated for the future sovereignty of Gibraltar. [58815]

Ms Quin: We have said we are studying the proposals Spain made at the Brussels Process meeting last December concerning the future status of Gibraltar and that we will reply in due course. We have also reaffirmed that we stand firmly by the commitment in the 1969 Constitution that there can be no change in sovereignty over Gibraltar without the consent of the people of Gibraltar.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has for improving the status of Gibraltar within the European Union. [58816]

Ms Quin: Gibraltar's status within the European Union is based on Article 227(4) of the Treaty of Rome which provides for the application of that treaty to

"the European territories for whose external relations a Member State is responsible".

However, in view of Gibraltar's particular geographical and economic circumstances, it was agreed at the time of the UK's accession in 1973 that Gibraltar would be excluded from three areas of Community policy. These are the Community Customs Territory, which takes Gibraltar out of the Common Commercial Policy as far as trade in goods is concerned, the obligation to impose a Value Added Tax, and the Common Agricultural and Fisheries policies. There are no plans to change this status.

Nuclear Disarmament

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy on the establishment of an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament (a) with and (b) without a negotiating mandate at the Conference on Disarmament; and if he will make a statement. [59148]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We believe that the Conference on Disarmament should focus on negotiating Fissile Material Cut-off, which appears to be the maximum extent of consensus at present achievable, rather than attempting to negotiate a convention on nuclear disarmament at this time. We will nonetheless play a full part in consultations as one of the CD Presidential Troika to examine further approaches to other aspects of nuclear disarmament.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's position towards the UN resolution, Towards a Nuclear Weapons Free World: the need for a New Agenda, currently under consideration by the UN First Committee on Disarmament and International Security. [59147]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We oppose the current draft of this resolution, which we have considered carefully, since it is inconsistent with maintaining a credible nuclear deterrent. We remain ready to support measures that will make a practical contribution to advancing nuclear disarmament.

Ghazanfer Ali

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the detention without trial in Mirpur of Ghazanfer Ali. [59093]

Mr. Fatchett: I raised Mr. Ali's case with Sultan Mahmood Chaudhry of "Azad" Kashmir on 19 May and made clear our concern that he should receive a speedy and fair trial. On 31 October Mr. Ali was acquitted on one charge of murder and ordered by the Judge to pay Rupees 325,000 in respect of another. He has now been released.

George Atkinson

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he has taken consequent upon the decision adopted by the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights on 17 September regarding the detention of George Atkinson in Dubai. [58874]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Consul General in Dubai delivered a Note Verbale to the Dubai Government on 10 November asking, in view of the decision of the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, if it will release George Atkinson from detention.

Regional and Minority Languages

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which (a) regional languages and (b) minority languages in the United Kingdom will be selected in accordance with the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. [59288]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central, (Mr. Fatchett), on 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 350. The Charter does not distinguish between regional languages and minority languages.

Compensation Claims

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the latest year for which figures are available. [59056]

Mr. Fatchett: We settled a total of five such claims made by our employees or former employees in 1997. The costs were £8,053.43 for three personal injury claims and £17,930.25 for two claims relating to employment protection.

There were no claims in respect of the public.

Bridges into the Future

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Bridges into the Future strategy. [58823]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have implemented the recommendations outlined in "Bridges into the Future" through a series of initiatives including a Recruitment Fair and an Open Day aimed specifically at members of minority ethnic communities, targeted recruitment campaigns, a series of Community Fora, the introduction of a mentoring scheme and training for staff on managing diversity.

A copy of two reports which outline the progress achieved so far in the implementation of "Bridges into the Future" have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Visas (India)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the average time taken for the processing of (a) marriage visas and (b) settlement visas at (i) Bombay and (ii) Delhi. [58824]

Mr. Fatchett: The average waiting time for an interview (over the last 10 months) for consideration of (a) marriage and (b) settlement visa applications, in Bombay and new Delhi is as follows:

	Bombay	New Delhi
Marriage (applications from fiance(e)s) visas	10 weeks	24 weeks
Settlement visas:
Dependent relatives over 65 and compassionate cases	Same day	Same day
Spouses and other categories	19 weeks	12 weeks

Successful applicants receive their visa once a medical examination, which normally takes between 7 and 10 working days to arrange, has been completed.

Visitors' Visas

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to issue new guidance for visitors' visas. [59074]

Mr. Fatchett: Guidance to Entry Clearance Officers on assessing applications for visitors visas is contained in the entry clearance volume of Diplomatic Service Procedure. It is continuously reviewed and updated as necessary. We intend to publish a disclosable version of this guidance to ECOs as soon as is practicable.

Guidance to applicants is contained in an information leaflet. Revisions are undertaken when necessary. The most recent version was issued in August 1998.

Overseas Territories

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation period will follow the publication of the White Paper on Overseas Territories. [59453]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: A date has not yet been set to enact the necessary legislation but the Government will ensure that there is adequate time for all interested parties to present their views before legislation is proposed.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to convene a conference of chief ministers and members of legislatures of overseas territories. [59437]

Mr. Fatchett: In order to create a stronger, more structured dialogue between Britain and the Overseas Territories we will convene an annual Overseas Territories Council, which will provide a forum for the Chief Ministers and Councillors to raise their concerns directly with Ministers. The first Council will be held before next year's Commonwealth Head of Government meeting.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 414, relating to Executive Council meetings on St. Helena if he will give the names of those attending the meeting on 16 June; if they were voting or non-voting members; if proxy members were asked to attend; and how the quorum was obtained. [59452]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The following Members of Executive Council attended the meeting held on 16 June:

The Chief Secretary (Mr. Michael Clancy)

The Acting Financial Secretary (Mr. Desmond Wade)

The Attorney General (Mr. Kurt de Freitas, OBE)

The Hon. Eric W. George

The Hon. Terrance F. Richards.

All, except for the Attorney General, may vote in Executive Council. There is no provision in the Constitution for proxies. Section 8(2) of the St. Helena Constitution Order, 1989 provides that no business except that of adjournment shall be transacted by the Executive Council if objection is taken by any Member present that there are less than five members present (excluding any member presiding in the absence of the Governor). A quorum can thus effectively be considered as five.

Russia

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the UK has been asked to render to the Russian Government in tracing illegal currency transfers out of Russia. [59275]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 November 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

Earlier this year, the National Criminal Intelligence Service received a request from the Russian Interior Ministry for assistance in tracing assets suspected of being linked to organised crime. The request was made in accordance with a Memorandum of Understanding concluded during a visit to London on 18 June 1998 by the Russian Interior Minister, Sergei Stepashin.

European Youth Parliament

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial support the European Youth Parliament has received from (a) United Kingdom public funds and (b) the EU; and if he will (i) list and (ii) place in the Library the documentation his Department has received from the parliament since 1 May 1997. [58[illegible]2]

Mr. Mudie: I have been asked to reply.

The European Youth Parliament receives no direct Government funding. Funding by the EU is a matter for the European Commission. The Department has no record of receiving any documentation from the European Youth Parliament since 1 May 1997.

WALES

Housing Renovation Grants

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total allocation of funding for housing renovation grants made available to each district council and unitary authority in Wales for each of the years 1990 to 1998; and what was the proportion of the allocation spent in each case. [58348]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Transfer of Functions Order

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to publish the draft of the National Assembly for Wales Transfer of Functions Order. [59873]

Mr. Michael: I am pleased to announce that I have today placed in the Vote Office and the Library of the House the final draft of the Assembly Transfer of Functions Order. I am simultaneously issuing it for public consultation.

The Order transfers virtually all of my functions to the National Assembly for Wales. It lists all the Acts of Parliament under which I currently exercise functions, and transfers those functions to the Assembly. Accompanying the Order is a Technical Guide which details all of the several thousand functions which we will transfer in this way. Copies of the Technical Guide are also in the Vote Office and the Library.

My functions are numerous and wide-ranging, and this means that the Transfer Order and Technical Guide are weighty documents. This is a reflection of the fact that the Assembly will in turn have many important powers; moreover, specifying its functions in this way minimises the risk of future legal challenges as to its vires. I am, though, anxious that there should be widespread understanding about what the Assembly will be able to do. I am therefore also publishing today a short lay person's guide to the Assembly's powers, entitled "Making the Difference in Wales". Copies are, again, in the Vote Office and the Library.

I have been committed from the outset to full transparency and openness in setting up the Assembly. That is why I am issuing this draft and allowing a period of three months for public consultation and comment. During this period, I should be happy to consider any suggestions, whether of a general or detailed nature, which hon. Members might have: the text as it stands is without prejudice to any such suggestions. The Order is, of course, not capable of amendment once it is laid in draft before the House.

My intention is to lay the Order in its agreed form in the new year, and, if the House and the other place approves, to request that it be made before the Easter recess. That should allow the campaign for the first Assembly elections next year to be conducted on the basis of certainty about the extent of the Assembly's powers.

Revenue Support Grant

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to make adjustments to the distribution of revenue support grant for 1998–99 to local authorities in Wales. [59874]

Mr. Michael: An unfortunate error in the data used to determine individual authorities' standard spending assessments has been discovered. The effect is that one authority's revenue support grant entitlement should have been about £171,000 lower than originally calculated, and the grant for the other 21 authorities should have been a total of about £171,000 more. Whilst this represents a very small proportion of the revenue settlement this year, I consider it right and fair to correct the position through an amending report under section 84A of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. I intend that the report should be debated by the House next year; at the same time as the local government finance report for 1999–2000.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the areas of responsibility within his Office which have seen the largest real terms increase in spending since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes. [59457]

Mr. Michael: In Wales, in line with our Manifesto commitment, we have ensured that health and education have received the largest real terms increases in spending since we took office.

For health, since July 1997, we have added more than £100 million in cash to the inherited plans and this has resulted in easing of pressures on the health and social care system last winter—and we have just announced more cash to provide similar support this coming winter; hospital activity has increased by 4 per cent.; training has continued for over 1,800 doctors and 2,000 nurses; additional staff have been made available for cancer services and there is a package of measures to tackle prescription fraud. It is also expected that in-patient and day-case waiting lists will be reduced to below the inherited level.

For education, we have increased the previous Administration's spending plans by about £80 million. This has enabled us to start reducing infant class sizes, to begin the long process of improving the capital stock so neglected over the past few years, and to provide local authorities with funding for schools. We have also been able to begin to redress the underfunding of the Further Education sector in Wales, so that it can play its vital role in our lifelong learning strategy.

Flooding

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who authorised the release of water from the Elan Dams into the River Elan on the night of (a) 22 October and (b) 28 October; what quantity of water was released, and over what period of time. [59396]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Only the normal compensation discharge rate of 68 megalitres per day, together with a maximum 32 megalitres per day discharge for power generation, was released from the Elan Dams into the River Elan at the times specified. These releases were authorised by the Birmingham Corporation Water Act 1892 as amended by subsequent abstraction licences. Significantly larger quantities of water were spilling over the dams. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with data on the combined quantities and will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish hydrological hourly data from the Environment Agency on the (a) height and (b) velocity of flood water at points in the Brecon and Radnorshire constituency on the River Usk for the inclusive period 6pm on 22 October to 8am on 23 October; [59363]

(2) if he will publish hydrological data held by the Environment Agency giving the height and velocity of flood water at points in the Brecon and Radnorshire constituency on the River Wye from 6pm until 8am inclusive at hourly intervals on (a) 22 to 23 October and (b) 28 to 29 October. [59397]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Data are available from the Environment Agency on heights and flows in the Rivers Wye and Usk and their tributaries in the Brecon and Radnor constituency. I will send data covering the periods requested to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what quantity of water was released over what period of time from the Crai reservoir into a tributary of the River Usk on the night of Thursday 22 October; and who authorised the release. [59364]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Only the normal compensation discharge rate of just under 7 megalitres per day was released from the Crai Reservoir into the River Crai at the time specified. This is the statutory compensation flow rate authorised under the abstraction license. Significantly quantities of water were spilling over the reservoir dam. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with data on the combined quantities and will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

SCOTLAND

Home Energy Conservation Act

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to issue guidelines on the implications of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 in Scotland; and if he will place copies in the Library. [59321]

Mr. Macdonald: Detailed guidance for local authorities on the implications of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 was set out in the Scottish Office Development Department Circular 40/1996. It was issued on 27 November 1996 shortly before the Act came into effect in Scotland. Copies have been placed in the Library. Guidance on best practice is to be issued and copies will also be placed in the Library.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the areas of responsibility within his Office which have seen the largest real terms increase in spending since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes. [59455]

Mr. Dewar: Since 1 May 1997, I have concentrated on the Government's priority areas in Scotland of health, education and devolution. In addition, money has been found for debt redemption by Scottish Homes.

Scottish Beef

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what strategy he proposes to assist Scottish beef exporters re-gain market share once the ban on United Kingdom beef exports is lifted; and what discussions he has had with (a) the SNFU, (b) Scottish Enterprise and (c) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regarding such initiatives. [59328]

Mr. Macdonald: Recognising the importance of beef production to Scotland, we are working with the key sectors of the industry to help them prepare for re-entry to the export market as soon as exports can resume. This involves preparations for the operation of the Date-Based Export Scheme and investigation of potential markets for the export of beef and beef products. Scottish Office officials have been maintaining close contact with the organisations mentioned by the hon. Member and other bodies.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide financial assistance to Scottish beef exporters for the promotion of Scottish beef in Europe following the lifting of the ban on United Kingdom beef exports. [59327]

Mr. Macdonald: Our top priority is the lifting of the beef export ban. The key to regaining European markets will be the supply of a premium product supported by rigorous quality assurance schemes at every stage of the production and marketing chain. The Government are already assisting the industry to ensure this is in place. Through their Scotch Beef Marketing and Quality Assurance Initiative, more than £4 million has been made available to the industry towards the establishment of these Schemes and development of the brand "Specially Selected Scotch Beef".

The Government have also assisted the industry in commissioning a study to assess the opportunities for profitable sales of Scotch beef once the export ban is lifted.

River Habitats

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what proposals he has to increase the funding of habitat improvement works in Scottish river systems; what funds he currently makes available to fishery boards for such improvement works; and what the equivalent amounts have been for each of the last five years; [59329]

(2) if he will list his powers regarding habitat improvement works in Scottish river systems; and what proposals he has to alter these powers. [59330]

Mr. Macdonald: Responsibility for fisheries management in rivers rests with riparian owners and, where appropriate, District Salmon Fishery Boards. Scottish Natural Heritage also has certain responsibilities, particularly in the light of the Habitats Directive.

Payments for measures to improve riparian habitats are available to agricultural enterprises under the Environmentally Sensitive Areas and Countryside Premium Schemes which are administered by The Scottish Office.

Grants are also available from SNH for habitat improvement works in Scottish rivers. District Salmon Fishery Boards may participate in such works. Information on the sums Boards may have received is not available centrally.

My right hon. Friend has no current proposal to alter his powers.

Salmon

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to reduce angling in Scottish salmon rivers; and what estimates he has made of catch levels in Scottish rivers in each of the past five years; [59324]

(2) what representations he has received on proposals to reduce commercial salmon netting in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [59325]

Mr. Macdonald: Reported catches of salmon during 1997 were the lowest on record. This situation was broadly reflected throughout the range of the species. This prompted the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea to advise the North Atlantic Salmon Conservation Organisation that extreme caution should be exercised in the exploitation of stocks, both by angling and nets, particularly early running fish.

On 9 October, my noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for fisheries at the Scottish Office, Lord Sewel, met representatives of District Salmon Fishery Boards, who are charged with statutory responsibility for managing wild stocks, and urged on them the need to take appropriate action in the light of the advice received. Information on catches in Scottish rivers has been collected since 1952 and published in the statistical bulletins, copies of which have been placed in the House Library.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what evidence he has assessed of the effects of seal predation of Scottish salmon stocks; and what measures he proposes to take. [59326]

Mr. Macdonald: A recent study based on direct observation of seals and their impact on salmon in the rivers Dee and Don was conducted by Aberdeen University and the Marine Laboratory in Aberdeen. A new project studying the interaction between the species is about to start on the River Conon. These studies, together with the 1998 report from the Special Committee on Seals of the Natural Environment Research Council, which is expected shortly, will inform future decisions about seal management.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades Commission

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has in respect of appointments to the Parades Commission. [59872]

Marjorie Mowlam: I am pleased to announce that Alistair Graham has accepted my invitation to extend his term as chairman of the Parades Commission for Northern Ireland for a further period of 1 year, until 18 February 2000; and that Frank Guckian and David Hewitt have agreed to continue as members until the same date.

Schools (Enrolment)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the enrolment (a) is this year and (b) was five years ago for each primary, secondary and grammar school in the Strangford constituency on the basis of the most recent constituency boundaries. [59355]

Mr. McFall: The enrolment figures for 1998/99 are not yet available.

DEFENCE

Ballistic Missiles

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 October 1998, Official Report, column 112, if he will list the areas of common interest the United Kingdom has with the United States of America in connection with ballistic missile defence research; and if he will give the establishments at which the research is undertaken. [58206]

Mr. George Robertson: The areas of common interest the UK has with the USA in connection with ballistic missile research are many, the most significant being, performance of radars and other sensors, the guidance of interceptors, understanding the characteristics of ballistic missiles, the effective interception of ballistic missile warheads, and operating in coalition with Allies in air defence. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency leads the programmes, working in close partnership with UK industry.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations he has carried out during his review of ballistic missile attack risks to the United Kingdom; and when he plans to produce his report. [57916]

Mr. George Robertson: Britain's approach to Ballistic Missile Defence was considered as part of the Strategic Defence Review. Supporting Essay 5, published as part of our report on the Strategic Defence Review, set out our conclusion that the risk to Britain from the ballistic missiles of nations of concern was many years off. This conclusion was based on a careful review and assessment of the intelligence information available to the Ministry of Defence from a variety of sources. As indicated in the Essay, we are continuing to monitor the position, and remain in close touch with our Allies.

Separately, we have undertaken a detailed review of other capabilities required to maintain a coherent national defence response to the risks posed by nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, also referred to in the discussion of defence responses to proliferation in Supporting Essay 5. The conclusions of this review will be given to the House shortly.

Al-Yamamah Arms Deal

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Armscor or Allivane International Ltd. were involved in the Al-Yamamah arms deal. [59048]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 11 November 1998]: The MOD is unaware of any involvement in the Al-Yamamah programme, either now or in the past, by the two companies named.

Information Warfare Incidents

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his letter to my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Mrs. Lait) about the penetration of key protection points and registration of such information warfare incidents on the Government-wide unified incident reporting and alert scheme. [59430]

Mr. Spellar: A copy of my letter is being placed in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Visit (Turkey)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last made an official visit to Turkey; and if he will list those people with whom he held discussions on his visit. [58593]

Mr. George Robertson: I visited Turkey between 14 and 16 September 1998 at the invitation of the Turkish Defence Minister, with whom I held discussions. I also made office calls on the Turkish Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Trials (Defendants' Health)

31. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Attorney-General in how many cases since 1990 he and his predecessors have decided not to proceed with (a) a prosecution and (b) a retrial because of the alleged adverse impact of a trial on the health of the defendant. [58036]

The Attorney-General: Significant ill-health on the part of an alleged offender may be a relevant factor to be considered by a prosecuting authority in deciding whether to institute or continue criminal proceedings in a particular case. Statistics are not maintained as to the number of occasions ill-health has been a factor in cases considered by the Law Officers.

Extradition

34. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Attorney-General how many staff in the Crown Prosecution Service deal with extradition cases. [58039]

The Solicitor-General: There are currently 9 lawyers and 16 caseworkers in the branch of Central Casework whose work includes handling requests from overseas jurisdictions for the extradition of alleged offenders from the UK. They also provide the necessary specialist input for extradition requests generated by CPS branches throughout England and Wales.

Criminal Law

35. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Attorney-General what recent representations he has received on improving the enforcement of the criminal law. [58040]

The Solicitor-General: My department frequently receives suggestions on improving the enforcement of the criminal law. The Government recognise the importance of this and have embarked upon a comprehensive programme, which is the joint responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor and myself, for modernising the criminal justice system and ensuring that it is planned and managed in a more coherent and coordinated way. The Government's aim is to ensure that the system dispenses criminal justice fairly, effectively, speedily and efficiently, increasing people's confidence in the courts and the prosecution process, and contributing to our objective of reducing crime and fear of crime.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General what proposals he has for reviewing the enforcement of (a) the criminal law and (b) international law in the United Kingdom. [58037]

The Attorney-General: Responsibility for the enforcement of the criminal law is shared between a number of agencies in the criminal justice system. I have a responsibility for the prosecution process and in particular the work of the Crown Prosecution Service and Serious Fraud Office. Those two prosecuting agencies apply the twin tests set out in the Code for Crown Prosecutors to decide whether or not individual cases should be prosecuted. Adequate measures are in place to ensure that the United Kingdom's international obligations are given full effect in domestic law, when that is necessary.

Former Secretary of State for Wales

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about the approach made by Mr. Alan Steele of the Treasury Solicitor's Department to The Sun newspaper about the resignation of the former Secretary of State for Wales. [59971]

The Attorney-General: There is no person called Alan Steele working in the Treasury Solicitor's Department (or indeed known to the TSD) and no member of that Department made any telephone call to The Sun relating to the resignation of the former Secretary of State for Wales.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the progress of his plans to reorganise the Crown Prosecution Service. [58033]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 540, to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Jones).

SOCIAL SECURITY

Personal Injury

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the last year for which figures are available. [59057]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Total cost to public funds of compensation paid by this Department, excluding the Child Support Agency, in the Financial Year 1997–98 in respect of personal injury, and employment protection

Personal injury	606,817.74
Compensation awarded to employees or ex-employees of the Department by either the Civil Service Appeal Board or by Employment Tribunal	265,718.59

Note:
The Child Support Agency do not keep statistics on these figures separately, but the total cost to that Agency, in respect of personal injury and compensation awarded for the year 1997–98, was £35,400.

Agents

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to allow people who are physically incapacitated to appoint agents to sign pension slips on their behalf without a power of attorney; what assessment he has made of the security of the present arrangements for marking such slips; and if he will make a statement. [59395]

Mr. Denham: A person who is physically disabled has the right to authorise an agent to collect their benefit or pension from the post office. A power of attorney is not needed. We have no plans to change these arrangements.

Where the agent arrangement is temporary the benefit claimant signs a declaration on the back of the order-book slip authorising payment to the agent. For permanent arrangements the claimant must ask the Benefits Agency to issue an agency card which authorises the agent to collect payment.

A claimant has the right to revoke or change an agent nomination at any time. If the claimant becomes no longer mentally capable of dealing with their own affairs, the Secretary of State has the power to appoint a suitable person, normally the spouse or a close friend or relative of the claimant to act on their behalf in all matters to do with the benefit claim including receipt of the benefit payment. The Secretary of State can revoke such an arrangement if the arrangement is not working satisfactorily.

We are currently reviewing the procedures, guidance and information materials relating to appointeeships.

Welfare Reform

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 28 October 1998, Official Report, column 173, on losses resulting from welfare reform, if he will indicate where, in the three documents cited, the definition of loss which underlies his principle that no current recipient shall face a loss as a result of welfare reform occurs. [59432]

Mr. Denham: The information can be found in Chapter One, paragraph 6 and Chapter Two, paragraphs 29 and 35 of the document "A new contract for welfare: Support for Disabled People" (Cm 4103).

All-work Tests

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many all work tests expressed as year on year figures from 1995 to 1998 have been (a) taken and (b) failed, expressed as a percentage of the total in (i) each London borough, (ii) each London parliamentary constituency and (iii) nationally. [59357]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

All work tests carried out in Great Britain

	Total all work tests carried out[1]	Disallowances following all work test	Percentage disallowed

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans his Department has for the reform of industrial injuries disablement benefit; and if he will make a statement. [59488]

Mr. Timms: The Welfare Reform Programme is looking widely at all current benefit provision. In the case of Industrial Injuries no decisions have yet been taken. We will make an announcement in due course.

Pensioners

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 26 October 1998, Official Report, columns 25–26, concerning pensioner incomes, if he will (a) provide corresponding figures on pensioner incomes based on his Department's Family Resources Survey for each year for which that survey has been undertaken, (b) make a statement on the differences between the results of the FRS analysis and those provided in his answer of 26 October, (c) estimate the number of pensioners in each age, sex and marital status category in each year for which the pensioner income series has been conducted and (d) estimate the 95 per cent. confidence interval for each of his income estimates based on the FES and the FRS in each category in each year. [57223]

Mr. Denham: [holding answer 29 October 1998]: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables. The estimates are subject to a high degree of statistical variability. It is therefore recommended that, as for all estimates based on Pensioners' Income Series data sets, direct year on year comparisons be avoided.

Notes:

1. All amounts are in £s per week at July 1995 prices. They are rounded to the nearest £1, although estimates are not necessarily accurate to this level.
2. Estimates are for pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined as a single (non-cohabiting) person over State Pension Age (65 years or above for men and 60 year or above for women), or a couple (married or cohabiting) where the man, defined as the head, is over State Pension Age. Estimates for pensioner couples are broken down by the age of the man.
3. Estimates marked 'n/a' are not applicable. Single men and couples are only defined as Pensioner Units if the man is aged 65 years or above.
4. Means-tested benefits are defined as Income Support, Family Credit, Council Tax Benefit and Housing Benefit.
5. Levels of means-tested benefit may be particularly affected by mis-reporting as receipt of State Retirement Pension and receipt of Income Support are often confused in both the Family Expenditure Survey (FES) and the Family Resources Survey (FRS).
6. FRS was undertaken 1993–94 but it was not used to create a Pensioners' Incomes Series dataset. Households Below Average Income and Pensioners' Incomes Series datasets were not created from the 1993–94 FRS as DSS analysts had reservations as to the quality of the income data.

Differences occur between the results of the FRS analysis and those provided in my Answer on Monday 26 October 1998, Official Report, columns 25–26 (based on FES) for a number of reasons. Results from the two surveys are based on the responses of two different groups of people sampled from the population. The FRS sample is selected from households in Great Britain, while the FES covers the United Kingdom. Patterns of response among those selected in each sample may differ. Further differences occur in the methods of data collection. A comparative analysis of general results based on the two surveys can be found in Appendix 9 of "Households Below Average Income" (HBAI) 1979–1995–96 and also in HBAI 1979–1996–7.

4. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000 Pensioner Units
5. Estimates are not controlled to independent population estimates by the age bands used.

95 per cent. confidence intervals for these estimates are not currently available. In some cases response variations may be a greater source of uncertainty than sampling error. It is not possible to produce confidence intervals for response variations.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of (a) unemployed people, (b) carers, (c) sick or disabled people, (d) employees and (e) other adults, who are not members of either an occupational pension or a personal pension scheme. [57149]

Mr. Denham: [holding answer 29 October 1998]: Information drawn from the 1996–97 Family Resources Survey (FRS) is in the table.

Number of people who are not members of an occupational or personal pension

	Number
Unemployed	1,600,000
Carers	500,000
Sick and Disabled	1,500,000
Employees (inc self-employed)	7,200,000
Other Adults	2,200,000

Notes:

1. All employees earning above the Lower Earnings Limit who are not contracted out into an occupational pension scheme or an appropriate personal pension will be members of the state earnings related pension scheme. For example, 4.6 million of the employees group in the Table are estimated to be accruing SERPS rights at the time of the FRS interview. A large number of those in the other groups will have accrued SERPS rights from previous employment. Those with contracted-in occupational or personal pensions (and therefore not shown in the Table above) will also be accruing SERPS rights. In total, in 1995–96, it is estimated that 7.5 million individuals accrued rights to a SERPS pension (1 per cent. sample of NIRS records) at some point during the year.
2. International Labour Organisation (ILO) definitions of employment (including self-employment), unemployment and sick and disabled have been used, and the analysis excludes those defined by the ILO as retired or students.
3. Membership is assumed to include those who have retained rights in schemes to which they are on longer actively contributing, and a small number who are drawing occupational or personal pensions.
4. The estimates are based on sample counts which have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which control for region, council tax band, and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and variability in non-response.
5. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100,000.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people will lose eligibility for the modernised incapacity benefit for each of the first five years after the reform is introduced. [58304]

Mr. Timms: Information is not available in the form requested. Benefit will still be payable in most cases affected by the proposal in the consultation document "A New Contract for Welfare: Support for Disabled People" to take some account of occupational and personal pensions above £50 a week. The estimated reduction in the number of people on Incapacity Benefit as a result of the proposed change to the National Insurance contribution conditions is 30,000 in year one, 50,000 in year two, 65,000 in year three and 170,000 in the long run. Changes to the rules on entitlement to Incapacity Benefit will apply to new claims only.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who are currently waiting to attend an incapacity benefit appeal tribunal in each administrative area have been waiting (a) one month, (b) two months and (c) six months or over. [58805]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Lone Parents

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what help is available with childcare costs for lone parents in the first month after returning to work. [58880]

Angela Eagle: Financial help with childcare charges is available to working lone parents through the in-work benefits: Family Credit; Disability Working Allowance; Housing Benefit; and Council Tax Benefit.

Lone parents can claim help towards up to £60 a week if they pay for childcare for one child, and up to £100 a week if they pay for two or more children. The care must be of a recognised standard and in respect of children of the qualifying age (from birth up to the September following their 12th birthday).

The Working Families Tax Credit and the Disabled Persons Tax Credit will replace Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance in October 1999. These new schemes will include a childcare tax credit which builds on existing financial help. Lone parents will be able to claim help towards up to £100 a week if they pay for childcare for one child, and up to £150 a week if they pay for two or more children. The qualifying age for children will be increased to cover all children up to age 14. In the case of children who are disabled and who have greater needs, until the school leaving age of 16.

Vaccine Damage

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many representations he has received on the subject of children damaged by vaccines; [58752]

(2) if the proposals under consideration for changes to the Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme include (a) paying compensation to those damaged by vaccines, (b) removing the six year deadline for applications and (c) introducing a sliding scale of compensation payments. [58753]

Mr. Timms: There have been numerous representations received about the Vaccine Damage Scheme. A presentation was made to the Disability Benefits Forum by the Vaccine Victims Support Group on 23 September 1998. I met with Members of the All Party Group on Vaccine Damage on 5 November 1998. Consideration is still being given to this complex and sensitive issue. There are a number of options currently being discussed and an announcement will be made in due course.

TREASURY

Self-assessment Returns

Dr. Vis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the accuracy rate of the self-assessment returns generated by computer programs; and what steps he has taken to identify design faults in specific programs. [58686]

Dawn Primarolo: Self Assessment paper returns are processed in the same way whether the form is computer generated or Revenue issued. The Inland Revenue does not record whether a rejected paper return was computer generated.

Around 10 per cent. of electronically lodged returns were initially rejected for the 1996–97 tax year. The reason for rejection would be notified to the taxpayer or their agent. Problems can arise because of the inaccurate entry of data, faults in the software, or problems with the Inland Revenue's own system. Where there is a recurrent problem it is investigated; if it relates to the software the provider is notified.

Dr. Vis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people complete their self-assessment returns using a computer program (a) in total and (b) broken down by the computer program used. [58685]

Dawn Primarolo: For the 1996–97 tax year the number of people completing their self-assessment tax returns using a computer programme was almost 505,000.

Just under 28,000 of these used the Inland Revenue's Electronic Version of the Return (EVR) with just over 477,000 using commercial packages.

The Inland Revenue does not hold figures for the different commercial products used to produce the returns.

Dr. Vis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the Inland Revenue's computer program for self-assessment returns for the next accounting year relative to those available from the private sector. [58687]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue's Electronic Version of the Return (EVR) is intended to assist a taxpayer whose main income stems from employment, pensions or investments to produce a tax return and tax calculation printout. EVR is distributed free of charge to any taxpayer and is not a competitor for commercial packages, many of which are intended to assist in the completion of tax returns; therefore no direct comparison has been made.

Inland Revenue (Preferential Debts)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the recovered revenue for the last three tax years arising from priority creditorship in respect of (a) income tax, (b) corporation tax and (c) VAT. [59162]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The only debts for which the Inland Revenue is preferential creditor are those relating to income tax payable under Pay As You Earn and under the subcontractors deduction scheme. Amounts of preferential debt recovered by the Inland Revenue's local offices—mainly in relation to the smaller cases—are not separately identifiable, but for the larger cases dealt with centrally by the Inland Revenue's Enforcement Office, the amounts recovered in respect of preferential debts for the last three years are:

1995–96: £32 million

1996–97: £39 million

1997–98: £31 million.

Amounts of VAT which Customs and Excise have recovered as preferential creditor for the last three years are:

1995–96: £32 million

1996–97: £48.5 million

1997–98: £51 million.

Share Buybacks (Pensions)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total cost to pension funds of the recoup of tax credits by the Inland Revenue paid in relation to share buybacks between September 1994 and October 1996. [59272]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The Inland Revenue is making inquiries into a number of persons, including pension funds, to see whether they received an abnormal dividend in circumstances such that the tax credit paid is recoverable by the Revenue. There is no estimate of how much tax will be recovered from pension funds following these inquiries.

GDP Growth

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons he expects GDP growth in the UK to be lower in 1999 than in 1998; if he will quantify the causes of this growth slowdown by expenditure component of GDP; and if he will make a statement. [59422]

Ms Hewitt: Full details of the Treasury's new forecasts were set out in the Pre-Budget Report, published on 3 November.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates for the path of future United Kingdom short-term interest rates underlay the forecasts for future rates of United Kingdom GDP growth contained in the Pre-Budget report of November 1998 (Cm. 4076); and if he will make a statement. [59394]

Ms Hewitt: In line with the practice of previous Governments, the interest rate path underlying the economic forecasts contained in the Pre-Budget Report is not published.

Public Sector Investment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total level of net public sector investment in real terms in 1997–98 prices for the years (a) 1992–93 to 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 to 2001–2002; and if he will make a statement. [59474]

Mr. Byers: Cash figures for public sector net investment can be found in Table PSAT4 in the First Release (Public sector accounts 2nd quarter 1998) published by the ONS on 24 September 1998. Figures for the GDP deflator are kept in the House of Commons Library.

The series for 1997–98 to 2001–02 can be derived from the cash figures given in Table B12 and the projections of the GDP deflator given in Table B5 of the November 1998 Pre-Budget Report. Net public investment will double, as a share of national income, over the next three years. This will help to provide infrastructure essential to a modern, dynamic economy.

Economic Forecasts

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on which date he expects to publish the next Her Majesty's Treasury Survey of the private sector consensus of economic forecasts; and if he will make a statement. [59419]

Ms Hewitt: The next edition of "Forecasts for the UK Economy: A comparison of independent forecasts" will be published on 18 November.

Inflation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government's target rate of inflation will be defined in terms only of the RPIX measure for the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [59423]

Ms Hewitt: The Bank of England Act 1998 requires the Treasury to specify what price stability is to be taken to consist of at least once in every period of 12 months. In his last Budget the Chancellor confirmed the Government's inflation target is 2½ per cent. defined by the 12-month increase in the RPI excluding mortgage interest payments (RPIX).

VAT Receipts

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his latest assessment of the future trends in the ratio of VAT receipts to consumer spending. [59438]

Mr. Byers: The projection used in the Pre-Budget Report for the ratio of VAT receipts to consumer expenditure is documented in paragraph B16.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on mortgage interest tax relief. [59444]

Dawn Primarolo: Mortgage interest relief for home purchase is given for interest paid on a loan used by the borrower to buy their only or main residence. Relief is currently given at the rate of 10 per cent. and is limited to the interest on a loan of £30,000.

Mortgage interest relief for certain home income plans is given for interest paid on a loan used by an elderly person to buy a life annuity. Relief is currently given at the basic rate of tax and is limited to the interest on a loan of £30,000.

Smuggling (Tobacco and Alcohol)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue lost through the smuggling of (a) tobacco and (b) alcohol into the UK in each of the last five years (i) in real terms and (ii) as a percentage change on the previous year; and if he will make a statement. [58760]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise current estimates for revenue lost (excise duty and VAT) through cross-Channel smuggling of alcohol and tobacco products in 1996 and 1997 are set out in the table:

Table 1—Revenue lost through cross-Channel smuggling

£ million

Product type	1996	1997
Alcohol	195	195
Tobacco	640	690
Total	835	885

Notes:
Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Components may not therefore sum to the total shown
Figures shown are in current prices

The percentage change in the estimate between 1996 and 1997 was 6 per cent., calculated from the unrounded estimates.

The above estimates exclude any amounts for revenue lost on alcoholic drinks and tobacco products smuggled in freight consignments or by air passengers. Customs and Excise have not published any estimates for the extent of these activities. Similarly, there were no official estimates for the extent of smuggling prior to 1996.

Prudential Insurance Company

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have held with the Prudential Insurance Company relating to the redistribution of surpluses on life funds; and if he will make a statement. [59454]

Ms Hewitt: The Prudential announced in 1996 that it was opening discussions with the DTI on the attribution of the inherited estate in its long term business fund. These discussions are continuing with the Treasury, which took over responsibility for insurance regulation from the DTI in January 1998. The total amount involved was estimated by an official of the Prudential, when the company gave evidence to the Treasury Select Committee on 2 July 1998, to be between £6 billion and £8 billion.

It is the Treasury's policy not to comment publicly on discussions which it may have with companies in its regulatory capacity, in the interests of effective regulation and commercial confidentiality. The previous Government's position on inherited estates was set out in a statement by the then Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs in February 1995, and reaffirmed by my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (Mrs. Liddell), the then Economic Secretary, in a reply to my hon. Friend, the Member for Halton (Mr. Twigg), on 24 July 1998, Official Report, columns 750–52. The Treasury will deal with the Prudential's proposals, and any other proposals for attribution of the inherited estates of life offices, in accordance with the principles set out in those statements. The Treasury will place particular emphasis on protecting the interests of policyholders.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 104, on the operation of the working families tax credit, if it is envisaged that small firms will be able to claim a refund of working families tax credit before it is paid to their employees, where such firms expect that they will have insufficient tax and NIC payments against which to offset it. [59451]

Dawn Primarolo: Employers will be able to apply to the Inland Revenue for funding as soon as they can show that the amount of tax credit they are due to pay to their employees will exceed the income tax and NICs collected. Provided they apply in time there is no reason why they should not receive the necessary funding before they have to make the tax credit payment.

Pesticide Tax

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy regarding the imposition of a pesticide tax; and if he will make a statement. [59490]

Ms Hewitt: As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the Pre-Budget Report, work is currently being carried out into whether a tax or charge on pesticides would be an effective way to reduce pollution. There is evidence to suggest that pesticides have harmful effects on wildlife, terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems, and on human health. The Government will evaluate the findings of the research project, and the results of other ongoing work, in considering how best to proceed. No decision has yet been taken on whether to proceed with a tax or charge on pesticides.

HEALTH

Prescription Charges

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to extend the exemption from prescription charges to include people with long-term and chronic illnesses; [57861]

(2) what plans he has to change the eligibility criteria for exemption from prescription charges. [57860]

Mr. Milburn: The current prescription charge exemption arrangements were reviewed as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. Following the Review, all current prescription charge exemptions will be protected for the rest of the Parliament and existing patient charges will rise by no more than the rate of inflation over the next three years.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received about including cystic fibrosis in the list of treatments set out in the NHS (Remission of Charges) Regulations 1988; [57743]

(2) when he expects to make an announcement about changes to prescription charges for cystic fibrosis. [57744]

Mr. Milburn: We receive regular representations from cystic fibrosis sufferers.

The current prescription charge exemption arrangements were reviewed as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. Following the Review, all current prescription charge exemptions will be protected for the rest of the Parliament and existing patient charges will rise by no more than the rate of inflation over the next three years.

Specialist Posts

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many associate specialist posts have been created in each hospital trust area in each of the last five years. [58283]

Mr. Milburn: Information about the number of associate specialist posts created each year is not collected centrally. Copies of tables showing the whole-time equivalent number of associate specialists in post in each hospital trust on 30 September 1997 and 1996 will be placed in the Library. Data prior to 1996 are not available.

Consultant Psychiatrists

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of consultant psychiatrist posts are vacant, where there are no plans to fill them, by health region. [58588]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available.

Read Codes

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the independent evaluation of the Read Codes will be completed; [58577]

(2) what are the terms of reference for the independent evaluation of the Read Codes; and by whom they were determined; [58576]

(3) which company is carrying out the independent evaluation of the Read Codes; and on what basis they were appointed. [58575]

Mr. Milburn: The independent evaluation of the Read Codes is taking place in the following three stages.

(i) an assessment of the need for clinical terminology and the robustness of Clinical Terms Version 3 against alternatives;

(ii) development of a methodology for evaluating clinical codes in use;

(iii) a process of continuous evaluation in live use in clinical practice.

The detailed terms of reference for the first stage were prepared by the National Health Service Executive and will be placed in the Library. Terms of reference for the second and third stages have not yet been drawn up. The first stage is expected to be completed by the end of November, when the report will be made public. The first stage of the evaluation is being carried out by a consultant working within the Strategic Assignments Consultancy in the Central Communications and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA). The contract was awarded through the CCTA according to current Departmental guidelines and procedures. Contracts have not yet been awarded for the second and third stages; invitations to tender for this work will be widely advertised.

General Practitioners

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many newly qualified doctors will become available for GP service in each of the next five years; [58603]

(2) what percentage and how many GPs are due to retire within the next five years in each health authority area in England; and if he will make a statement. [58584]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally.

Doctors (Retirement)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors have retired from the NHS before retirement age in each of the last five years; and how many retired on health grounds. [59206]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of (a) the number of people who have come out of private health schemes since tax relief on premiums for the over 60s was abolished, (b) the additional burdens which this has placed on the National Health Service and (c) future leaving rates from these schemes. [59079]

Mr. Milburn: None. The additional resources we have provided to the National Health Service far exceed any demand created by the abolition of tax relief on private medical insurance premiums.

Compensation Claims

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the latest year for which figures are available. [59055]

Mr. Hutton: In the twelve month period ending 31 October 1998, the total cost to Departmental funds of claims by employees and the public was £44,922.25 in respect of claims for personal injury and £18,800 in respect of compensation awarded to employees or ex-employees of the department as a result of proceedings in the Civil Service Appeal Board or the Employment Tribunal.

Medical Investigations (Area Health Authorities)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of area health authorities in investigating medical issues regarding treatment at private hospitals following the recent Tees Area HA case; and if he will make a statement. [58832]

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities are responsible for registering private hospitals under the Registered Homes Act 1984 and inspecting the premises, staffing levels and qualifications twice a year. They can investigate complaints that hospitals have failed to comply with that Act. A complaint about private medical treatment is primarily a matter for the patient and the practitioner concerned, and it is open to individuals to seek redress through the courts or to bring the matter to the attention of the General Medical Council.

Private Hospitals

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on his policy on the regulation of private hospitals; [58871]

(2) what plans he has to increase the regulation of private hospitals. [58870]

Mr. Milburn: We are currently looking at options for future regulation of the independent acute sector.

Medical Practitioners (Suspensions)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS senior medical practitioners are currently suspended from duty on full pay; what the cost of this is to the NHS; what action the Government are taking to reduce the cost of such suspensions; and if he will make a statement; [59754]

(2) for what reasons when a senior medical practitioner is suspended for reasons unconnected with his or her clinical practice, he or she cannot continue with their clinical practice; and if he will make a statement. [59755]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the number of hospital and community medical and hospital dental staff suspended is collected centrally only for those cases lasting more than six months. The last quarterly report, ending 30 September 1998, indicated that there are currently 14 cases of suspension which remain unresolved. Total costs incurred to date for these fourteen cases amount to £557,886.

The procedures take too long and cost too much. On 27 October 1998 I ordered a review of the suspension procedures with the aim of speeding them up.

Decisions on the need to suspend a medical or dental practitioner are a matter for the National Health Service employer to take. Suspension may be considered when a member of staff needs to be immediately removed from the employing body's premises to protect the interests of patients, other staff, or the practitioner, and/or to assist in the investigative process.

Breast Cancer (Clitheroe)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the factors underlying the level of breast cancer in the Clitheroe area of Lancashire. [59476]

Mr. Hutton: East Lancashire Health Authority has undertaken an analysis of the local breast cancer epidemiology. The population of Clitheroe is not large enough to enable meaningful statistics to be collected. However Clitheroe falls within the Ribble Valley and the incidence of breast cancer in that locality as a whole is 4 per cent. higher than the area average. This is comparable to that of areas with similar socio-economic population characteristics. There is no evidence that the pattern of breast cancer in Clitheroe differs from the rest of the Ribble Valley.

Cement Kilns

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received since May from health authorities concerning cement kilns. [59478]

Mr. Milburn: None. However, this is a matter which the Department's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants has examined in detail following reports by the Environment Select Committee. The Committee has issued the following statement this week:

"This statement updates a previous statement issued by the Committee in October 1997.

The Committee has subsequently examined data collected by the Environment Agency into Complaints and Odours in the Clitheroe area. It is satisfied that there does not appear to be a link between complaints or odour threshold exceedances and the burning of Secondary Liquid Fuel (SLF) during the monitoring period; and that the concentrations of substances detected in ambient air samples did not indicate any concerns for health.

The Committee is also aware that separate dust monitoring has been carried out at Clitheroe Hospital on behalf of the Environment Agency, Ribble Valley Borough Council, East Lancashire Health Authority and Communicare NHS Trust. Despite some concerns which the Committee has about the monitoring methodology—specifically, the unsatisfactory nature of the samplers used in the early phase of monitoring and improvements which might have been made to the study design—the Committee agrees that none of the evidence suggests that particles released locally are likely to pose a special risk to health.

The Committee notes that the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has established an air quality monitoring site at Chatburn and that the first year's data show that air quality in the area is well on target to meet the objectives for Sulphur Dioxide and Nitrogen Dioxide set out in the National Air Quality Strategy to be achieved by 2005.

The Committee notes the action taken by the Environment Agency since 1 April this year to enforce a "Haze and Odour Condition" on emissions from Castle Cement such that "no persistent haze or odour which causes offence (sourced from either chimney) is present at ground level outside the site boundary".

It notes its intention to continue to investigate all complaints and to take the appropriate action to enforce this.

The Committee notes that the fitting of a wet scrubber on one of the kilns at Castle Cement and the decommissioning of two other kilns at the site are expected to lead to overall improvements in local air quality over the coming years, particularly in the reduction of levels of Sulphur Dioxide and Particles.

The Committee also had access to more recent health data collected by the East Lancashire Health Authority. This examined hospital admission rates for asthma and for any respiratory illness, mortality data and prescribing data from general practice. These data do not provide any evidence to support the assertion that the health of residents in the Clitheroe area is being adversely affected as a result of exposure to emissions from local industry. Indeed, people living in Clitheroe tend to have lower than average values compared to people living elsewhere in the health authority.

In summary, the Committee reiterates the point that the data available to it do not indicate that air quality in the area is worse when SLF is burned when compared with coal; nor do the data point to the need for a survey of the health of the local population to be carried out."

Health Visitors

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the powers he has to prevent health authorities and local health trusts from reducing the number of health visitors they employ; and if he will make a statement. [59050]

Mr. Milburn: We have the power under section 17 of the National Health Service Act 1977 to direct health authorities as to the exercise of their functions. This power does not relate specifically to the numbers of health visitors, or any particular staff group.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have left NHS waiting lists following pre-admission in each of the last 12 months. [59475]

Mr. Milburn: The Information requested is not available centrally.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the areas of responsibility within his Department which have seen the largest real terms increase in spending; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes. [59459]

Mr. Milburn: Within our area of responsibility, real terms increases in National Health Service total net expenditure in 1999–2000 in England will be 5.2 per cent., a further 4.5 per cent. in the year after that and a further 3.9 per cent. in the last year of this Parliament. Within this total there are substantial increases in resources for the NHS and public health.

These resources will help us deliver our objective of a modern and dependable health service.

Asylum Seekers (London)

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase payments to London boroughs to cover the increasing costs of coping with asylum seekers and refugees. [58968]

Mr. Hutton: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has set out his plans to change the cumbersome immigration and asylum process we inherited from the previous Government in the White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum". We are considering how to improve the support grants for local authorities in the transitional period, and will announce the terms of the grants later this year.

Out-patient Costs

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the annual cost to the NHS of people failing to attend out-patient appointments. [58759]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the cost of non-attendance is not available. The average cost of a patient seen in a hospital outpatient clinic is £61.

Privately Funded Projects

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce regulations governing privately funded projects within the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [59358]

Mr. Milburn: A scheme taken forward under the private finance initiative (PFI) already has to be approved by the National Health Service Executive if it has a capital value of £1 million or more. Approval is not given unless a scheme demonstrates that it meets local healthcare needs, is affordable and represents good value for money. Once a contract has been signed for a PFI scheme, the NHS body taking the scheme forward is, of course, responsible for monitoring the performance of its private sector partner to ensure that it meets the standards specified in the contract.

Cardiac Arrests (West Midlands)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage of patients for each hospital in the West Midlands Health Region in each of the previous five years who, having achieved return of spontaneous circulation following cardiac arrest at the point of admission to hospital, subsequently survived to be discharged. [58561]

Ms Jowell: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Royal College Membership

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of (a) hospital consultants and (b) associate specialists employed in the NHS in each of the last five years has been a member or fellow of the relevant Royal College. [58739]

Mr. Milburn: This information requested is not held centrally.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

13. Mr. Caplin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to improve the conditions in which live animals are transported. [58054]

Mr. Morley: We are working closely with enforcement agencies so as to achieve strict enforcement of the new rules we introduced last year. We have enhanced our procedures for ensuring that only fit and healthy animals are exported, and have consulted on important changes to the export certification arrangements. We have launched a new Strategy for the protection of livestock in markets.

Fishing Industry

14. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to define and promote sustainable fisheries, and to co-operate with its European counterparts to promote sustainable fishing methods across the European Union. [58055]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry's fisheries science programme aims to define sustainable levels and forms of fishing. The Ministry further promotes sustainable fishing by means of quotas, fishing effort restrictions and a range of conservation measures.

25. Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last held discussions with representatives of the fishing industry on the regional management of fisheries. [58068]

Mr. Morley: Regional management is regularly discussed when I meet representatives of the fishing industry. The most recent occasion was on 5 November 1998.

Tuberculosis

16. Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures have been taken to combat TB in cattle. [58057]

Mr. Rooker: On 17 August I announced a five point strategy to tackle the problem of TB in cattle. Since then we have made good progress in carrying it forward.

Cattle Tracing System

17. Angela Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the cattle traceability scheme. [58058]

Mr. Rooker: The Cattle Tracing System, launched on 28 September 1998, has been generally welcomed. It will help the livestock industry and consumers by making it easier to check where cattle are, and trace them if there is a disease outbreak.

Beef Ban

18. Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made on the lifting of the EU beef export ban. [58060]

Mr. Nick Brown: The European Commission's proposal for a Date-based Export Scheme (DBES) was supported by a simple majority of Member States when voted on by the EU Standing Veterinary Committee on 4 November 1998. It did not however achieve the qualified majority necessary for its adoption by the SVC. The proposal will therefore be sent to the Agriculture Council on 23 or 24 November.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to lift the ban on selling beef on the bone. [58787]

Mr. Rooker: The ban on sales of bone-in beef is not intended to be for all time. The Beef Bones Regulations 1997 remain under review, as is the case with all BSE related control measures. In expressing our hopes recently that the controls can be lifted as quickly as possible, we have emphasised that any decision to do so, or to alter their scope, would be taken only in the light of progress with the eradication of BSE, scientific advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee and the views of the Chief Medical Officer.

Common Agricultural Policy

19. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the common agricultural policy on hill farmers in the United Kingdom. [58061]

Mr. Morley: The Common Agricultural Policy has provided hill farmers with a great deal of financial support. However, the Government would like hill farmers to have a more secure and sustainable future than has been achievable under the present CAP framework. This is being considered in the context of the Agenda 2000 reform proposals.

Farmers (Early Retirement)

20. Mr. Dawson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has made to introduce an early retirement scheme for farmers; and if he will make a statement. [58062]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Mr. Levitt) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 599.

Agriculture (Lowlands)

21. Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future prospects on agriculture in the English lowlands. [58064]

Mr. Nick Brown: While sterling remains at current levels, and with structural surpluses in most sectors, the prospects for increased commodity prices and improved incomes for all farming sectors in the year ahead are not good. That is why reform of the Common Agricultural Policy is so urgent.

Organic Farming

22. Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department is taking to support organic farming. [58065]

Mr. Morley: Our aim is to encourage organic farming.

We are doing a great deal to achieve this. We have announced that, subject to clearance from the European Commission and parliamentary approval, substantial improvements will be made to the Organic Aid Scheme which gives financial assistance to farmers converting to organic production. Payments are made over five years and are made independent of and additional to other subsidies which both organic and conventional farmers can claim. Payments to farmers in England under the Organic Aid Scheme are expected to increase to around £9 million by 2000.

We also fund the Organic Conversion Information Service (OCIS)—which provides a special telephone Helpline and free advisory visits for prospective organic farmers. Additional support is being given to this service. And we are funding a programme of Research and Development on projects designed to provide practical information for organic farmers and to assess the environmental impact of this form of farming. We have already increased the budget for this work to £1.5 million in the current year and we are planning a further increase to over £2 million next year.

Livestock Farmers (South-west)

23. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent measures he has taken to help livestock farmers in the south-west. [58066]

Mr. Rooker: Government action to assist livestock farmers in the south-west and elsewhere in the UK is constrained by the rules of the CAP. Nevertheless, we have successfully lobbied the Commission to grant Private Storage Aid in the UK in both the pigmeat and sheepmeat sectors. In addition, following representation from the UK and others, the Commission agreed on two occasions, most recently on 15 October, to increase payments of export refunds on pigmeat.

With regard to the beef sector, we have agreed with other Member States that advance payments under the 1998 Beef Special Premium and Suckler Cow Premium Schemes will be increased from 60 per cent. to 80 per cent. This means bringing forward some £100 million of payments to the industry which would otherwise not have been available until the spring of next year.

EU Food Surpluses

24. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the over-production of food within the EU; and what are the latest figures for the cost of dumping surpluses and destroying food. [58067]

Mr. Rooker: The Common Agricultural Policy has had the effect of encouraging agricultural production within the EU, with surplus production either being stored or sold on world markets. It is however difficult to estimate what proportion of current agricultural production is directly attributable to the CAP. As far as the destruction of surplus food is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 455, which stated that the total sum spent on withdrawals of fruit and vegetables from the market in 1997 was 293 mecu (£213m at an average 1997 exchange rate of £1 = 1.3758 ecu). Statistics on the destination of produce withdrawn in 1997 are not available, but an average 62 per cent. of withdrawn fruit and vegetables was destroyed between the 1989–90 and 1993–94 marketing years. In addition, £1.5m was spent on the disposal of 6,000 tonnes of intervention beef in 1997. This beef was purchased and stored before the restrictions on beef from animals over 30 months old were introduced in March 1996.

Food Standards Agency

26. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to introduce legislation for a food standards agency. [58070]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Government remain committed to setting up a Food Standards Agency, but I cannot anticipate the Queen's Speech.

Expert Group on Vitamins and Minerals

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new appointments he has made to the Expert Group on Vitamins and Minerals. [59969]

Mr. Rooker: Ministers from MAFF, the Department of Health and the territorial departments recently approved the appointment of Professor Michael Langman as the new Chairman of the Expert Group on Vitamins and Minerals. We have also appointed Professor André McLean, Ms Clare Shaw and Dr. Lesley Rushton as additional members of the Group to serve alongside those appointed in May. Details of those appointments were given in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) on 7 May 1998, Official Report, columns 456–57.

Badgers

Liz Blackman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to carry out research into badger capture methods. [59970]

Mr. Rooker: The Bourne Group, which advises the Government on aspects of TB in cattle and badgers, recommended that the Ministry should investigate other humane capture methods for badgers, such as leg cuffs, as an adjunct to cage trapping. It also recommended that we should assess the actual welfare implications of snaring carried out in accordance with proper guidelines.

I have decided not to finance research into the use of snares. But I consider it would be prudent to examine whether leg cuffs might be a humane and efficient adjunct to cage traps. As a first step we plan to test a prototype leg cuff. If there is no evidence of harm to badgers a field trial will follow; otherwise the research will be brought to an end.

Farmers (Payment Delays)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the average delay between compensatory and subsidy payments to farmers being (a) awarded and (b) paid to farmers in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate he has made for the figure in 1998 to 1999. [57932]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 3 November 1998]: It is the Department's normal practice to notify the farmer in writing that a payment has been authorised and the average time between notification and despatch of the payment to the farmer in 1998–99 is expected to be 7 days. Corresponding figures for the schemes operated by the Department for the years 1988–89 to 1997–98 are not readily available and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Cattle Movement Service

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Cattle Movement Service. [58069]

Mr. Rooker: Further to my reply of 19 October 1998 to my hon. Friend, I can record that as of 10 November 1998, the British Cattle Movement Service has issued 293,391 passports and processed 126,083 notifications of cattle movements since its launch on 28 September.

Battery Hens

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he has taken to improve the welfare of battery hens. [58063]

Mr. Morley: Following pressure from the UK, European Commission proposals aimed at updating and improving current EU rules on the welfare of laying hens in battery cages were published in March. We initiated discussions during our presidency and will continue to work for an early phase out of the battery cage throughout Europe and improved standards in the interim.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55261]

Mr. Morley: The Department and its agencies occupies around 200 separate sites and this information is not readily available. The position at the Ministry's principal headquarters sites is as follows:

Ministry building	Number of spaces
Eastbury House, Albert Embankment, London	Fifteen spaces are available for either motorcycles or cars—all secure.
Nobel House and Ergon House, Smith Square, London	Public parking facilities are available nearby.
3–8 and 10 Whitehall Place and 55 Whitehall, London	Public parking facilities are available nearby.
Epsom Road, Guildford	Motorcyclists share the secure car parking facilities. There is sufficient space to meet any demand that might arise.
Hook Rise South, Tolworth	Six designated motorcycle parking spaces—all secure.
Kings Pool, York	Fourteen designated motorcycle parking spaces—all secure.

Some buildings, such as those in Whitehall, have nowhere where motorcycle parking could be made available. Other sites do have suitable areas and the Department will try to meet the needs of cyclists (whether pedal cyclists or motor cyclists) for parking and changing facilities, if possible.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to provide public information about genetically modified food. [58788]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are committed to providing consumers with the information that they need to be able to make informed choices about genetically modified (GM) foods. The UK played a major role in the production of the recent EC legislation that requires all foods containing GM soya or maize to be clearly labelled. In addition, MAFF has produced a Foodsense booklet on the impact of biotechnology on food production which has been widely distributed; this is currently being up-dated. Last year MAFF co-sponsored the Science Museum's Future Food mobile exhibition that provided information on the impact of biotechnology on food production. This is now touring the regions.

The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes (ACNFP), the UK's independent committee of experts who provide the statutory safety assessment of novel, including GM, foods under the EC Novel Foods Regulation, is also committed to a policy of transparency and openness. The Committee publishes the agenda, minutes and papers from its meetings and these, together with other information about GM foods, may also be found on the MAFF website on the Internet. Open meetings are held from time to time with observers from a range of invited interest groups and a brochure describing the work of the ACNFP, supplemented by a series of fact sheets, will be published shortly.

Ms Drown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the possible long-term harmful effects of genetic organisms on (i) human health, (ii) the environment and (iii) animal health. [59215]

Mr. Rooker: The safety of genetically modified organisms (GMOs) are rigorously assessed in accordance with EC Deliberate Release Directive (90–220) and the EC Novel Foods Regulation (258–97).

MAFF has commissioned a range of research projects to underpin the safety assessments with over £1m committed to research on the safety of novel foods in 1998–99. Details are contained in the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 11 February 1998, Official Report, columns 275–78. A programme of research to look at the possible risks to the agricultural environment from the release of GMOs began in 1990 and over £3.5m has been committed to the programme to date. Details of completed and current projects are given in the table. In 1997, MAFF funded a project to look at whether animal feeds produced from GM materials are likely to contain intact transgenes. The results will be reported shortly.

Rabies

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when and where the last confirmed case of rabies was in the United Kingdom; what measures were taken to confine the outbreak and eliminate the wild species in the infected area and at what total cost; what measures he would take in the event of an outbreak; and how these measures would differ in rural and urban conditions. [59039]

Mr. Rooker: The last confirmed case of rabies outside quarantine was in 1970 in Newmarket. The case involved a dog imported from Pakistan on 30 May 1969 which was released from quarantine on 30 November. Signs of illness were first noted on 20 February 1970, and death from rabies occurred seven days later.

Another dog, owned by the same person and imported at the same time, which had shared quarantine accommodation with the infected dog was destroyed as a precaution against the spread of the disease.

The Department's veterinary staff, assisted by the police, made exhaustive inquiries to trace any other possible contacts. None were found. As a precaution however, a dog which had been bitten by the infected dog on 18 January 1970, was taken into quarantine, as was another dog which had strayed near the infected dog some 4–6 weeks before. Inquiries were extended to an area in north London which the owner visited with the infected dog shortly before the onset of the disease, but there was no known contact there. The infected dog was on a leash on the sole occasion that it was exercised while showing signs of the disease.

The dog was normally exercised on Newmarket Heath but was otherwise kept within the owner's house and yard.

Special inquiries were made on any possible risk to horses in the Newmarket area. The exercising arrangements for horses and for the infected dog left no scope for any form of contact or for transmission of the virus, nor was there any possibility of contact with wildlife. Foxes in the area were regularly destroyed by staff appointed by the Jockey Club and the Estate Gamekeepers. For these reasons and because the infected dog had the dumb form of rabies, it was determined that there was no need to take any further precautions in the Newmarket area.

Details of the total cost to the Department of carrying out these investigations are no longer available.

In the event of an outbreak of rabies occurring now, the Minister could declare an infected area, depending on the epidemiological circumstances of the outbreak. An infected area may be divided into zones and different control regimes may be applied in different zones.

Any or all of the following measures might be put into effect to ensure that the outbreak is contained and the virus eradicated:

(i) Restriction of movement of certain species into or out of the area

(ii) Control and confinement of specified animals in the area

(iii) Seizure, detention and disposal of specified animals not under proper control in the area

(iv) Compulsory vaccination of specified animals

(v) Prohibition of gatherings of specified animals, including for sporting and/or recreational activities

(vi) The destruction of foxes, game and/or other wildlife.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the principal species of wild animal involved in the transmission of rabies in Western Europe. [59041]

Mr. Rooker: The fox (Vulpes vulpes).

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in the event of an outbreak of rabies, how many poison baits his Department could produce each day for use against the principal vector species; what poisons he would use; and what number and percentage of such species he would aim to eliminate in order to contain the outbreak. [59038]

Mr. Rooker: The Department's rabies outbreak contingency plan (currently under review) at present envisages that in the event of an outbreak of rabies, strychnine injected into dead day-old chicks would be used as bait to target the principal vector species, the fox. The Central Science Laboratory is capable of preparing over 8,000 baits ever 24 hours. Unadulterated baits would be laid for 7 to 10 days to encourage maximum bait uptake before poison baits would be laid. During this period, approximately 25,000 poison baits could be produced for use in the infected area. Any poison baits not taken up would be collected and destroyed three days later.

The number of foxes to be eliminated would depend upon the size of the control area and the local density of foxes. Evidence suggests that about 80 per cent. of foxes in rural habitats, and about 90 per cent. of foxes in urban habitats should ideally be eliminated in order to control an outbreak in the shortest possible time.

Wild Boar

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if wild boar in captivity are subject to the same production, health and veterinary controls as domestic pigs. [58785]

Mr. Morley: Wild boar may be kept in captivity only under licence, issued by the relevant local authority under the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 or under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981, as appropriate. Captive wild boar are subject to the same health and veterinary controls as domestic pigs.

Countryside Access

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is proposing to improve access to the countryside. [58813]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry is currently reviewing the provisions in the Countryside Stewardship Scheme, ESA Scheme and the Countryside Access Scheme, under which land managers may receive payments for providing access to enclosed farmland. This review will be informed by the outcome of consultations on access to the open countryside, currently being conducted by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Pesticide Approvals

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the names of applicants and the dates and the entire contents of applications for pesticide approvals are regarded as commercially confidential; and for what reasons the public is excluded from participating in decisions on such applications. [59046]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 November 1998]: While an application for pesticide approval is under evaluation, all the details are considered commercially confidential because there are considerable commercial interests at stake. If a company knows that a competitor has made an application for approval of a particular product, it will be able to anticipate when that product may come to the market and will be in a strong position to respond. In effect, the advance marketing plans for companies would be made known to competitors and customers.

If and when an approval is granted, the name of the approval holder, the product's name and its active ingredient or ingredients are included in the published notice. When an active ingredient is first approved, or when an existing one has been reviewed, we provide access to supporting data. Following the passage of the Pesticides Act 1998, we have consulted on proposals for further improving access to information on pesticides. One of these proposals is to allow access to the bulk of the data supporting applications for approval of individual products.

Decisions on applications for pesticide approvals are taken within a framework of UK and EU legislation and published rules. Decisions on individual applications are carried out within this framework, which requires consistent application of scientific standards for human and environmental safety and for efficacy. Ministers are guided in these matters by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides whose membership was recently expanded to include two lay members. The purpose of appointing lay members is to ensure that the Committee frames its advice in the light of the views of the general public.

DEFENCE

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and, for each trip, (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary costs for the adviser. [56005]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 October 1998]: The Ministerial Code requires Ministers always to make efficient cost effective travel arrangements. In line with the practice of successive Administrations, officials (including Special Advisers) accompanying Ministers on overseas visits are entitled to use the same class of travel as the Minister they are accompanying, to facilitate briefings and discussions. As far as my Department is concerned I have been accompanied by a Special Adviser on the following overseas visits:

18 September	France	5	1	1,374
23–25 September	Portugal	16	1	7,588
5 and 6 October	Cyprus	2	1	8,332

Note:

All flights were by RAF aircraft and account for the bulk of the costs shown. The remaining costs were those which were also met by the Ministers offices' budget. Any additional costs for other members of the accompanying party are not held centrally and are excluded.

Cadet Forces

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cadets were enrolled in each of the cadet forces in (a) May 1979 and (b) May 1997; and how many are enrolled at the present time. [57171]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The numbers of cadets enrolled in the Cadet Forces at 31 March in each of the years in question were as follows:

	31 March 1979	31 March 1997	31 March 1998
Sea Cadet Corps	18,403	12,011	11,762
Army Cadet Force	44,878	39,827	40,773
Air Training Corps	34,445	33,196	32,807
Combined Cadet Force	44,093	39,716	39,460
Totals	141,819	124,750	124,802

The cadet organisation do not calculate their cadet numbers on a monthly basis, totals are normally taken at the end of the financial year. The given figures are therefore at 31 March for each of the years in question.

It should be noted that there is a possibility that the March 79 Sea Cadet Corps figure of 18,403 could include "Junior" members who are not enrolled into the Corps. "Junior" numbers currently stand at just over 3,000, and are not included in the March 97 and March 98 Sea Cadet figures.

VC10 (VIPs) Aeroplane

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 October 1998, Official Report, column 223, and his subsequent letter of 2 November, if he will identify the (a) VIP fits and (b) modifications undertaken; and if he will list the special furniture purchased broken down by items costing in excess of £1,000. [58327]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 November 1998]: A "VIP fit" comprises a number of removable fittings which are provided to convert the interior of an aircraft to a standard appropriate for carrying VIP passengers. To date 6 divan bed settee units for the VC10 VIP fit are on order; there is no record of any other special purchases since 1 May 1997.

Four modifications have been made to the VC10 fleet since 1 May 1997. They are:

(a) The introduction of an embedded global positioning system inertial based navigation system.

(b) The introduction of an improved flight management system.

(c) A modification to the air to air refuelling pylon rear attachment fitting.

(d) The renewal of existing internal bodywork panels for C1K VC10 aircraft, that is, the type of VC10 aircraft most suited to carrying passengers.

Doctors

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many doctors are employed by his Department; and how they are allocated between services. [58744]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The numbers of doctors employed by the Ministry of Defence are as follows:

	Number
Royal Navy	226
Army	404
Royal Air Force	211
MOD Civilian	195

Notes:

1. Military figures are as at 1 September 1998.
2. Civilian figure is as at 9 November 1998.
3. The figure for civilian doctors comprises those staff working with the Armed Forces and those who provide an occupational health service to MOD civil servants. It does not include sessional doctors who are employed locally and for whom records are not held centrally.

Dry Docks (South America)

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the availability of dry dock facilities to Her Majesty's Navy in South America. [59151]

Mr. Doug Henderson: By negotiation, the Royal Navy makes use of dry dock facilities in South America, and indeed world-wide, as required and on an individual basis.

Nurses

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many nurses are employed by his Department; and how they are allocated between the services. [59342]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The numbers of nurses employed by the Ministry of Defence are as follows:

	Nurses
Royal Navy	338
Army	716
MOD Civilian	364

Notes:
1. The figures are as at 1 September 1998.
2. The military figures include Registered Mental Nurses and trainees.
3. The figure for civilian nurses does not include those who are employed locally overseas and for whom records are not held centrally.

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Ministry of Defence Police about the introduction of any necessary parallel changes to the Ministry of Defence police regulations following the reforms of complaints and discipline procedures for Home Department Police Forces announced by the Home Secretary on 23 March; and what changes he will now make. [58754]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police (MDP) has set up a Working Group, chaired by the Deputy Chief Constable, including representation from the Defence Police Federation, to examine the new regulations for Home Department Police Forces and consider how they can best be applied to MDP officers. Following consideration of the Group's proposals, the Chief Constable will aim to implement any necessary changes by 1 April 1999 or as soon as possible thereafter.

Chinook Helicopters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has caused the slippage in the installation of cockpit voice recorders in the RAF Chinook helicopter fleet from late spring 2000 to the end of the year 2000; and if he will make a statement; [58756]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 18 November 1997, Official Report, columns 152–53, if cockpit voice recorders will be fitted to the first six RAF Chinook helicopters by December 1998; and if he will make a statement. [58836]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 November 1998]: As part of the Health and Usage Monitoring System, HUMS, Cockpit Voice Recorders are expected to be fitted to the first six RAF Chinook helicopters by 30 June 1999. HUMS will be embodied in the full RAF Chinook fleet by December 2000. This represent a slippage of around 6 months against the previous programme dates, which is a result of technical difficulties encountered with the aircraft interface installation.

Defence Diversification Agency

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the running costs of the Defence Diversification Agency in each of the next two financial years. [59354]

Mr. Spellar: As we recently announced (Cm 4088, paragraph 11), we estimate that the operating budget of the Defence Diversification Agency will be of the order of £2 million per year.

Pilots (Resignation Requests)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fully-trained pilots have requested to leave the Army in each of the last five years. [59351]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Statistics for the number of fully trained pilots who have left the Army in each of the last five years at their own request are as follows:

Year	Officers	Soldiers	Total
1995	14	3	17
1997	16	9	25
1998[1]	18	12	30
Totals	107	35	142

[1] As at 11 November 1998

Child Support Agency

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the memorandum of understanding between his Department and the Child Support Agency relating to pay and allowances taken into account in determining CSA settlements. [59428]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Memorandum of Understanding between the Ministry of Defence and the Child Support Agency is an inter-Departmental internal working document which determines the administrative procedures to be followed by the two Departments when an absent parent is a serving or former member of the Armed Forces. The Memorandum does not cover any financial issues regarding pay and allowances taken into account in determining CSA settlements; policy for which rests with the CSA. A copy of the latest version of the Memorandum will be placed in the Library.

Information Warfare Incidents

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Government-wide unified incident reporting and alert scheme on information warfare incidents was established; and if he will make a statement. [59427]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 12 November 1998]: UNIRAS—the IT unified incident reporting and alert scheme—was introduced in April 1992 and records all reported IT security incidents across Government. Following a review of protective security in Government departments and agencies, responsibility for the management and operation of the scheme was transferred from the Control Computer and Telecommunications Agency, CCTA, to the Security Service in August 1994. The aim of the scheme is to monitor, analyse and raise awareness of IT security incidents, including any which may involve electronic attack affecting the secure operation of Government Systems.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Government will announce measures for the defence of critical national information technology infrastructure. [59429]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Government are aware of a number of potential threats to the critical national IT infrastructure and a range of security measures is already in place to protect the associated IT systems. I have nothing to add to the announcement I gave in the Adjournment Debate of 4 November 1998, Official Report, columns 987–92, on Information Warfare, that the Government hope to announce shortly a package of measures that will further ensure adequate defence of key systems in the critical national infrastructure.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59748]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Minister for the Armed Forces to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 8 July 1998, Official Report, column 532.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what child care provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59718]

Mr. Spellar: My Department and its agencies provide 15 workplace nurseries at an average cost to parents of £72 per week for a full time place. These facilities, together with a number of places purchased in off-site private sector nurseries provide some 600 places to the children of Service and civilian personnel working in Ministry of Defence establishments. In addition, my Department subsidises a number of places in holiday playschemes for children of school age. Information about the number and proportion of Service and civilian personnel who used these facilities during the last two financial years is not kept centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Museums

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what partnership funding he will make available to the military museums under their bid for millennium lottery money to improve access and education at the museums. [58335]

Mr. Spellar: The six principal museums and the 69 Regimental and Corps Museums supported from public funds have not approached the Ministry of Defence (MOD) for additional funding support for HLF Millennium Lottery Funding. The MOD funds the six principal museums through Grant In Aid, and provides financial support in the form of funding of salaries and the provision of accommodation to 69 Regimental and Corps Museums. This provides a firm base from which museums are able to raise partnership funding privately. A bid by a number of the Regimental and Corps museums for £1.5m from the HLF is being co-ordinated by the Army Museums Ogilby Trust.

Territorial Army

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the letter written by the Commander in Chief Land Command on 26 October 1998 threatening to court martial soldiers who spoke to (a) the press and (b) hon. Members about proposed TA cuts; and if the letter was authorised by him. [59926]

Mr. George Robertson: The Commander-in-Chief did not need my authorisation to issue his letter, which I have placed in the Library of the House; but he has my full support in his action to remind those under his command of their duty.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Roads and Pavements

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the legislation covering local authorities' duties of care towards the public in respect of (a) roads and (b) pavements; and if he will make a statement. [58199]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Section 41 of the Highways Act 1980 gives highway authorities a duty to maintain those highways which are maintainable at the public expense. This duty also applies to the maintenance of footways and bridleways where these are highways maintainable at the public expense.

Section 58 of the Act gives a defence for highway authorities in actions for damage resulting from their failure to maintain a highway which is maintainable at the public expense. There is now a substantial amount of case law on what care highway authorities should exercise to secure that the highway is not dangerous to traffic. Highway authorities and their insurers are guided by this when new claims arise.

In view of the large body of case law on highway authorities duty of care, the present legislation is clear and there are no plans to introduce new legislation.

Radioactive Material

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what permissions are required before BNFL is allowed to transport radioactive material by road. [58342]

Ms Glenda Jackson: BNFL, in common with any other operator, would require some or all of the following permissions, over and above those required for any other road transport operation, depending on the quantity and nature of the radioactive material:

Certification of Vocational Driver Training;

Approval by DETR of the material;

Approval by DETR of the package design;

Approval by DETR of the shipment;

Approval of the Director of Civil Nuclear Security.

Those permissions conform fully with the safety and security recommendations of the International Atomic Energy Agency and directives of the European Union.

Additional requirements, including import/export controls, may apply where the transport forms part of a transboundary shipment.

Housing Needs Surveys

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in which years each local authority in England completed its most recent Housing Needs Survey. [58738]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, some information on surveys of stock condition is collected from authorities in their annual Housing Investment Programme (HIP1) returns. The information collected in 1997 is summarised in the 1997 "HIP1 All Items Print", a copy of which is in the Library.

Shopping Centres

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to support high quality expansion of existing district shopping centres as an aid to encouraging (a) competition and (b) additional investment in nearby shopping centres. [58855]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government's policy is to focus additional retail investment in existing centres. Proposals for extensions of regional shopping centres should be brought forward through Regional Planning Guidance. In the case of town and district centres, local planning authorities should establish in their development plans where they wish to encourage additional retail development and investment, including (where appropriate) expansion to existing shopping centres. The aim should be to improve competitiveness and provide a better service for the local community but without undermining the vitality and viability of other existing centres.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on Government policy in respect of (a) in town and (b) out of town supermarket developments; [58885]

(2) what factors he takes into account when considering planning applications by supermarket chains for (a) town and (b) out of town stores. [58882]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government's policy is set out in our Response to the House of Commons Environment Committee report on Shopping Centres (Cmnd 3729). This reaffirmed our commitment to the policy set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 6 (PPG6: Town Centres and Retail Developments). The Government have clarified that the policy in PPG6 applies just as much to proposals to extend existing retail development as it does to new supermarkets.

The policy aims to sustain and enhance the vitality and viability of our city, town and district centres, by focusing new development and investment, particularly for retail and leisure uses, in these centres; and to provide a wide range of facilities to meet people's day-to-day needs accessible by a choice of means of transport.

Local planning authorities should develop a plan-led approach to accommodating new retail development. Having considered the need for new development, both local authorities and developers should then apply the sequential approach to selecting sites for accommodating additional development. We expect new supermarkets to be located in existing centres or failing that, on the edge of such centres, and for the store to be of an appropriate size for the role and function of the centre.

Exceptionally, applications are called in for determination by the Secretary of State. In deciding such cases, the Secretary of State takes account of all relevant policy and the recommendations of the Inspector who conducted the public inquiry.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many planning decisions have been called in since 1 January; and how many of these concern food retailing. [59075]

Mr. Raynsford: Information is collected quarterly. In the first three quarters of 1998 (1 January to 30 September), 102 planning applications were called in, of which 17 involved some element of food retailing.

Concessionary Fares

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the concessionary travel schemes available to pensioners in each local authority in the West Midlands region; and the costs of each scheme. [58875]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Concessionary travel schemes are a matter for local authorities, and my Department does not have details of schemes for pensioners. But the overall costs reported by local authorities of concessionary travel schemes (covering elderly, blind and disabled people and children) for the 1996–97 financial year for each local authority in area covered by the Government Office for the West Midlands are as follows:

A50

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the total costs of the A50 road construction in Stoke-on-Trent, (b) the original anticipated costs of this scheme and (c) the costs of Phase 1B of the scheme, indicating separately claims by the contractor due to contract overrun. [58835]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. George Stevenson, dated 16 November 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, has asked Lawrie Haynes to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the A50 Blythe Bridge to Queensway scheme. I am replying in Mr. Haynes's absence.

The total cost of the work carried out under the three main contracts is likely to outturn at around £123m.

When the scheme entered the road programme in 1987 the work cost was estimated at £36m. But the scheme changed considerably as design work developed and shortly before work started in 1993, we estimated that the works costs would be in the order of £80m. Work was carried out under the Institution of Civil Engineers' standard form of contract under which a number of risks remain with the employer and the contractor is paid for the actual, rather than the estimated, work done. The contracts were also index linked for inflation. Apart from inflation costs rose because the contractors had to cope with unforeseen ground conditions, the diversion of uncharted statutory utility services and consequential design changes, and the introduction of Landfill Tax.

A disadvantage of this type of contract is the uncertainty of cost and time. As part of the Agency's procurement initiative we are now using other forms of contract which share risks more equitably.

Payments to the main contractor on Phase 1B total £50m of which £3.7m is for claims relating to the extension of the contract to allow for, among other things, unforeseen ground conditions.

All costs quoted exclude VAT, the cost of Preparation and Supervision, and the costs of land acquisition and other compensation payments.

Oil Spills (St. Kilda)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate the Government have made as to how quickly a spill from the nearest tranche offered for oil production could reach the islands of St. Kilda. [59021]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The nearest point to St. Kilda currently under licence is 45 miles South South West (SSW) of the Islands. Exploration is still at an early stage and it is not yet known whether hydrocarbons are present in any quantity or what their characteristic would be. Before any such structure could be drilled, better predictions would need to be available and any such well would be subject to the Merchant Shipping (Oil Pollution Preparedness and Response Convention) Regulations 1998. These require the prior provision of an oil spill contingency plan specific to the well site and the rig to be used which must be approved by the Department of Trade and Industry.

In the worst case scenario, it is estimated that should a release of oil occur 45 miles to the SSW of St. Kilda the oil would impact on the Islands after a period of between 36 to 48 hours if it had not already been dispersed in the prevailing wind and seas.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the proposed A14 multi-modal study will begin; and how long it will take to complete. [59298]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We will shortly be consulting regional planning conferences on the timing for all the studies proposed in A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England. We expect the study to take at least a year to complete.

Taxis (Smoking)

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow London taxi drivers to enforce No Smoking signs in their vehicles. [59486]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 241.

Water Craft (Byelaws)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to implement the recommendations of the Review of Byelaw powers for the Coast, drawn up by the Interdepartmental Working Party; and if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to establishing controls over the use of jet-skis and other personal powered water craft. [59377]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 7 October, at the official launch of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA), I announced the Government's continuing commitment to improve the safety and management of recreational craft through a three-strand strategy. First, safety education initiatives will continue to be pursued by the MCA. Second, and importantly, the MCA will develop a Code of Conduct for all types of recreational craft, including personal watercraft (for example "Jetskis") which will cover best and safe practice together with a voluntary registration and identification scheme. The Code will be developed by the Sea Safety Liaison Group which, in addition to the MCA, comprises representatives of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, Royal Yachting Association, Royal Life Saving Society UK and the British Marine Industries Federation, and will be subject to external consultation before being launched next summer.

The third strand of the Government's strategy is a long term commitment to primary legislation to enable local authorities to have better control, through byelaws, of their coastal waters. This commitment follows acceptance of the recommendations of the review of coastal byelaws by an Inter-Departmental working party led by the Countryside Division of my Department. Following extensive consultation, the working party recommended that:

(a) that local authority powers need to be consolidated in one place, and updated;

(b) any powers must include the ability to provide exclusive bathing zones where all type of craft, powered and non-powered, can be excluded;

(c) local authorities should be given more general byelaw powers (with safeguards to prevent indiscriminate use) to regulate activities affecting the wider environment, and;

(d) any extension of, or amendment to, byelaw powers should not conflict or overlap with powers held by other authorities.

Having consulted Ministerial colleagues, I have decided to accept these recommendations. The Government intend to pursue the primary legislation needed to bring them into effect in due course. Copies of the Working Party's report "Review of Byelaw Powers for the Coast" are available and have been deposited in the House Library.

Taken together, I believe this strategy will do a great deal to improve the safety and enjoyment of the ever increasing numbers of people who use our coasts for recreation.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will make a statement on his policy on commonhold and further leasehold reforms; and if he will make a statement. [59414]

Mr. Raynsford: We hope to consult on proposals for leasehold reform very shortly. The Lord Chancellor's Department is responsible for commonhold but I understand that consultation on its introduction will follow in due course. These two initiatives are linked and we are liaising closely to ensure consistent proposals.

Right to Buy

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the list of tenants' organisations circulated with the Secure Tenants' Right to Buy consultation paper. [59531]

Mr. Raynsford: The consultation paper was circulated to English local authorities and registered social landlords who were encouraged to bring it to the attention of their tenants, so that these could comment directly or via their landlord. The Department does not have a list of their tenants' organisations or of those who may have received a copy of the paper from their landlord.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what the maximum discount is under the right-to-buy scheme at present; and what it will be under the Government's new proposals; [59620]

(2) what the (a) maximum and (b) minimum reductions in the right-to-buy discounts will be as a result of the Government's changes to the existing discount scheme; [59622]

(3) he will make a statement on the Government's proposals to reduce the maximum discount for council home tenants wishing to buy their homes under the right-to-buy. [59621]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Housing in her written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Castle Point (Mrs. Butler) on 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 124–25, which set out the Government's proposals in detail. She said that the Government were publishing a consultation paper. This proposed to replace the current £50,000 cash limit on discount with nine regional limits ranging from £22,000 in the North East to £38,000 in London and the South East, reflecting council house prices in each region.

We are now considering responses to the consultation paper. It is anticipated that the change would affect approximately 1 in 4 buyers in London. Of those, some may receive a few hundred pounds less discount than if they had applied before the change came into force. The maximum theoretical reduction in discount will range from £28,000 in the North-East to £12,000 in London. However, the effect on any individual buyer will depend on a range of factors including the value of the property, the region in which it is located, and the number of years' tenancy which entitle the buyer to added discount.

Closed Railway Lines

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the abandoned railway routes that are owned by British Rail, in each instance listing (a) the length in kilometres, (b) how long they have been closed and (c) the commercial value of the land. [59688]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Closed lines owned by the British Railways Board, which are a mile or more long, are as follows:

	Approximate mileage
Akeman Street to Grendon Underwood	2
Apethorn Junction to Codley Junction	2.5
Ashton—Park Bridge branch	2.5
Bere Alston to Tavistock (not a continuous length)	6
Bowling branch, Bradford	1
Bridgeton to Parkhead (London Road tunnels only)	1
Brodsworth Colliery branch	1.5
Cambus to Menstrie	2
Catesby Tunnel, Charwelton	2.5
Chorlton Junction to Old Trafford	1.5
Colne—Foulridge (part)	3
Darngavel	1
Dereham to North Elmham	5
Drewton Tunnel, Little Weighton	1
Dumfries to Maxwelltown	3
Finnieston to Kirklee	1.25
Fletton Junction to Longville Junction	1
Glazebrook to Partington	2
Greenock Princes Pier branch	3
Hamilton to Larkhall (part)	1.25
Hartley to Stenkirth	1
Hyde Road to Gorton and Fairfield	1.5
Kelvinside branch (Urban tunnels)	1
Limekiln Junction to Oakdale (leasehold)	9
Luton to Dunstable	5
Mickleover to Mackworth	1
Muirkirk	1.75
Nuneaton avoiding line	1
Paisley St. James—Linwood branch	1
Queensbury Tunnel, Queensbury	1.5
Skegby branch (part)	1.25
Strathaven	1
Van branch, Caersws (not a continuous length)	4.5
Warrington—Latchford	1.5

Line lengths are shown in miles rather than kilometres as the Board's records are kept in miles and are approximations. BR also own numerous sections less than a mile long but details of these could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Board has no readily accessible comprehensive record of line closure dates. The bulk of the closures occurred some 30 years ago and the relevant records have been or are in the process of, being lodged with the Public Record Office.

It is not possible to state a commercial value of the land. This depends on what alternative uses may be available including what planning permission might be obtained, assuming an alternative development is permitted at all. Such a valuation would be commercially confidential during the sale process.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to promote the re-opening of disused rail lines. [59664]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our White Paper announced that additional money will be available to encourage further investment in three main areas of the rail network. Over £100 million will be made available over the next three years to increase the level of freight grant and to set up two new funds. The Infrastructure Investment Fund will support strategic investment projects aimed at addressing capacity constraints. The Railway Passenger Partnership Fund will enhance local and regional services and be targeted at proposals that promote modal shift and integration with other modes. These two funds will be administered by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising (OPRAF). Full details of the criteria that OPRAF will use in assessing applications will be announced shortly.

Train Paths

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of the allocation by Railtrack of train paths between freight and passenger traffic. [59674]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack allocate train paths to train operators in accordance with the access rights which the operators hold and with the operators' bids for paths. All track access agreements are subject to approval by the Rail Regulator.

Our White Paper "A New Deal for Transport" (Cmnd 3950) announced that the proposed Strategic Rail Authority would review the capacity of the railway, assess investment needs and identify priorities where operators' aspirations conflict. Pending legislation, the shadow Strategic Rail Authority, to be established next spring, will make a start on this work.

Congestion Charging

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential for congestion charging to reduce traffic levels. [59689]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Estimates have been made for a number of urban areas including central London (quoted in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone", page 116) and Bristol, Derby, Leeds, Reading and Sheffield, in the Transport Research Laboratory study "Impact of Transport Policies in Five Cities". Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Commission for Integrated Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what role the Commission for Integrated Transport will play in helping to ensure that financial inconsistencies between the criteria for road and rail projects are eliminated. [59691]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have stated in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport" that they are developing a new approach to the appraisal of different solutions to transport problems, and that they intend that this approach should be applied to the appraisal of all transport projects, including proposals for all road schemes. The Commission for Integrated Transport, in providing independent advice to the Government, will be reviewing and monitoring progress towards the objectives set out in the White Paper.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if the Strategic Rail Authority will have (a) the power and (b) the duty to draw up network development plans for main lines; [59680]

(2) what assessment he has made of capacity problems within the rail network. [59678]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack is responsible for the stewardship of the railway network. Its 1998 Network Management Statement identifies the key locations on the network with current and predicted congestion problems. Railtrack has agreed with the Rail Regulator to complete an evaluation of options to address these capacity problems by 30 November.

The shadow Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) will start work on strategic planning of the network, as part of an integrated transport policy and as an input to the Rail Regulator's review of access charges. Subject to legislation, the statutory SRA will have a duty to formulate, and keep under review, a strategy for the operation and development of railways in Britain.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Strategic Rail Authority will be subject to the proposed freedom of information legislation. [59679]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Yes, subject to legislation.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to allow British Rail to bid for future rail franchises. [59675]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Subject to legislation, the British Railways Board will become part of the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA). The SRA will let all new franchises and will act as the public sector operator of last resort. Meanwhile, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced on 30 September that we will enable the revitalised British Railways Board to step in if any of the franchises fails for whatever reason.

Ports Policy

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the forthcoming paper on ports policy will explicitly endorse the strategic importance of Newhaven; and if he will make a statement. [59694]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister indicated in a Written Answer on 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 28, that it is proposed to publish a ports policy paper, which we hope to have ready in the Spring. It is too early to discuss how it might address such specific issues as the role of particular ports.

Freight

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on rail freight of the introduction of 44-tonne lorries. [59690]

Ms Glenda Jackson: 44 tonne lorries have been allowed in the UK for combined road/rail transport in the UK since 1994. A Department of Transport survey in 1995 showed that over 50 per cent. of the laden journeys to or from Channel Tunnel rail freight terminals by vehicles licensed to operate at 44 tonnes were at weights over 38 tonnes.

We announced in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone" that the Commission for Integrated Transport will be asked to consider the case for allowing 44 tonne lorries, on 6 axles, for general use. Their consideration will take into account the potential effects on rail freight.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the average cost of moving freight per kilometre by (a) road, (b) rail and (c) air. [59692]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is not available.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many additional miles of railway track have been electrified in each of the last 10 years. [59682]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 7 May 1998, Official Report, column 441.

Dutch Transport Information Service

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the Dutch transport information service; and what plans he has to introduce a similar scheme in the UK. [59681]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am aware of the Dutch transport information system. It was taken into account in the formulation of the aim set out in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport" for a UK public transport information system, with a target date of operation of 2000.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59745]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally.

Transport Construction Costs

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the average cost of constructing one kilometre of (a) a twin-track railway, (b) a two-way road, (c) a motorway, (d) a footpath and (e) a cycle lane. [59687]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Average costs are not available for railways. Costs vary enormously, reflecting topographical, structural and operational factors.

The average cost of roads and motorways also vary widely due to similar factors, although indicative average cost ranges are available. The average cost range per km for a single lane, two-way road is £1.2-£2.2 million. For a three lane motorway, the average cost range per km is £3.9-£7.2 million.

Average costs are not available for cycle lanes. Since cycle lanes use the existing carriageway of a road and are identified by markings and signs, costs are not high. The creation of stand-alone cycle tracks will be more costly, costs depending upon a variety of considerations including location and the materials used in construction.

Average costs are not available for footpaths. Again these would vary enormously depending upon location and the materials used in construction.

Motorcycles

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to encourage the provision of secure parking for motorcycles. [59665]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are in favour of the provision of secure parking for motorcycles and have agreed to support and provide drafting assistance for a Private Peers Bill which Lord Rotherwick intends to introduce in the next session to facilitate such provision.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment the Government have made of the practice of banning motorcyclists from riding for six months if they fail to obtain a full licence within two years; and if he will make a statement. [59686]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Current legislation is that, if a learner motorcyclist fails to pass his driving test within two years of getting their provisional licence, he may not ride a motorcycle for 12 months. Driver licensing records indicate that the two year validity period for provisional motorcycle licences affects very few learner riders; 555 in the 12 months to June 1998, around 0.25 per cent. of the 220,000 provisional motorcycle licences issued in a year. Surveys indicate that on average learner riders take their motorcycle tests 4–5 months after their initial training.

The limited validity period for provisional motorcycle licences is intended to improve road safety by encouraging learner riders to get to test standard without undue delay. None the less, the Government recognise that the current arrangement is not popular with some motorcyclists. A Consultation Paper seeking views about how the rules might be altered was published in July and copies were placed in the House Library. We are currently considering the responses that we have received.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential (a) increased use of and (b) safety implications of the use of (i) cycle lanes and (ii) bus lanes by motorcycles. [59685]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There has been no assessment of the potential increased use and safety implications of the use of cycle lanes by motorcycles. Cycle lanes exist to give encouragement to people to cycle. Studies have been conducted on allowing motorcycles to use bus lanes in Bristol and Reading but the results were inconclusive in safety terms.

The Department would welcome proposals by local authorities to conduct comprehensive before and after monitored studies to help inform decisions on whether there is a case for motorcyclists to be allowed to use bus lanes.

Drink Driving

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much the Government have spent in the last five years to reduce drink driving. [59676]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have spent £11.8 million on anti-drink-drive publicity campaigns in the last 5 years. Other Central Government expenditure for this purpose cannot be separately identified.

Standard Spending Assessments

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what was the standard spending assessment for Surrey County Council for each of the last 10 years in (a) all services, (b) education, (c) the police and (d) personal social services; and what forecast he has made of the level of Surrey's spending needs in the next financial year; [60038]

(2) what was the standard spending assessment for each London borough for each of the last 10 years in (a) all services, (b) education, (c) the police and (d) personal social services; and what forecast he has made of changes in the level of London boroughs' spending needs in the next financial year. [60050]

Ms Armstrong: Standard Spending Assessments were first used for the distribution of Revenue Support Grant in 1990–91. The information requested can be found in the relevant "Standard Spending Assessment Handbook" from 1990–91 to 1998–99, copies of which were placed in the Library. We will announce our proposals for Standard Spending Assessments for 1999–2000 around the usual time in late November to early December.

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what contribution the area cost adjustment made to the standard spending assessment of each London borough in respect of (a) all services, (b) education, (c) the police and (d) personal social services in each of the last 10 years; [60046]

(2) what contribution the area cost adjustment made to the standard spending assessment which Surrey received in respect of (a) all services, (b) education, (c) the police and (d) personal social services in each of the last 10 years; [60051]

(3) how much cost adjustment each London borough received for each of the last 10 years; and what was the proportion of area cost adjustment to standard spending assessment in each of those years; [60047]

(4) how much area cost adjustment Surrey has received for each of the last 10 financial years; and what was the proportion of area cost adjustment to standard spending assessment in each year. [60037]

Ms Armstrong: Standard Spending Assessments were first used for the distribution of Revenue Support Grant in 1990–91. The area cost adjustment used in Standard Spending Assessments for each local authority is set out for the relevant years in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) and its amendment reports from 1990–91 to 1992–93 and in the Local Government Finance Report (England) from 1993–94 to 1998–99.

The contribution of the area cost adjustment to standard spending assessments as a proportion of the total standard spending assessment, and the contribution of the area cost adjustment to standard spending assessments for (a) all services, (b) education, (c) the police and (d) personal social services, for each local authority for 1994–95, 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 are set out in tables which have been placed in the Library. For earlier years the information is not available. An approximation to much of the information requested for those years can be found in the "Standard Spending Assessment Handbook" for each year, copies of which were placed in the Library.

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what options he is considering for changes to the criteria for the area cost adjustment for the London boroughs in next year's financial settlement; and if he will list the financial implications of each option; [60048]

(2) what options he is considering for changes to the criteria for the area cost adjustment for Surrey in next year's financial settlement; and if he will outline the financial implications of each option. [60036]

Ms Armstrong: The Report of the Standard Spending Assessments Sub-Group for 1999–2000 identified a range of options for changing the Area Cost Adjustment and provided exemplifications of their effect for individual authorities. A copy of the Report is available in the House Library.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what restrictions apply to the conveyance of passenger vehicles fuelled by autogas through the Channel Tunnel; and what is the safety case for these restrictions. [59811]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Eurotunnel do not at present convey vehicles powered by autogas. They will need to make a safety case if they decide in principle to accept such vehicles.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the (a) level of tolls on the Severn Bridge, (b) introduction of two way tolling and (c) concessions for local commuters. [59561]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Severn Bridges Act 1992 provides for the tolls charged at the Severn Bridges to increase annually in line with the RPI, rounded to a convenient sum. Since 1 January 1998 the tolls have been £4.00 for a car and £8.40 and £12.10 for larger vehicles. As of 1 January 1999 these tolls will rise to £4.20, £8.40 and £12.50, respectively. The Act provides for one-way tolling and for concessionary tolls. Severn Bridge Crossing plc offer a concession for regular users who pay monthly for a tag. There are no plans for the government to legislate to change the current toll structure.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what child care provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59719]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Child care provision is an integral part of my Department's equal opportunities policy. It enables staff to combine their work and domestic responsibilities and helps the Department to maximise talent. Child care provision is one of a range of "family friendly" measures provided and continuing to be developed; others include 18 weeks paid maternity leave at full pay, career breaks up to five years; 5 days paid paternity leave, special leave for domestic emergencies, flexible working, including part-time working, job sharing and home working.

My Department supports child care provision in accordance with existing central guidance where there is a business case and a value for money justification which meets both staff and organisational needs. Subsidies are provided but parents are required to make a contribution towards the cost. Supported workplace nursery places are available for staff at inter-departmental nurseries in Westminster, Hastings and Bristol. In the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 the cost to parents was as follows:

Nursery	Year 1996–97 cost per week per place	Year 1997–98 cost per week per place
Westminster	74	76
Hastings	64	64
Bristol	70	70

Staff with school age children benefit from inter-departmental holiday play schemes at various locations, including Westminster and Bristol at an average cost to parents of £8 per child per day.

In the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 the number of parents using these facilities was 54 and 41 respectively, representing 1 per cent. of total staff.

These figures related to the central department only. Agency Chief Executives are responsible for equal opportunities policies, including child care provision, in the agencies.

Traffic Forecasts

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 29, on what date revised traffic forecasts will be available. [59616]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As I explained to the hon. Member in my answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 29, the Department is currently planning a work programme to take forward revisions of the 1997 National Road Traffic Forecasts to reflect the impact of the New Deal for Transport. Once this planning work is complete and we have had an opportunity to consult the Commission for Integrated Transport we will be able to set a target date for the publication of a new set of forecasts.

Planning Policy Guidance

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to issue new planning policy guidance on housing. [59669]

Mr. Raynsford: I expect to publish the draft of the new PPG3 on Housing for consultation in the New Year.

Telecommunications

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to change planning controls over development carried out by licensed telecommunications code system operators. [60158]

Mr. Caborn: In July 1998 we published for public comment a number of proposed changes to the permitted development rights granted to licensed telecommunications code system operators under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 (GPDO). These were set out in the consultation paper "Telecommunications Development Control". The proposed changes reflected the Government's commitment to striking the right balance between encouraging the establishment of an efficient and modern national telecommunications network and protecting the environment.

Our main proposal was for the introduction of a new two-stage "prior approval" procedure in respect of applications for ground-based masts in sensitive locations in order to allow for greater public consultation over their siting and appearance. Respondents to the consultation paper were highly supportive of the principle of increasing the opportunity for public comment. However, a number of local planning authorities and telecommunications operators expressed concern over the complexity of the procedure proposed. There were also concerns that the introduction of a distinction between sensitive and non-sensitive sites would lead to uncertainty about how any application was going to be handled and how long it would take, and would disadvantage those living in non-sensitive areas. We have taken account of these concerns and concluded that we should proceed with a new single-stage prior approval procedure of 42 days for ground-based masts. This will include a requirement that the operator should erect a site notice to publicise the development proposed. The revised approach will provide the public with a clear opportunity to comment to the local planning authority on the siting and appearance of all proposals to erect ground-based masts under the GPDO.

A clear majority of the respondents supported our other proposals for changes to the GPDO, particularly those to strengthen planning controls over telecommunications development in Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs). The Department is now preparing the necessary GPDO Amendment Order and guidance to implement the changes and will consult on drafts. The draft guidance will include advice on the possible use of planning obligations to secure mast sharing, taking into account the comments received in the recent consultation exercise.

The Government attach great importance to minimise the impact of telecommunications infrastructure on the environment. The new prior approval procedure for ground-based masts and strengthened planning controls in SSSIs will contribute to that objective. Our planning policies are already directed to making good use of existing masts and buildings for the installation of new antennas and to encouraging operators and local planning authorities to work together to identify mast sites that are satisfactory from both an environmental and a technical point of view.

I am, however, keen to discuss with the telecommunications industry what more can be done on all sides to minimise the environmental impact of new telecommunications development. To that end I shall be meeting with representatives of the industry at the earliest available opportunity.

Greening Government Initiative

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the response to the Second Report of the Environmental Audit Committee on the Greening Government initiative (HC 517) will be published. [59943]

Mr. Prescott: I am pleased to announce the publication today of the Government's response to the Environmental Audit Committee Report on Greening Government. We have been able to take on board and respond positively to many of the Committee's recommendations. I congratulate the Environmental Audit Committee on taking a broad and constructive approach in its Greening Government report, and welcome its intention to keep the issues it raises under review.

This response promises early action in a number of important areas:

The terms of reference of ENV (the Cabinet Committee on the Environment) have been amended to make it explicit that its remit includes co-ordination of sustainable development issues.

Green Ministers will report regularly to ENV Committee and will prepare an annual report on their activities for publication; the first published report will be next summer.

Sir Richard Wilson will be reissuing the Guide to Cabinet Committee Business reminding Departments to consider any significant environmental costs and benefits of proposals in papers for Cabinet Committees, seeking DETR's views as appropriate. We shall be reviewing this system at the end of 1999; I want to be sure that it is delivering the changes that I am determined will be made.

Where possible Departments will consult on and make available their environmental appraisals.

By the end of this Parliament I want each Department to have begun introducing an environmental management system where deemed efficient and cost-effective and to have collected a set of examples of good practice, in greening policies and operations.

Whenever Government create a new body we shall consider the case for incorporating sustainable development into its remit. I have asked Green Ministers to consider and report to the Cabinet Committee on the Environment on how far sustainable development can be incorporated into the remit of all existing Departments and NDPBs.

British Waterways

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for recruiting a new Chairman for British Waterways. [60232]

Mr. Meale: The appointment of the current chairman of the Board of British Waterways (BW), Bernard Henderson, expires next April.

I have appointed recruitment consultants, Saxton Bampfylde Hever plc, to assist in identifying suitable potential candidates to succeed Mr. Henderson. I have asked the consultants to provide a preliminary list of names by the end of November.

The new Chairman's main priority will be to implement the Government's forthcoming decisions on BW's future. The selected candidate will need to have the skills, experience, ability and vision to lead a public sector business with a turnover of over £100m per annum and 1,700 employees and to develop successful and innovative partnerships with the private, public and voluntary sectors, including substantial funding activities.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the City Challenge schemes currently in operation, stating for each the number or amount of (a) private sector leverage, (b) development completed, (c) net jobs created, (d) jobs preserved, (e) land reclaimed and (f) new business start-ups. [59076]

Mr. Meale: There is only one City Challenge scheme currently in operation—North Tyneside—which, exceptionally, was granted a sixth year, until March 1999, to complete its programme. Government funding for the first round of eleven City Challenge Pacemaker partnerships came to an end in March 1997 and for 19 of the remaining 20 second round partnerships in March 1998.

The latest key outputs for North Tyneside, taken from their 1997–98 Annual Report, are:

(a) £1,262.3 million private sector leverage;

(b)(i) 3,027 dwellings completed/improved;

(ii) 280,431 sq.m. of new/improved business and commercial floorspace;

(c) 4,701 net permanent jobs created;

(d) 6,281 jobs preserved;

(e) 192 hectares of land reclaimed/improved; and

(f) 344 new business start-ups.

Ofwat

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what monitoring he carries out on the composition of the regional customer service committees appointed by the Director of Ofwat. [59336]

Mr. Meale: Information about appointments to, and the composition of, the regional Customer Service Committees established by the Director General of Water Services are contained in his Annual Reports, copies of which are in the Library. Biographical details about Chairmen and Members of the Committees are published in their Annual Reports 'Representing Water Customers', copies of which are also in the Library and can be found on the OFWAT web site.

I understand that the Director General aims to ensure that membership of the committees is drawn from all sections of the community so that each committee has members with a wide range of expertise and backgrounds, including knowledge of the difficulties facing customers with special needs and those from different ethnic groups.

Beverage Containers

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce a deposit system for beverage containers; and if he will make a statement. [59560]

Mr. Meale: The Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997, which came into force in March 1997, place obligations on certain businesses to recover and recycle specified tonnages of packaging waste based on the amount of packaging that they handle.

The Regulations do not have particular provisions on re-use beyond the fact that producers do not have to include the tonnage of packaging they are re-using in the calculation of their obligation. Re-using packaging can therefore significantly reduce compliance costs.

There are no plans to introduce a mandatory deposit system for beverage containers in the UK. We would want to look carefully at whether such a measure would contravene European law because it would penalise producers of single trip packaging because it could be anti-competitive.

However, there is nothing to prevent businesses from introducing deposit systems themselves, and some may indeed do so to ensure that their re-use systems are as effective as possible.

Rail Fares

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 27 October 1998, Official Report, column 109, what briefing he received on the research by OPRAF published on 22 October before 30 September. [59504]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 12 November 1998]: My right hon. Friend's office received a letter about this research on 21 September. He was briefed on it in October.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the Environmental Stakeholders Forum for Genetic Modifications to be in operation; and what its terms of reference will be. [59684]

Mr. Meale: Further to my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment's statement to the House of Lords Select Committee on 21 October, we are currently exploring how best to take forward the concept of an Environmental Stakeholders Forum. No decision has yet been made on the establishment of such a group or on its terms of reference.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the ecological monitoring of farm-scale trials of genetically modified crops will involve; and if he will make a statement. [59683]

Mr. Meale: The specification and details for the ecological monitoring of farm scale plantings of genetically modified crops are still in the early stages of development. An announcement will be made in due course.

Waterways (Pollution)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the role of construction companies in the pollution of waterways in the UK; and if he will give a breakdown by industry of pollution incidents in waterways since 1990. [59693]

Mr. Meale: The Environment Agency report "Water Pollution Incidents in England and Wales 1997", published in June 1998, reported that there were 588 substantiated construction industry pollution incidents in 1997. This represents an increase of 15% from the previous year (509 incidents in 1996).

The Agency identified two main problems on construction sites. The first major problem, silt, can be dealt with through careful management of surface water run-off. The second is oil storage. The Government are considering the need for new controls to set minimum standards for industrial and commercial oil storage installations which will complement other initiatives aimed at reducing the number of such incidents.

The Agency is continuing with initiatives to tackle the number of incidents from this sector in order to improve the industry's environmental performance. It has worked closely with the Construction Industry Research and Information Association (CIRIA) on a number of projects to reduce pollution, minimise waste and to promote sustainable construction, and is represented on the Construction Industry Environmental Forum (CIEF) which is sponsored by my Department. The Agency has also produced specific information and guidance to raise awareness of environmental issues amongst construction and demolition workers.

A breakdown by industry of substantiated water pollution incidents reported by the Environment Agency is attached for 1995–1997. Figures prior to this are not comparable as data collection methods have changed.

Dioxins (Derbyshire)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make arrangements for the testing of dioxin levels at the site of Avenue Cokeworks, Wingerworth, Derbyshire. [59597]

Mr. Meale: I refer to a statement made by the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Wellasey (Angela Eagle), on 29 April 1998, Official Report, columns 129–30, about the testing of dioxin levels at the site of the former Avenue Cokeworks at Wingerworth in Derbyshire.

The activities at this site, which ceased operation in 1992, were not considered to be significant sources of dioxins. Only background levels of dioxins have been detected in the sludge from tanks where drainage water from the site is collected and no significant dioxin levels have been detected in the sediments of the River Rother upstream of its confluence with the River Doe Lea. The Environment Agency has no plans to initiate new tests for dioxins at the site.

Nuclear Discharges

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he plans to take to return technetium 99 discharges to pre-1994 levels; and if he will make a statement; [59919]

(2) pursuant to the statement by the Environment Agency of October in relation to the commissioning of the mixed oxide fuel plant at Sellafield, what plans he has to reconsider and extend the remit currently available to the Environment Agency; [59920]

(3) what action he is taking to direct the Environment Agency to reassess the fundamental justification for licensing the mox plant in the light of environmental and safety issues; [59921]

(4) what account he intends to take of the international agreement reached at the OSPAR conference in July at Sintra in responding to the Environment Agency's statement relating to liquid discharge limits. [59918]

Mr. Meale: The Agency's proposed decisions were received in my Department on 2 November. Requests have been made to Ministers to call in the applications for their own determination. These requests are being considered carefully and my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will announce their decision as soon as they are able to do so.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in response to the statement by the Environment Agency on 23 October relating to the Sellafield MOX plant and variations to BNFL's site discharge authorisations. [59917]

Mr. Meale: In response to the statement by the Environment Agency on 23 October, 4 letters relating to the Sellafield MOX plant and 2 letters relating to the variations to BNFL's site discharge authorisations have been received.

Sellafield

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Trade Secretary in respect of environmental considerations applying to the terms of reference of the recently commissioned KPMG report exploring future options for Sellafield. [59922]

Mr. Meale: None, but KPMG have met my officials to discuss various aspects of their review for the Government of the options for BNFL's future.

Ancient Woodland

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to direct English Nature to revise its criteria for inclusion on the inventory of ancient woodland to cover smaller woods; and if he will make a statement. [59923]

Mr. Meale: There are practical difficulties associated with extending the scope of the inventory, which already identifies ancient woodland of higher than average value for wildlife in England.

Unimproved Grassland

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to require English Nature to compile inventories of unimproved grassland; and if he will make a statement. [59924]

Mr. Meale: English Nature completed a programme of compiling inventories of lowland semi-natural grassland for all English counties in 1997. English Nature intend to update these periodically.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

World Heritage Sites

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the Government are doing to ensure that natural World Heritage sites are represented in the list of new tentative sites that will be put forward to UNESCO. [59374]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I will carefully consider the responses to the recent Consultation Paper, which included suggested natural sites to be included in a new Tentative List of potential UK World Heritage Sites, before reaching a final decision on which natural heritage sites should be included.

After-school Clubs

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much of the money which the New Opportunities Fund will receive during the licence period to September 2001 will be allocated to providing children with sporting opportunities at after-school clubs. [59936]

Mr. Chris Smith: The New Opportunities Fund will commit £400 million to out of school hours activities during the current licence period to September 2001. Within this, £180 million will be committed to education activities, £200 million to childcare, and £20 million to integrated projects combining both childcare and education.

Out of school hours education projects should involve at least half of all secondary schools, at least a quarter of all primary schools, and at least half of all special schools by 2001. Out of school childcare projects should provide childcare places catering for 865,000 children by 2003.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister recently announced an extra £400 million for the New Opportunities Fund between now and 2001. We are consulting on how this money should be spent and propose that part of the additional amount should be committed to an expansion of the existing out of school hours initiative, to enhance the contribution made by summer schools not only to literacy, numeracy and opportunities for arts, but also to sport.

No specific amount has been earmarked for providing children with sporting opportunities at after-school clubs, but activities offered may include sporting and outdoor learning activities, and structured, learning-oriented play. The amount allocated for sport will be determined by the New Opportunities Fund in response to the applications received.

Terrestrial Television

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the coverage of terrestrial television services throughout the United Kingdom is planned. [60233]

Janet Anderson: The BBC and Independent Television Commission (ITC) are jointly responsible for arrangements for the transmission of terrestrial televisions services across the UK under the terms of the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996 and the Royal Charter and the Government's Agreement with the BBC. This includes planning coverage of BBC and commercial television services in accordance with general Government directions on the use of the television broadcasting spectrum. I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses a copy of the Government's guidance note to the BBC and ITC on the use of spectrum between 470 and 854 MHz which has been assigned to television broadcasting.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the registers held by her Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59739]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development does not hold any registers which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what childcare provision is made available by her Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59729]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development provides holiday playschemes at both Headquarters sites.

The site in East Kilbride operates under a three-way partnership made up of DFID, Inland Revenue and Scottish Nuclear. The site in London is part of the Whitehall Holiday Playscheme, run by the Cabinet Office at three sites in central London and open to a large proportion of Government Departments.

The figures requested are as follows:

	East Kilbride	London
Cost to parents	£10 annual registration fee per family £7.00 per child per day	£16.11 per child per day paid by DFID of which £8.05 per child is paid by the parent
Number of parents using the facilities:
1996–97	19	20
1997–98	15	17
Proportion of total staff in DFID using facilities:
1996–97	3.8%	3%
1997–98	3.3%	2.8%

Providing access to the holiday playschemes is only one of a range of family friendly policies that are available to staff. Other benefits include paid maternity leave at full pay, paternity leave, extended career breaks (up to a maximum of five years) and special leave for domestic emergencies. To help staff balance work and family life, they are also able to apply to work part-time or flexible hours, to job-share or to work from home.

Vocational Educational Training

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the importance of vocational educational training in eradicating poverty; and if she will make a statement. [59876]

Mr. Foulkes: This Department has in the past carried out a number of reviews of training, much of which has been of an academic or technical nature. Vocational educational training has been shown to contribute best to poverty eradication when it is closely targeted on the needs of poor individuals and related to the conditions in which they are living. We are in the process of designing a 'Skills for Development' programme which will address the needs in developing countries for a variety of skills including policy level, management, technical and livelihood skills.

Work currently under way includes a project in India which will investigate and provide for the skills needs of poor people to improve their employability in local industries and enterprises, via a non-formal community college whose work is firmly rooted in the local context. The project incorporates a management partnership between Bilston College in Staffordshire and the Community College in Madras. We intend that this initiative will be assessed for its impact on poverty and growth in the local economy.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what departmental resources are currently allocated to vocational educational training programmes; and if she will provide details of the programmes. [59877]

Mr. Foulkes: The information requested is not readily available. I will reply by Monday 23 November with the information requested, and will send a copy to the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Badgers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimates she has made of (a) the number of badgers in Northern Ireland, (b) the highest and lowest densities per square kilometre and (c) the level of tuberculosis in those populations. [59037]

Mr. Paul Murphy: From a survey carried out in 1994 there are estimated to be around 38,000 badgers in Northern Ireland.

Based on the survey the highest density recorded in one area of Northern Ireland was 15 badgers per square kilometre. Other areas had densities as low as 1 or 2 badgers per square kilometre.

Information is not available on the level of tuberculosis in these badger populations.

Down Area Plan

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what work has been undertaken in respect of the review of the Down Area Plan; and what consultations have taken place with (a) interested bodies and (b) public representatives in respect of the review of the plan. [59537]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Planning Service under its Chief Executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 16 November 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the review of the Down Area Plan.

Work on a new Plan for the Ards and Down District Council areas is programmed in the Planning Service's Corporate and Business Plans 1998–99 to 2000–01 to commence in the 1998–99 business year. While it was originally envisaged that work would commence in the Autumn, unfortunately, there has been some slippage. The Planning Service now intends publishing the statutory notice initiating the Plan early in the New Year, and to make a presentation to, and commence discussions with, both Councils on or about the second week in January 1999.

I do hope this is helpful.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Former Secretary of State for Wales

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if Mr. Alan Steele of Her Majesty's Treasury Solicitors telephoned The Sun newspaper on 3 November in connection with the resignation of the former Secretary of State for Wales; [59570]

(2) what instructions were given by the Treasury Solicitor to Mr. Alan Steele to contact newspapers over the resignation of the former Secretary of State for Wales; [59572]

(3) what responsibilities Mr. Alan Steele of the Treasury Solicitor's Office holds for press relations; [59574]

(4) what position Mr. Alan Steele holds in the Treasury Solicitor's Department. [59571]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) on 12 November 1998, Official Report, column 293.

Legal Aid

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Attorney-General how many applications for legal aid in matrimonial cases were (a) made and (b) granted in each of the last three years. [59205]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested regarding matrimonial cases is as follows:

Matrimonial proceedings

Year	Applications received	Applications granted
1995–96	141,352	103,705
1996–97	128,488	91,914
1997–98	120,489	85,808

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if the committee will consider recommending that relevant interests which appear on questions on the Order Paper also appear when answers are printed in the Official Report. [59812]

Mrs. Roe: I will put the hon. Gentleman's proposal before my Committee at an early opportunity.

CABINET OFFICE

Special Advisers

Ms Oona King: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the pay of Special Advisers. [60340]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: On coming into office, the Government implemented existing proposals for a pay structure for Special Advisers based on a single undifferentiated pay range (£24,349—£73,484). This arrangement, which made no distinctions based on level of responsibilities or duties and contained a system of performance pay to be determined by Ministers themselves, has proved unrealistic in practice.

I am today placing in the Libraries of the House details of a new pay structure for Special Advisers extending from £26,000 to £76,056 (the scale has been uprated by inflation) but with three bands. This is intended to provide a clear and coherent framework for Special Advisers' pay based on their role and responsibilities, and is based on the salaries of the permanent civil servants alongside whom they work. All Special Advisers will have moved to the new arrangement by 1 December 1998. There will be no performance pay.

The salaries of all Special Advisers as at 1 December 1998 are set out in the following table, in bands of £10,000:

10,001 to 20,000	1
20,001 to 30,000	14
30,001 to 40,000	19
40,001 to 50,000	13
50,001 to 60,000	10
60,001 to 70,000	7
70,001 to 80,000	3
80,001 to 90,000	0
90,001 to 100,000	2
100,001 to 110,000	1

The highest paid Advisers are Keith Hellawell, Alastair Campbell and Jonathan Powell. Their salaries are outside the new three-band structure. Their salary arrangements will remain unchanged. They received a 2 per cent. increase from 1 April in line with other senior civil servants.

The average salary of Special Advisers under this Government is £45,378, compared with £46,421 under the last Government.

The move to the new arrangements will, for this year, take the place of the pay award for Special Advisers. The arrangements will be brought into place on a staged basis for departmental advisers. For future years, the intention is that the pay bands will be uprated in line with changes to the Senior Civil Service pay bands. In No. 10 there has been a restructuring of the roles and responsibilities of certain members of the Policy Unit and other Special Advisers in the light of the experience of the first year in Government. These new arrangements have been in place since 1 July 1998.

The estimate for the total pay bill for 1998–99 for Special Advisers, taking account of these changes, remains at £3.6 million, the figure given by the Prime Minister on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on the progress made by the Government in ensuring that the UK deals with potential millennium bug problems. [59670]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to this House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the libraries of the House and on the Internet.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Council what action the Government have taken to ensure that essential facilities in public services are millennium compliant. [59221]

Mrs. Beckett: The Prime Minister has set up a Ministerial Group, which I chair, supported by a dedicated Year 2000 team in the Cabinet Office, to drive forward action across the private and public sectors to ensure that the delivery of essential public services is not materially disrupted by the failure of electronic systems as a result of the Millennium bug.

The Government have put in place a centralised monitoring programme to review the progress that departments and agencies and key organisations within the wider public sector are making in tackling the bug. All departmental returns are reviewed, and any areas of concern are followed up with the relevant department. The Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency provide detailed advice and guidance to departments on tackling the Bug.

We have also set up through Action 2000 a National Infrastructure Forum. The Forum brings together the major providers and users of infrastructure services to share best practice and compliance information. As a key part of the work of the Forum, Action 2000 is leading an Independent Assessment Project to assess the progress made by key service providers in achieving Millennium compliance.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Council what contingency plans the Government have made in respect of problems with essential public services. [59222]

Mrs. Beckett: Legislation provides for contingency plans to be drawn up to deal with civil emergencies in key utilities such as water, gas, and electricity and these arrangements are already in place.

All central government departments and agencies have been asked to have initial year 2000 contingency plans in place by January 1999. Departments will be required to develop and update these plans as their own year 2000 programmes mature and as more information about the compliance of their suppliers and key infrastructure service providers becomes available.

We are also funding Action 2000 to run an Independent Assessment Project to evaluate the Year 2000 readiness efforts of key service providers. This includes assessment of contingency planning.

TREASURY

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department will make all future UK quota increases to the IMF subject to parliamentary approval on the floor of the House. [56525]

Ms Hewitt: Section 1(2) of the International Monetary Fund Act 1979 stipulates that, before the Treasury may make an order increasing the UK's quota, a draft of the Order must be approved by a resolution of the House of Commons.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to ensure that recipient countries of loans satisfy more stringent disclosure requirements as a condition for further lending; and what are the current disclosure requirements. [56531]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his statement to the House on 2 November 1998, Official Report, columns 559–74, immediate action to promote transparency in fiscal policy, financial and monetary policy, and corporate governance should be key components in any reform programme which the IMF and the World Bank agree in coming months. The UK's Executive Director will carefully monitor IMF and World Bank programmes in this respect. He and other G7 Executive Directors have issued a joint statement which commits them to work towards greater disclosure in this area.

To promote greater transparency and disclosure of information in the public and private sectors, the Chancellor had previously called for the urgent development and implementation of internationally agreed codes of good conduct that all countries should adopt and apply, on fiscal policy—which the IMF have now completed—monetary and financial policy, and corporate governance.

The G7 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors emphasised their support for this approach in their recent statement on strengthening the financial system. They called upon the IMF to publish in a timely and systematic way the results of its surveillance of the degree to which each of its member countries meets internationally recognised codes and standards of transparency and disclosure in the form of a Transparency Report.

The current disclosure requirements are decided on a case by case basis and relate to the performance criteria of each loan.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the report on the Mexican debt crisis written internally within the IMF by Alan Whittome. [56532]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: The Chancellor has made clear his view that there should be a general presumption in favour of publishing IMF documents, except where this might compromise confidentiality. Decisions on the publication of Fund documents rest with the IMF Executive Board.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government will propose that the IMF be remitted to engage in market borrowing. [56530]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: The Government have no plans to propose that the IMF be remitted to engage in market borrowing.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to ensure greater transparency in respect of the disclosure requirements for countries in receipt of IMF loans. [56533]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: In his statement to the Interim Committee of the IMF on 4 October, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that, in most cases, there is a strong argument for publishing Letters of Intent thereby making it clear to the public what has been agreed between the authorities and the IMF. At that meeting, IMF Governors endorsed increased IMF transparency, including the broader publication of Letters of Intent. The Chancellor has continued to emphasise the importance of this in his capacity as chairman of the G7 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors. In their recent statement on strengthening financial systems, the G7 reiterated the need for greater transparency in respect of IMF programmes.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to ensure that the IMF's accounts make provision for debts in the same manner as private sector institutions. [56529]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: The Government believe that the Fund must perform its responsibilities in an open and transparent way that enhances public confidence.

The IMF's financial statements are prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and are certified as representing a true and fair view of the Fund's financial position by an external audit committee. The IMF's Annual Report contains further information on its liquidity position and borrowing.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will request the IMF to commission an independent study of the way they operate in respect of systemic risk in the global financial system. [56521]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor has called on the IMF to develop a formal mechanism for systematic evaluation, involving external input, of the effectiveness of its operations, programmes, policies and procedures.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the public sector financial obligation in each of the next ten years arising from PFI projects signed since 1 May 1997; and in each case what is the margin of error. [58662]

Mr. Byers: The information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) number and (b) total value of Private Finance Initiative projects signed since 1 May 1997; and estimate their impact on the profile of public sector borrowing in each of the next 10 years indicating the margin of error in his estimates. [58495]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Since 1 May 1997, 61 PFI projects have been signed which will result in total capital investment of £3.8 billion—equal to the investment from projects signed in the previous 5 years (excluding CTRL).

Almost all signed PFI projects are accounted for wholly as service contracts. The capital investment by the private sector supplier has no impact on public sector net borrowing. Future service payments by the public sector score in total current expenditure, which is a factor in the calculation of net borrowing.

One exception is the Ministry of Defence project for accommodation for military personnel at Lossiemouth, part of which will be accounted for as capital expenditure. Current estimates indicate that this will result in £24 million being scored in public sector net borrowing in 1999–2000.

Labour Statistics

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to ensure that the unemployment statistics represent the numbers available for and seeking work. [59313]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Caroline Flint, dated 16 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on unemployment statistics.

The ONS measure of unemployment, derived from the Labour Force Survey, is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: out of work, want a job, have actively sought work in the previous 4 weeks and are available to start work within the next fortnight or; out of work and have accepted a job which they are waiting to start in the next fortnight. The ILO methodology has been in use since 1984, and since April 1998 ILO unemployment estimates have been published every month.

ILO unemployment, as measured by the LFS, has high sampling variability for areas below regional level and quarterly unemployment data is only published for larger local authorities. There is an annual Local Area Database (LAD) which, by combining four quarter's samples, provides more robust estimates down to Local Authority/Unitary Authority level. However, the estimates of ILO unemployment for many LAs/UAs are still below the ONS publication threshold of 6,000 for annual averages.

ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count. The claimant count records the number of people claiming unemployment-related benefits. These are currently the Job Seeker's Allowance (JSA) and National Insurance credits, claimed at Employment Service local offices. People claiming JSA must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made. They enter into a Jobseeker's agreement setting out the action they will take to find work and to improve their prospects of finding employment.

The claimant count is accurate down to very small geographic areas, such as postcode sectors and wards, from which aggregations such as Parliamentary Constituencies can be made. It is unaffected by sampling variability since it is a 100 per cent count.

ONS is currently investigating improving both the range of labour market indicators available at a local level and the range of geographies for which they are available.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the Don Valley constituency have (a) retired from work, (b) taken voluntary redundancy and (c) been made compulsorily redundant for the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available; and what these figures represent as a proportion of the workforce. [59310]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Caroline Flint, dated November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on people in the Don Valley constituency who have been made redundant or retired from employment.

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) is the ONS's major source of labour market data on individuals including redundancies. It can provide information on why people who are not in employment left their last job (although voluntary and compulsory redundancy are not separately identified). Such analyses can be restricted to people who have left their last job within the last 12 months. However, no LFS data is available at constituency level and no data below county level is available for such analyses. As with any sample survey the LFS is subject to sampling variability and even for South Yorkshire such an analysis will not yield reliable estimates. Unfortunately, no other source can provide the information requested either.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of new jobs in Doncaster Borough, broken down by sector, in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [59312]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Caroline Flint, dated 16 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the number of new jobs in the Doncaster Borough.

Statistics for employee jobs in Doncaster Local Authority District by broad industry group are available from the ONS Annual Employment Survey (AES). The latest results are for September 1996, which can be compared with September 1995. You can access this information in the House of Commons Library through the NOMIS database.

The figures for September 1997 are planned to be available from NOMIS from May 1999.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of revenues from stamp duty in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 is attributable to intellectual property transactions. [59299]

Ms Hewitt: Total receipts from stamp duty (including stamp duty reserve tax) in 1997–98, the latest available year, were £3,455 million. It is estimated that stamp duty on transactions of intellectual property amounted to around £5 million.

Pension Mis-selling

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the notifications he has (a) received and (b) approved of transfers of funds from life fund surpluses to compensate victims of pension mis-selling, indicating the insurance company and amounts concerned. [59449]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have looked very carefully at where the costs of compensation should fall, and have settled on a very clear and proper principle: the costs of compensating victims of mis-selling should be shared and borne by those who stand to share in the profit of the company. Hence, the burden is distributed between policyholders and shareholders.

There is no legal requirement for insurance companies either to notify or to receive the prior approval of the Treasury of their intention to use surpluses in life funds to compensate victims of pension mis-selling. Although the Treasury has no direct role in approving the use of funds for this purpose it does have a general duty under the Insurance Companies Act 1982 to ensure that insurance companies are able to meet the reasonable expectations of their policyholders. As the then Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), told my hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) on 1 July 1997, Official Report, columns 94–95, the Treasury has issued guidance to companies on where the compensation costs of pension mis-selling should fall.

In order to monitor compliance with this guidance, companies were asked in October 1994 to provide Insurance Directorate with information about how the costs were to be attributed. The Directorate has also periodically asked companies to provide details of the compensation they have paid and the provisions they have made for future compensation claims. However, the information was supplied to the Treasury on a confidential basis and so cannot be made publicly available on an individual company basis. The table provides aggregated information about how the costs are being attributed by proprietary companies.

Attribution of compensation costs in the case of proprietary companies

Source of funds within the company	Number of companies	Compensation paid up to 31 March 1998 (£ million)	Provisions held for future compensation costs (£ million)
Long term fund (non-profit)	37	310	1,600
Long term fund (with-profit)	20	1,480	3,100
Long term fund (mixture of non-profit and with-profit)	6	50	320
Shareholder funds	4	15	75
Mixture of shareholder funds and long term fund	3	15	35
Indemnities	3	50	230
Total	73	1,920	5,360

Clearly, in the case of a mutual company, there is no alternative but for policyholder funds to be used to meet the costs of compensation. 16 mutual life offices had paid some £250 million of compensation up to March 1998 and had made further provisions of a total of some £800 million.

Government Debt (Euros)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to redenominate sterling debt in euros. [59520]

Ms Hewitt: If the UK joins the single currency, the Government would expect to redenominate sterling debt soon after Stage 3 entry. Detailed decisions would have to be taken nearer the time.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of Government debt is denominated in euros; and what estimate he has made of how this will change in the next three years. [59521]

Ms Hewitt: At the end of March 1998, 0.1 per cent. of central government gross debt was denominated in Euro. There was also 1.6 per cent. of ecu debt. Ecu debt will automatically be re-denominated into Euro at the start of 1999.

ERM 2

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how long sterling has unofficially remained within the fluctuation bands permitted under ERM 2; and if he will make a statement. [59791]

Ms Hewitt: The UK is not a member of ERM 2 and the Government have no intention of joining. The Government do not have a target for sterling but aim for a stable and competitive exchange rate over the medium term, consistent with the objective of price stability.

National Health Service (50th Anniversary)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of producing the 50 pence piece commemorating the 50th anniversary of the National Health Service. [59792]

Ms Hewitt: The manufacturing costs of individual coins are commercially confidential.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the monthly value of the real sterling effective trade-weighted exchange rate for each month since September 1992. [59418]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Monthly estimates of the UK's real effective exchange rate are published by the OECD each month in 'Main Economic Indicators'.

Export Growth Forecasts

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions on the future level of the value of the pound have been made in the pre-Budget report, November 1998, in order to derive forecasts for the growth of UK exports over the period from 1999 to 2002; and if he will make a statement. [59416]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: As stated in the Pre-Budget Report, the Treasury's latest forecast assumes that the sterling exchange rate moves in line with an uncovered interest parity condition, consistent with the interest rates underlying the economic forecast.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the direct effect on UK GDP growth in 1998 compared with 1997 of the slowdown in the rate of growth of UK export markets; and if he will make a statement. [59420]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Pre-Budget Report forecast published on 3 November shows UK export market growth slowing from 10½ per cent. in 1997 to 7¼ per cent. in 1998. On its own, this would have tended to reduce GDP growth between 1997 and 1998 by around 1 percentage point, before allowing for knock-on effects on domestic demand. The Pre-Budget Report forecast for GDP growth takes full account of all other relevant factors.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the proportion of the slowdown in export growth from the 1997 level attributable to (a) decline in UK export market growth and (b) decline in competitiveness, for each of the years (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2001. [59417]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The major part of the forecast deceleration in UK exports of goods and services between 1997 and 1999 can be accounted for by deceleration in UK export markets growth. After 1999, growth of UK export markets is forecast to pick up. Relevant figures are set out in the Pre-Budget Report published on 3 November.

Tax System

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what policies he is pursuing to simplify the tax system; and if he will make a statement. [59434]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Government are committed to simplifying the tax system where practicable to do so.

Motor Vehicle Imports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department has received on the cost to the Exchequer in lost revenue from the parallel import of motor vehicles from the Republic of Ireland to the UK; and what evaluation he has made of them. [59464]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Customs are not aware of any representations made on the cost to the Exchequer of lost revenue from the parallel import of motor vehicles from the Republic of Ireland to the UK.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the number of firms whose liability to pass on income tax and NICs collected from their employees is likely to be less than their liability to pay working families tax credit to their employees. [59450]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Government's intention is that any employers who can show that the income tax and NICs which they collect will not be sufficient to pay working families' tax credit to their employees will be able to obtain funding from the Inland Revenue. Reliable estimates of the number of firms which might be involved are not available at this stage.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he held with Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on the proposals contained in the Transport White Paper prior to his recent announcement of changes in Vehicle Excise Duty rates. [59508]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: As usual, all Government Departments with an interest worked together closely in developing the documents to which the hon. Member refers.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he made prior to the announcement of his decision of Vehicle Excise Duty rates of the relative merits of diesel cars in respect of (a) fuel efficiency and (b) pollution generation. [59518]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The consultation document published on 3 November sets out the options for the reform of Vehicle Excise Duty (VED). VED will, as usual, be considered at the time of the next Budget.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if changes to Vehicle Excise Duty will be revenue-neutral. [59507]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Decisions on Vehicle Excise Duty rates will, as usual, be announced at the time of the next Budget.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the cost to the Treasury of the £50 reduction in Vehicle Excise Duty for smaller cars and (b) the additional revenue that will be raised for the Treasury from increasing Vehicle Excise Duty on (i) larger cars, (ii) company cars, and (iii) LGVs in the course of a full financial year. [59506]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The consultation document published on 3 November sets out options for vehicle excise duty reform. The revenue implications will depend on the details of the option chosen.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he will take to ensure that motorists living in rural areas are not disproportionately affected by changes to Vehicle Excise Duty. [59505]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Government recognise that for some, especially those living in rural areas, car ownership can be a necessity. The consultation document published on 3 November sets out options for vehicle excise duty reform. A reduction in VED of £50 for the cleanest cars will, as a result of these reforms, be available to everyone, including those living in rural areas.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will introduce changes to Vehicle Excise Duty rates to take account of the inefficiency of aging vehicles; [59494]

(2) what measures he proposes to ensure that the use of car age as an emissions proxy for the purpose of setting Vehicle Excise Duty rates does not disproportionately affect lower income groups. [59503]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The options for a new system of vehicle excise duty are set out in the consultation document that was published on 3 November.

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Department provided the officials who prepared the initial drafts of the chapter on The Productivity Challenge in the November 1998 Pre-Budget report; and if he will make a statement. [59733]

Ms Hewitt: Chapter 3 of the Pre-Budget Report, like the rest of the document, was drafted by my officials in consultation with other departments where appropriate.

Treasury Employees (New Deal)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people who have been on the New Deal have been employed subsequently by Her Majesty's Treasury; and if he will make a statement. [59624]

Ms Hewitt: The department has recruited one person from the New Deal Gateway into an unsubsidised job, working in the Welfare to Work Team.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59724]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury participates in the Westminster Holiday Playscheme which provides childcare during school holidays for children between the ages of five and twelve. The cost to parents is currently £6.50 for each place booked.

The number of parents using the Playscheme facility on at least one occasion was 23 in the financial year 1996–97 and 22 in the financial year 1997–98. This represents 3 and 2 per cent. of total staff respectively.

Credit Unions

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to encourage credit unions to develop; and if he will make a statement. [60341]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury published a consultation document today with proposals to ease some of the current restrictions on credit unions, designed to encourage their growth whilst maintaining their traditional focus on the lower paid. The document also seeks views on the appropriate form of regulation when responsibility for it transfers from the Registry of Friendly Societies to the Financial Services Authority. Copies of the document have been placed in Libraries of the House

Petrol Smuggling

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what representations his Department has received on the cost to the Exchequer in lost revenue of the resale of petrol imported into the UK via the Republic of Ireland; [59465]

(2) what representations his Department has received on the cost to the Exchequer in lost revenue by petrol smuggling from the Republic of Ireland; and what evaluation he has made of them. [59463]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Chancellor has not received any representations specifically about smuggling of petrol from the Republic of Ireland into the UK. However, he has received representations about the level of smuggling of diesel from the Republic of Ireland into Northern Ireland.

HM Customs and Excise have no official estimates for the revenue lost to the Exchequer through such activity.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59736]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 30 June 1998, Official Report, column 177.

EU Council Recommendation 11393/97

Mr. Benn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the European Union Council Recommendation 11393/97, issued in Brussels on 28 October 1997. [59596]

Ms Hewitt: The European union Council Recommendation 11393/97 was sent, along with an explanatory memorandum, to the European Legislation Committee of the House of Commons and the Select Committee on the European Communities of the House of Lords on 17 November 1997. The document was deposited in the Houses of Parliament on 18 November 1997.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 198, and paragraph 2 of Cm 4076, what assessment he has made of the impact of gross domestic product growth below his Department's most pessimistic case on compliance with the golden rule. [60044]

Ms Hewitt: Paragraph 2.56 of the Pre-Budget Report published on 3 November 1998 explains that the fiscal rules apply over the economic cycle and that they are robust to errors in short-term growth forecasts. On the basis of the Government's prudent approach to the public finances, the golden rule will be met on average over the cycle.

Dorneywood

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which members of (a) Her Majesty's Treasury and (b) other Government departments have made use of Dorneywood since 1 May 1997; on how many occasions and for what purposes in each case; and if he will make a statement. [59626]

Ms Hewitt: I refer to the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to him by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 132.

Tax Relief (Seconded Staff)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of people each year who would benefit from tax relief on the salaries of staff seconded from business to educational establishments; and if he will make a statement. [59734]

Dawn Primarolo: No information is available about the number of businesses that will benefit from the proposal announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 27 October for a tax relief for a business which seconds an employee to educational establishments.

Liquor Duties (Harmonisation)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the harmonisation of liquor duties with other EU countries. [59830]

Dawn Primarolo: Member States are free to set excise duty rates at the levels they feel are appropriate to their own particular circumstances, subject only to the agreed minimum rates. The Government believe that there should be a levelling up of the minimum rates of excise duty on beer and wine but recognise that progress is likely to be in the long term. The mechanism for achieving this aim is through the European Commission's biennial reviews of the minimum rates of excise duties. The Commission's report on alcohol minimum rates, due by 31 December 1996, is awaited.

Progressive Beer Duty

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from small brewers concerning the introduction of progressive beer duty; and if he will make a statement. [59896]

Dawn Primarolo: I have received representations about progressive beer duty from the Independent Family Brewers of Britain and the Society of Independent Brewers. I have asked Customs and Excise to review the case for progressive beer duty and they will provide me with advice in due course.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will restate the Social Security Benefits expenditure from 1998–99 to 2001–02 in Table B12 of the pre-Budget report on the basis of unemployment at the April 1998 level. [59096]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 10 November 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

The estimated effects on Social Security benefits would be increases in expenditure of:

£ million

Year	Amount
1999–2000	240
2000–01	250
2001–02	260

Note:
These figures are consistent with the Social Security forecasts published in table B12 of the Pre-Budget Report but exclude figures for Northern Ireland.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Service Charter

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 28 October 1998, Official Report, columns 159–60, concerning complaints under the Court Service Charter, what analysis has been carried out of the nature of the complaints upheld; and what administrative or other changes this has led to in the Court Service. [59095]

Mr. Hoon: Where a complaint highlights weaknesses in procedures, changes are made to put these right. Examples of such changes include the introduction of additional checks when registering judgments and new measures to prevent disclosure of confidential information in adoption cases. The Court Service is currently introducing a standardised database to record the number and type of complaints made at its various courts and offices throughout England and Wales.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59741]

Mr. Hoon: There are no registers within the Lord Chancellor's Department that are open to hon. Members but not to the public. For a list of registers open for inspection I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 8 July 1998, Official Report, columns 520–21.

Freemasons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many members of the judiciary responded to his invitation to disclose membership of the freemasons; how many refused to respond; and how many have not yet responded. [59071]

Mr. Hoon: Following the Government's response to the Report of the Home Affairs Select Committee, Session 1996–97, on Freemasonry in the Police and the Judiciary, all serving members of the judiciary were invited by the Lord Chancellor to declare their Masonic status on a voluntary basis for the purpose of a Register. 5,290 questionnaires were distributed. As at 9 November, 5,033 office-holders had responded; of these, 64 had declined to disclose whether or not they are Freemasons. Replies are still coming in, but this left 257 outstanding.

Court Clerks

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to ensure that unqualified existing court clerks can become qualified as a solicitor or barrister without significant disruption to the work of (a) the courts and (b) the individuals concerned. [60194]

Mr. Hoon: Professionalisation is an essential part of the plans to modernise the magistrates' courts. It will equip legal advisers to handle new responsibilities and future changes in the legal system. It is important that everyone has confidence in the status and qualification of those advising lay justices.

After careful consideration of the impact on the magistrates courts and individuals, I have decided that those existing court clerks who will be aged 40 or older on 1 January 1999 will not be required to qualify, although they may do so if they wish. A number of training options will be made available to those existing court clerks required to qualify under the new rules. They are all study programmes designed for people engaged in full-time employment and include day release, distance learning, evening or weekend study. I am asking magistrates' courts committees to give existing court clerks up to one day off for each week of study, or time off in lieu if they do not select a day release option.

The Lord Chancellor's Department will meet the cost of tuition and the required study leave. The Department will also make funds available to meet the costs of care for children or other dependent relatives, such as the disabled and the elderly, where this responsibility would pose a problem for those undergoing training. Reasonable costs of necessary travel and accommodation will also be met. Magistrates' courts committees will be asked to provide details of every individual's training needs so that appropriate training arrangement can be made to meet the needs of the individual and the courts committees as far as possible.

Magistrates Courts Committees

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to make Magistrates' Courts Committees democratically accountable to the local communities they serve. [59081]

Mr. Hoon: Magistrates' Courts Committees (MCCs) are composed of magistrates for the area to which the committee relates, in accordance with Section 28 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997 (JPA). Section 6 of the JPA provides that, with few exceptions, magistrates may be appointed to an area only if they reside within 15 miles of that area. MCCs are therefore overwhelmingly made up of local magistrates.

MCCs are responsible for the efficient and effective administration of magistrates' courts in their area. There is a range of statutory and non-statutory provisions designed to ensure that the needs of court users are taken into account, and that the local community can be involved in the work of the MCC.

Section 30(4) of the JPA allows an MCC to act through sub-committees which, so long as they include at least one member of the MCC, can include non-members.

Section 30(9) of the JPA requires that at least once each calendar year, MCCs must admit members of the public to a meeting.

Section 30(10)—(12) of the JPA requires that minutes of every MCC meeting must be open for public inspection unless deemed confidential. If they are deemed confidential, the MCC must give reasons.

Section 31(6) of the JPA requires MCCs to have regard to the needs of disabled court users.

MCCs are required to submit to periodic independent inspection by Her Majesty's Magistrates' Court Service Inspectorate. The inspection process includes discussions with court users (both professional and non-professional). These discussions inform the Inspectorate's reports on individual MCC areas. The contents of the Inspectorate's report are made available to members of the public through a public information booklet for each area after it is inspected. The booklet contains a digest of the Inspectorate's findings and recommendations and the MCC's response.

New guidance on the production of annual reports was issued to MCCs in October 1998. All MCCs are required to submit annual reports for the financial year 1998–99 onwards, which contain key information. In their annual reports, amongst other things, MCCs will be expected to include information on when they published their first Charter and when that Charter was revised and updated to take account of the new model Charter issued by LCD, and the guidance issued by the Cabinet Office as part of the Service First programme. MCCs will be expected to report on the performance against three key charter standards in the body of the annual report. The setting of clear standards and reporting on how and whether they are achieved is a vital aspect of accountability to court users. The Service First Guidance places a significant emphasis on consulting users.

Communication with the community is demonstrated through MCCs' involvement in the Magistrates' Association's schools project and through Open Days. The Lord Chancellor has written to MCCs emphasising the importance he attaches to Open days and has asked each MCC to provide an annual return on the open days they have held in their areas. Reports submitted for the year to 30 September 1998 show the success of Open days. Consultation with court user groups and the guidance issued by Central Council on courthouse closures provide other examples of non-statutory consultation which enhances accountability.

Complaints provide a further method of non-statutory accountability to the community. Letters and telephone calls to MCC officials and LCD officials, letters to MPs and Ministers all enable the community to influence the operation of the MCC.

PRIME MINISTER

Staff (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, as at 1 October 1997 of members of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) No. 10 Policy Unit and (d) No. 10 Downing Street staff in total. [56841]

The Prime Minister: Information on the ethnic origin of civil servants is collected on a voluntary basis, using confidential questionnaires. The number and percentage of ethnic minority staff in the private office, Government special advisers and No. 10 Policy Unit and for No. 10 Downing Street in total are set out in the table. These figures are for 1 November 1998. We are unable to verify retrospective data for 1 October 1997.

European Union (Information)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure that, in future official publications informing the public about the European Union, lists of recommended sources for further contact include organisations opposed to closer union; and if he will list the criteria for inclusion there. [59810]

The Prime Minister: There are no set criteria concerning contact lists in UK Government publications about the EU. Where lists are given, they should normally include contact points for officials in Government Departments who can provide practical assistance. The lists should also, where appropriate, include relevant outside organisations.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the March meeting of Government press officers on better information in the EU; if he will list the delegates; and if he will place the (i) agenda and (ii) minutes of that meeting in the Library. [59806]

The Prime Minister: The meeting held on 27 March 1998 was an informal seminar to discuss the provision of information abut the EU. There were no minutes and the meeting did not draw conclusions. The General Affairs Council on 29 June, however, adopted Conclusions reflecting discussions at the meeting and subsequent follow-up by the Council. I have placed a copy of the programme, the objectives of the seminar, and a list of participants in the Libraries of both Houses.

Common Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on UK policy presentation at Poertschach on the Fourth Pillar; [59787]

(2) if the Government supported integration of the Western European Union into the European Union (a) during the course of the Amsterdam Treaty negotiations and (b) at Poertschach; and if he will make a statement. [59788]

The Prime Minister: At the Amsterdam European Council in June 1997, EU member states agreed that the Union should foster closer institutional relations with the WEU with a view to the possibility of the integration of the WEU into the Union, if member States agreed unanimously.

The meeting of Heads at Poertschach was an informal meeting in preparation for the full European Council in Vienna, at which a broad range of issues were discussed. No formal decisions were taken.

At the meeting I stressed the need for a stronger European Union Common Foreign and Security Policy underpinned by more defence capabilities. I did not advocate a particular institutional model.

European Union (Policy)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those attending meetings held at (a) the Cabinet Office and (b) 10 Downing Street, since 1 May 1997, to discuss the Government's approach to the European Union; and what criteria were used to determine who was invited. [59797]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Windsor (Mr. Trend) on 29 June 1998, Official Report, columns 32–33.

Ethical Foreign Policy Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those areas where EU policy has been modified as a result of the UK's ethical foreign policy initiative. [59793]

The Prime Minister: We work closely with our EU partners to promote universal respect for human rights and to achieve real improvements in the lives of ordinary people. For example, under our Presidency the EU agreed a common position on human rights in Africa, strengthened its international work in opposition to the death penalty and established guidelines for international election monitoring. The EU also adopted a Code of Conduct on Arms Sales under our Presidency.

Life Peers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those life peers appointed since 1990 who had been serving in local government prior to their appointment, and the local authorities on which they served. [58526]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 November 1998]: This information is not held centrally. However, I have asked my office to research this information and I will write to my hon. Friend in due course.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the results of UNSCOM's examinations of the presidential palaces in Iraq. [60093]

The Prime Minister: A full report on the UNSCOM/IAEA inspections of Presidential sites in Iraq from 26 March to 4 April was sent by the United Nations Secretary General to Security Council members on 15 April.

The report recorded a superficially co-operative atmosphere, but that the sites had very obviously been extensively cleared before the inspectors entered.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the lines of accountability which apply to UNSCOM. [60089]

The Prime Minister: UNSCOM is directly accountable to the United Nations Security Council.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 364, if he will ask the Iraqi Government for what reasons they require the removal of the UN weapons inspectors. [60091]

The Prime Minister: The Iraqi Government's announcements of 5 August and 31 October clearly state their reasons for withdrawing co-operation from UNSCOM and IAEA, and their conditions for the restoration of co-operation. United Nations Security Resolution 1205, adopted unanimously on 31 October, condemns Iraq's actions as a flagrant violation of its obligations under relevant Security Council Resolutions. What is needed is not further explanation from the Iraqi Government, but full compliance with their obligations.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 364, if he will place in the Library evidence found by the French and Swiss on all aspects of weapons destruction. [60092]

The Prime Minister: A multinational group of experts met on 22–23 October to consider all the results of the analyses of Iraqi missile fragments carried out by laboratories in the US, France and Switzerland. The expert's report concluded that the evidence from the three laboratories conflicted with Iraq's declarations that these warheads had never been filled with any CW agents, including VX. The Executive Chairman of UNSCOM, Richard Butler, submitted the group's report to the President of the United Nations Security Council on 26 October. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

WALES

Civil Servants (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms of the ethnic origin of civil servants in his Department, by grade, as at 1 October 1997. [56829]

Mr. Michael: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office office on 5 November 1998, Official Report, columns 666–70.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59735]

Mr. Michael: My Department has responsibility for the following public registers which are open to inspection:

Register of Social Landlords

Register of approved voluntary children's homes

Register of medical centres in Wales responsible for the administration of yellow fever vaccine

Register of independent schools in Wales

List of Buildings of Special Architectural Interest

Schedule of Ancient Monuments

Register of Historic Parks and Gardens

Register of Historic Landscapes.

There are no registers open for inspection by hon. Members which cannot be requested by members of the public under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what child care provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59731]

Mr. Michael: My Department is a member of a public sector consortium which provides a 60 place nursery. The consortium covers the cost of rent, rates and utilities. Parents are charged at a level intended to cover the costs of running and staffing the nursery. The current fee is £95 per week for a full time place.

Parents also contribute towards the costs of Easter and summer play schemes. This year the charge was £8 per day for the first child and £6 per day for additional children.

Parents usage of facilities

	1996–97		1997–98
	Number	Percentage of total staff	Number	Percentage of total staff
Nursery	46	2.0	44	1.9
Playschemes	49	2.1	55	2.4
Total of both schemes	95	4.1	99	4.3

In addition to these schemes my Department also supports a number of family friendly policies which include paid maternity leave at full pay, career breaks, paternity leave and special leave for domestic emergencies, part time working, jobsharing, flexi time and, homeworking.A review of the Department's Child Care Strategy is currently in progress.

SCOTLAND

Child Minders

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure better supervision and regulation of the arrangements made by commercial organisations which house young foreign students, who are on English language courses or exchanges, in private households in Scotland. [58810]

Mr. Galbraith: The Foster Children (Scotland) Act 1984 already regulates care provided for children under the age of 16 where the person providing or intending to provide the care is not a relative and where he or she proposes to care for a child for 28 days or longer.

As part of our response to the Kent Report on Children's Safeguards Review we have already announced our intention to consult on the introduction of a statutory Consultancy Index in Scotland which will hold information about people unsuitable to work with children and young people.

A Home Office let inter-departmental working group is presently looking at further safeguards to prevent unsuitable persons from working with children in paid or unpaid positions in the public, private and voluntary sectors. We shall consider what more needs to be done in this area in the light of the working group's report.

Adoption

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will commission a research study in Scotland on children adopted from care. [58809]

Mr. Galbraith: The case for a research study will be kept under review as the number of children adopted from care under the new procedures in the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 grows. A number of legislative changes, including improvements in the process for adoption from care, were recommended by The Review of Adoption Law in Scotland published in 1993. Those changes were introduced by the 1995 Act and associated regulations and came into effect from April 1997.

Marriage (Special Licences)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were married by special licence in Scotland in each of the last five years. [59023]

Mr. McLeish: Marriage by 'special licence' is not possible in Scotland. The Marriage (Scotland) Act 1977 requires a period of 14 days to elapse between the appropriate district registrar receiving from the parties formal Marriage Notices accompanied by birth certificates etc and the registrar issuing the Marriage Schedule, the document without which no marriage ceremony, civil or religious, may lawfully take place. Only in exceptional circumstances, for example terminal illness, can this period of notice be shortened, with the approval of the Registrar General.

Dental Services

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dentists currently treat NHS patients in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [59218]

Mr. Galbraith: At 30 September 1998, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 1,858 principal dentists recorded on Health Board dental lists to provide NHS general dental services. There were also 96 vocational trainees and 62 assistant dentists working to principal dentists. In addition, NHS patients may be treated by the Community Dental Service and the Hospital Dental Service which employed at 30 September 1997 (latest available figures) 278 and 314 dentists respectively.

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average cost of NHS treatment per patient in Scotland in the last year for which figures are available. [59217]

Mr. Galbraith: The average cost of NHS treatment per head of population in Scotland in 1996–97 was £504.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59721]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Office have two work place nurseries in Edinburgh. Subsidised places at holiday playschemes are offered to staff in Edinburgh and Glasgow. These operate during the Easter and summer school holiday periods.

In 1996–97 the cost of a full time nursery place was £63 per week and in 1997–98 the cost was £64.57 per week. In total 51 full-time nursery places are available. The service is provided by a private contractor under contract to The Scottish Office. Details of the number of staff using the service are not held by The Scottish Office.

NHS Hospital Beds

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many beds were available in National Health Service trust hospitals in each of the last three years (a) in total and (b) by trust area. [59732]

Mr. Galbraith: The number of average available staffed beds in NHS Trust hospitals for each of the last 3 years is given in the following table.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those companies to which the rights to charge and to collect tolls on the Skye Bridge are currently assigned. [59976]

Mr. Macdonald: The Secretary of State has assigned his rights to charge and collect tolls on the Skye Bridge to Skye Bridge Tolls Ltd (now Skye Bridge Ltd), in accordance with the provisions of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Skye Bridge toll order was printed and sold. [59975]

Mr. Macdonald: The Invergarry-Kyle of Lochalsh Trunk Road (A87) Extension (Skye Bridge Crossing) Toll Order 1992 (S.I.1992/1501) is a local order in terms of Regulation 4 of the Statutory Instrument Regulations 1947. As such, it was not required to be printed and sold. The Order was not subject to Parliamentary procedure. It complied fully with the procedures required in terms of the Roads (Scotland) Act 1984 as applied to the Order by the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has provided Miller Civil Engineering with a certificate demonstrating their lawful entitlement to perform the statutory function of toll collection on the Skye Bridge; and if he will make a statement. [59977]

Mr. Macdonald: No such certificate is necessary. Miller Civil Engineering Ltd, as part of their involvement in operating the Bridge, collect tolls on behalf of Skye Bridge Ltd, to whom the Secretary of State assigned the right to charge and collect tolls.

Mature Students

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will remove the statutory restriction which prevents mature students over the age of 50 years gaining access to student loans on recognised degree courses in Scotland. [59365]

Mrs. Liddell: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment announced on 8 June this year, we plan to extend eligibility for loans to those students aged 50 to 54 at the start of their courses who plan to return to employment.

This extension will take effect from Autumn 1999. It will apply to students starting courses in 1999–2000 and to students who started courses in 1998–99, except those who are entitled to continue receiving support under the previous arrangements. We are currently considering the arrangements in more detail and will provide full information for students early in 1999.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of mature students over the age of 50 years currently enrolled on courses in Scotland which will lead to a recognised university degree. [59366]

Mrs. Liddell: The latest available information, for 1996–97, is given. This includes students aged 50 or over, at Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) and Further Education Colleges (FECs), who were enrolled on first degree or postgraduate courses in Scotland.

Students aged 50 or over studying first degree or postgraduate degree courses in HEIs and FECs, 1996–97

	Full-time	Part-time	All
First Degree	464	330	794
Postgraduate	199	1,508	1,707
All	663	1,838	2,501

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the initial public expenditure outlay necessary to extend student loans to students over the age of 50 years who are undertaking degree level courses in Scottish colleges and universities. [59367]

Mrs. Liddell: Based on the number of such students in academic year 1996–97, the latest year for which figures are available, the cost of extending eligibility for student loans to all those aged 50 and over studying full-time at first degree level at institutions in Scotland would be in the region of £1.27 million in academic year 1998–99.

While it is unlikely that all these students would take up their entitlement, any such extension would in practice cover a larger group of eligible students who were studying on all full-time higher education courses up to first degree or equivalent level.

Standard Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the maximum available Maintenance Award (or Maintenance Award plus Student Loan Company Ltd Student Loan) in (a) 1968, (b) 1972, (c) 1977, (d) 1982, (e) 1987, (f) 1992 and (g) 1997 using 1997 as the reference year. [60009]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is set out in the table.

The figures represent the standard maintenance allowance (SMA) and, where appropriate, the full-year student loan available to an undergraduate student attending a standard length course and living away from the parental home outwith London. No account has been taken of means testing.

The rates used applied in the academic years quoted.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the (a) average and (b) most common length of time taken for the Criminal Cases Review Commission to reach a conclusion on a case. [59080]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that since April 1997 the average length of time taken, from receipt of the application, to reach a decision on cases (other than those which the Commission has determined do not meet the eligibility criteria laid down by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995) was 193 working days. The most common length of time taken was equally 182 working days and 256 working days (the same number of cases took each period).

Prisoners (Educational Attainment)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of educational attainment of inmates for the (a) Hatfield Young Offenders Institute, (b) HMP Lindholme and (c) HMP Moorlands at the time of admission; and what proportion of inmates were unemployed at the time of conviction. [59302]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is not available, as it could be obtained only by examining each prisoner's record at the three establishments.

Immigration

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers, by nationality, were refused leave to enter the United Kingdom and were detained overnight or longer, in each of the last five years. [59340]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The figures for 1993–97 are given in the table.

Correspondence

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter sent to him on 8 September by the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East regarding the case of Mr. Farooq Khalid Malik; and what inquiries he has made on the case since receipt of that letter. [59300]

Mr. Boateng: I received this and subsequent letters of 17 September and 20 October and replied to the hon. Member on 5 November answering the points raised.

Former Secretary of State for Wales

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he or his officials passed on to the Prime Minister or his officials all or part of the information received from the Metropolitan police before 11 a.m. on Tuesday 27 October 1998 regarding the right hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies); [59387]

(2) what briefing he or his officials received from the Metropolitan police before 11 a.m. on Tuesday 27 October 1998 regarding the right hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies); and what was the nature of the information passed to him on the that day. [59385]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Sutton Coldfield (Sir N. Fowler) on 10 November 1998, Official Report, columns 120–21.

Identity Parades

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the provision of two-way mirror identity parade facilities at police stations. [59408]

Mr. Boateng: The Government believe that the provision of two-way screens for identity parades at police stations is helpful. Such screens serve to protect and reassure witnesses who may be anxious about being seen by the person suspected of committing the offence.

The conduct of identification parades is regulated by the Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers (Code D) issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. This provides that an identification parade may take place either in a normal room or in one equipped with a screen permitting witnesses to see members of the parade without being seen.

The provision of facilities for the conduct of identification parades is a matter for chief officers. Figures are not collated centrally on the number of police stations equipped with such screens, or on those having purpose-built identification suites.

Colchester Young Offenders Institute

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the research carried out by Dr. Kate Painter into the experimental regime at Colchester young offenders institution to be published. [59407]

Mr. George Howarth: It is intended to publish the full results of the evaluation of the young offender regime at Colchester Military Corrective Training Centre at the end of 1999, when one-year reconviction data will be available. This will include the qualitative material gathered by Dr. Painter.

Medway Secure Training Centre

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place to ensure that young offenders at Medway Secure Training Centre receive a school placement on completion of the custodial part of their sentence. [59406]

Mr. Boateng: Individually tailored training plans include an education programme and are drawn up jointly by the trainee's key worker at the Secure Training Centre and the supervising officer from the home area. The supervising officer provides continuity throughout the sentence and helps ensure, as far as is practicable, that arrangements are in place for the trainee to return to full time education on release.

Staff at the Secure Training Centre are encouraged to contact relevant Educational Welfare Officers to discuss trainees' training plans and to contact Chief Education Officers at the beginning and end of the period in custody.

Young Offenders (Prisons)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which adult prisons were used for the remand of people aged 17 to 20 years on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest date for which such information is available; [59403]

(2) how many people aged 17 to 20 years were held on remand in adult prisons on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest date for which such information is available. [59402]

Mr. George Howarth: The available information relates to the remand population on the last day of the month and is given in the table.

Durham Prison

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Governor of HMP Durham as to (a) how many prisoners have recently been removed from the protection of Rule 43, (b) on what authority this has been done and (c) how many of those removed from Rule 43 have since been assaulted; and if he will make a statement. [59386]

Mr. George Howarth: As part of the governor's policy of seeking to integrate 'vulnerable' prisoners within the mainstream prisoner population, 75 Rule 43 prisoners at Durham prison were transferred from the former vulnerable prisoner unit to A wing during the week commencing 12 October 1998. This wing accommodates normal location prisoners, many of whom have earned 'enhanced' regime status by their behaviour and conduct in prison. None of the prisoners transferred were signed off Rule 43 protection.

This transfer was undertaken under the authority of the governor, with the aim of providing an improved prison regime for both vulnerable and normal location prisoners.

Staffing levels and the regime on A wing are designed to provide Rule 43 prisoners with the support they need to integrate successfully.

There have been four alleged assaults involving Rule 43 prisoners since the transfer took place, although one of these is believed to have been an incident of self harm.

Greater Manchester Police

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the resources available to Greater Manchester police for 1999–2000. [59388]

Mr. Boateng: On 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 915, my right hon. Friend announced that the police service in England and Wales would receive an additional £1.24 billion over three years from 1999–2000. Our plans allow for police expenditure to increase by 2.65 per cent. next year. No final decisions have been taken about the allocation of funding to individual police authorities for 1999–2000. Funding will be allocated by means of a needs based formula. We expect to announce provisional allocations towards the end of the year.

West Yorkshire Police

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information was obtained by unauthorised persons gaining access to the West Yorkshire police internal communications system; and what assessment he has made of the current security of the system. [59381]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that an individual has been charged with offences in relation to this matter under section 1 of the Computer Misuse Act 1990, and it would not, therefore, be appropriate for me to comment further.

Probation Hostels

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for market testing of probation hostels; and if he will make a statement. [59555]

Mr. George Howarth: I am grateful to the North East London Probation Service for agreeing to test whether an independent sector partner could run the Westbourne House approved hostel to at least the same standard as under the present arrangements at lower cost, although this will stop short of offering a contract for the hostel's operation to open tender. No decision on next steps, either at Westbourne House or more generally, will be taken until the outcome has been considered.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive and report on the review of the Animals Procedures Committee into the workings of the Animal (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement. [59782]

Mr. George Howarth: I understand that the Animal Procedures Committee met on 11 November to complete a further report on its review of the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and I hope to receive that report shortly. I expect it to be laid before Parliament within the next month as an appendix to the Committee's annual report.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59742]

Mr. Straw: The following registers are available for inspection by hon. Members and members of the public:

Register of Forensic Pathologists

Official Roll of the Baronetage

Electoral Registers (Representation of the People Act 1983)[1]

Registers of Burials (and records of disinternments) (Local Authorities' Cemeteries Order 1977)[1]

Registers of Grants (Local Authorities' Cemeteries Orders 1977)[1]

Data Protection Register[2]

Coroners' Registers of Deaths Reported (Coroners' Rules 1984)[1,3]

Registers of Cremations (Cremation Regulations 1930)[1,3].

[1] The Home Office has limited responsibility, by virtue of our supervision of the relevant local services and/or the governing legislation.

[2] Held by the Data Protection Registrar—a Home Office Non-Departmental Public Body

[3] Access is subject to the approval of the authority holding the register.

Speed Fines

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to allow local authorities to keep fines received from prosecutions as a result of speed cameras. [59672]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have no current plans to allow local authorities, the police or the courts to retain fines from prosecutions for speeding offences detected by camera, but we are reviewing the funding arrangements for the cameras to see what more can be done.

Road Traffic Accidents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if road traffic accidents and motoring offences will be included in the Crime and Disorder Audit. [59677]

Mr. Boateng: The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 lays a duty on the local authority and police in every area, in partnership with a wide range of other bodies, to carry out a full audit of the levels and patterns of crime and disorder in that area and then, based upon the findings of the audit and consultation with the community about them, to formulate and implement a strategy for the reduction of crime and disorder. The Act does not specify what categories of crime and disorder must be included in the audit and strategy; this is a matter for decision locally.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59725]

Mr. Straw: Provision is made for spending up to £380,000 on subsidised childcare in the current financial year for Home Office staff (including the Agencies) at various locations. This makes available approximately 160 nursery places for children under 5 and approximately 170 holiday playscheme places for children aged between 5 to 12 years. Subsidised childcare is only provided where there is a value for money justification which meets both staff and organisation needs. Childcare provision is, however, only one of a range of family friendly policies that the Department supports to help staff balance work and family life. Other measures include: part-time working; jobshare; flexi-time; homeworking; career breaks; maternity benefits; and paternity leave.

The cost to parents varies according to geographic location and the age of the child. In 1996–97, 241 parents used nursery facilities and 122 used the playscheme. The average cost to parents using nursery places was £63.50 per week per child; and the average cost of playschemes was £7 per day. In 1997–98, 216 parents used nurseries at an average cost of £66 per week per child. 127 parents used the holiday playscheme at an average cost of £7.25 per day.

The proportion of total staff (excluding the Prison Service) who used these facilities was 2.6 per cent. in 1996–97 and 1997–98.

Operation Bye Bye

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of Operation Bye Bye conducted in Doncaster and Sheffield. [59821]

Mr. Boateng: Operation Bye Bye was an intelligence led operation by South Yorkshire Police against individuals involved in burglary and drug dealing. Some 90 people have been arrested and further arrests are likely. I congratulate the South Yorkshire Police on their success.

Mark Darren Day

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 June 1998, Official Report, column 357, when he expects the Criminal Cases Review Commission to conclude its consideration of the case of Mark Day, convicted of murder on 26 March 1993. [59673]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that the Commission has made progress with the detailed review of Mr. Day's case, but remains unable to say when it will complete its consideration.

Cannabis

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will consult the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs as a matter of urgency over transferring cannabis and cannabis resin from Schedule 1 to the Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) Regulations 1998 to Schedule 2; [59845]

(2) if he will raise the rescheduling of cannabinoids, other than dronabinol and nabizone, from Schedule 1 to the Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) Regulations 1998 to Schedule 2 with the WHO; [59842]

(3) if he will transfer cannabis and cannabis resin from Schedule 1 to the Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) Regulations 1998 to Schedule 2 to allow doctors to prescribe an appropriate preparation of cannabis on a named-patient basis, and to allow doctors and pharmacists to supply the drug prescribed. [59844]

Mr. George Howarth: We are currently considering the report of the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee which made these recommendations and will provide a full reply in due course, which will deal with the question of consultation with the World Health Organisation. The Government do not, however, agree that cannabis should be re-scheduled to allow its prescription by doctors unless or until the quality, safety and efficacy of a medicinal form have been scientifically established and a marketing authorisation issued by the Medicines Control Agency.

Subject to the clear views the Government have already expressed on the Report's recommendation to re-schedule cannabis, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs will have an opportunity to hold a preliminary discussion on the report at its next meeting on 19 November.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of persons convicted of possession of cannabis over the past 12 months where use of the drug for therapeutic purposes was offered as a mitigating factor. [59914]

Mr. George Howarth: Factors pleaded in mitigation for any offence are not collected centrally by the Home Office court proceedings database.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what public statements have been made by Ministers on the recommendations of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology's report on the medicinal use of cannabis since publication of the report. [59915]

Mr. George Howarth: I said at the time of publication of the report that the Government welcomed the Committee's rejection of general legalisation of cannabis and its call for more research into the possible medical benefits; but could not agree that cannabis should be rescheduled to allow its prescription by doctors unless or until the quality, safety and efficacy of a medicinal form had been scientifically established and a marketing authorisation issued by the Medicines Control Agency. We will provide a full reply to the report in due course.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Government intend to consult the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs on the recommendations in the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology on cannabis. [59916]

Mr. George Howarth: We are currently considering our response to the recommendations of the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology on cannabis and what advice to take before doing so. Subject to the clear views the Government have already expressed on the Report's recommendation to re-schedule cannabis, the Advisory Council will have an opportunity to hold a preliminary discussion on the report at its next scheduled meeting on 19 November.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the crime clear-up rate and annual percentage change for 1995, 1996 and 1997 in (a) Staffordshire and (b) the West Midlands; [59549]

(2) if he will list the (a) number of and (b) annual percentage change in recorded offences in 1995, 1996 and 1997 in (i) Staffordshire and (ii) the West Midlands. [59548]

Police (Staffordshire)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for Staffordshire Police Force the (a) number of serving officers (b) number of patrol officers (c) average police pay and (d) cost of the service in real terms for 1995, 1996 and 1997. [59550]

Mr. Boateng: The information provided is for the financial years 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98.

Computer Crime

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the proposal by the National Criminal Intelligence Unit for the establishment of a national intelligence-led unit for tackling computer crime is to be proceeded with. [59645]

Mr. Boateng: The Association of Chief Police Officers, together with the National Criminal Intelligence Service, is continuing to investigate the feasibility of establishing a national computer crime unit.

Kosovo Albanian Children

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received representations about the grant of entry clearance to a number of Kosovo Albanian children to enable them to come to the United Kingdom for medical treatment, accompanied by their close relatives; and if he will make a statement. [60230]

Mr. Straw: I have received representations from Ms Sally Becker of Operation Angel about a total of 91 applications referred to the Home Office by the British Embassy in Tirana, a third of which are in respect of children needing medical treatment. The applications fell to be considered under the Immigration Rules relating to persons seeking to enter the United Kingdom as visitors for private medical treatment or simply as visitors. Under these Rules, I have to be satisfied, among other requirements, that there is satisfactory evidence about the medical condition and its treatment, that the person will be able to maintain and accommodate himself and any dependants without recourse to public funds and that the person intends to leave the United Kingdom at the end of the period of the treatment or visit. In the absence of satisfactory evidence from Operation Angel or any other source, I was not satisfied that these requirements were met in any of the applications.

I considered whether there were grounds for treating the applications on a discretionary basis outside the Immigration Rules, but concluded that it would not be appropriate to do so. In reaching this decision, I took account of the fact that Ms Becker had not taken Government advice and guidance on how to bring such an evacuation within the recognised official procedures; she had not demonstrated the option of local treatment through the international agencies; and had not made a proper case on medical grounds. I was also aware that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development has in place a humanitarian strategy for former Yugoslavia (including Kosovo) and Albania, and will be sending a mission there this week.

Furthermore, in the absence of adequate guarantees of funding from Operation Angel, I had to take account of the likely cost to the taxpayer in the almost certain event of recourse to public funds, which, for a group of this size, would be of the order of £400,000 a year. I accordingly decided to refuse the applications. Ms Becker was notified of this decision by the British Embassy in Tirana on Friday 13 November.

Police Dogs

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what national guidelines there are for the training of police dog handlers and dogs; what plans he has to change them; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of the trial of Essex police dog trainers. [59623]

Mr. Boateng: All general-purpose police dogs and handlers receive training in-force along the lines set out in the Home Office Police Dog Training and Care Manual which emphasises that training should be based on 'Praise and Reward'. The manual, which was revised in 1996, explains the need for self control on the part of the handler and stipulates that 'a handler should never resort to physical punishment in training the dog'.

Revision of the Manual is now the responsibility of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Sub-Committee on Police Dogs. The Chief Constable of Lancashire Constabulary, who chairs the Sub-committee, is in contact with Essex Police in order to establish whether any lessons can be learned from the case recently heard at Chelmsford Magistrates' Court. The ACPO Sub-committee is also in close touch with the RSPCA, the National Canine Defence League and other similar organisations.

Any question of disciplinary action against the police officers concerned will be a matter for the Chief Constable of Essex.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Government's advertisement on domestic violence will first be shown; on which television channels it will be shown; what the cost of the advertising campaign will be; and if he will place a video of the advertising campaign in the Library. [59667]

Mr. Boateng: We are currently developing a domestic violence awareness/publicity campaign for England and Wales. The detailed content and costings of the campaign as it unfolds over the coming months have yet to be settled.

The launch of a domestic violence advertising campaign in Scotland was announced last week. I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland that the first television advertisement will be broadcast there on 26 December. Channels featuring the advertisement will be Scottish Television, Grampian and Borders. The production, broadcasting and other media costs will amount to about £600,000 during the first year of the campaign. A video of the advertisement will be placed in the Library.

Divorce

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the likelihood of breakdown of (i) cohabiting unions and (ii) marriages. [59062]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not commissioned any research on this question. There is evidence from research (for example, Buck and Ermisch, Cohabitation in Britain. Changing Britain 1995) that cohabiting relationships are more likely than marriages to break down.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

17. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if lone parents will have their benefits reduced if they fail to attend the initial interview of the new deal for lone parents. [58383]

Angela Eagle: There is no requirement for lone parents to attend for a New Deal for Lone Parents interview—the New Deal for Lone Parents is voluntary.

26. Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress being made on the Government's new deal for lone parents. [58394]

27. Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Government's actions to help lone parents move from income support into work. [58395]

32. Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on progress on the new deal for lone parents. [58400]

Angela Eagle: The Government are committed to helping lone parents overcome the difficulties which may act as barriers to employment through the New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP). Under the NDLP lone parents on Income Support are offered a tailor-made personal adviser service to help them improve their employability and move from welfare into work. The programme provides support and advice on training needs, jobsearch, better-off calculations, child care information and in-work support for those who need it.

Results up to 25 September show that 9 out of 10 lone parents who attended an interview agreed to participate in the programme, and more than a quarter of these moved into work. Research on lone parents who had moved into work (and onto Family Credit) following participation in NDLP show that they are on average, £39 a week better off, and have reduced their dependency on benefit by £42 a week.

Interim findings of an independent evaluation of the NDLP in the phase 1 prototypes show that the programme is having a marked effect on the rate at which lone parents move off Income Support—around 2 percentage points reduction on the number of lone parents on Income Support compared to the control areas and almost 7 per cent. fewer new cases remaining on Income Support. A final evaluation report on the NDLP phase 1 will be available in Autumn 1999.

Means-tested Benefits

24. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits, which are not currently means tested, he plans to means test in future. [58392]

Mr. Darling: We are reforming the welfare system based on the principles we have set out to ensure the system delivers work for those who can and security for those who cannot. I announced details of our plans for reform of disability benefits and for the introduction of a single gateway to the benefit system for people of working age last month. Details of our plans for the reform of other benefits will be announced in due course.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his proposals to reduce dependence on means-tested benefits. [58403]

Angela Eagle: We believe there is a continuing role for a variety of benefits. So for instance my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's announcement last month included proposals to reduce the reliance on means-tested help of people disabled early in life, and extend non-means-tested, non-contributory, tax free help to severely disabled young children, while also providing more generous means-tested benefits through the Disability Income Guarantee for disabled people under 60 with the highest care needs and the lowest incomes.

Child Support

30. Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action the Government have taken to improve support for children through the social security system. [58398]

Angela Eagle: We have announced a series of measures which will improve the financial support given to children through the benefits system. These include:

Child Benefit for the eldest child will be increased from next April, by the largest ever amount, and from 9 November families on Income Support and Family Credit have been getting an extra £2.50 for each child under 11.

The New Deal for Lone Parents offers a tailor-made service of help and advice for people who are bringing up children on their own to make the move from Income Support into employment. We are investing over £190 million to help lone parents who want to work.

Two significant improvements in the support for disabled children were announced in October 1998 in our consultation document "A New Contract for Welfare—Support for Disabled People": the Disability Income Guarantee, and the extension of the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to children aged three and four.

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress the Child Support Agency has made in clearing its backlogs; and if he will make a statement. [60231]

Angela Eagle: The Child Support Agency met its target for last year to reduce the maintenance assessment backlog (i.e. cases which are over 52 weeks old and have not yet been assessed) to less than 5 per cent. of applications received, and is on target to clear the remainder by the end of this financial year. As the older cases are cleared some Non Resident Parents will inevitably be assessed as owing arrears for periods dating back a number of years.

We can today announce that we are extending the temporary scheme introduced by the previous Government limiting the collection of arrears to six months as long as the Non Resident Parent is fully compliant for a period of 12 months.

Additionally, from Monday 30 November, we will also be extending the coverage of this scheme to include cases where arrears have arisen due to delays in reviews carried out on change of circumstance and in the reviews carried out every two years as required by Section 16 of the Child Support Act 1991.

The extension of this scheme is another indication of the continuing difficulties faced by the Child Support Agency. The complexity of the current formula, continues to limit the Agency's ability to provide the kind of service the public has the right to expect. Our proposals for a new, simple, straightforward and transparent service were set out in the Green Paper "CHILDREN FIRST: a new approach to child support" published in July this year.

31. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement concerning the support available through the new deal to disabled people with communication difficulties. [58399]

Mr. Timms: People taking part in the New Deal for Disabled People will have access to the range of disability programmes currently provided by the Employment Service. This includes the Access to Work Programme which provides tailored support for people with communication difficulties.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the number of personal advisers which will be required for the implementation of the single benefit gateway; [58766]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of training and maintaining a personal adviser under the single benefit gateway; [58748]

(3) what targets he plans to set for the ratio of benefit claimants to personal advisers. [58749]

Angela Eagle: The single gateway will be piloted in 12 locations, commencing in June 1999.

One of the main reasons for piloting this initiative before introduction nationally is to estimate the number of staff required to meet our objective of ensuring all benefit claimants of working age have access to a personal adviser.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what sanctions will be imposed on those who do not attend the initial interview under the single benefit gateway. [58765]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 552.

Incapacity Benefit

33. Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the financial implications of his proposed changes to incapacity benefit. [58401]

Mr. Timms: The modernisation of Incapacity Benefit for new claimants, with reformed contribution conditions and the taking into account of 50 per cent. of amounts of occupational and personal pensions over £50 a week, will reduce expenditure on Incapacity Benefit by £90 million in the first year (2001–02), rising to some £650 to £700 million a year in the long run.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to reform the all work test. [58396]

Mr. Timms: We intend to reform the test so that, as well as determining entitlement to benefit, it provides additional, constructive, information about people's capacities which, together with a wider employability assessment, can be used to help them plan for a return to work.

Pensions Green Paper

34. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how long the consultation period following the Green Paper on pensions will be. [58402]

36. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Government's pension review. [58404]

Mr. Denham: As set out in the Green Paper "New Ambitions for our country: A New Contract for Welfare" (Cm 3805), we intend to publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year. Details of the consultation will be announced when the Green Paper is published.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the publication date is for the Green Paper on Pensions. [58382]

Mr. Denham: As set out in the Green Paper, "New Ambitions for our country: A New Contract for Welfare", we will publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year.

Benefits (Women)

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to examine the effects on women of benefits lost due to their earning less than the national insurance lower earnings limit; and if he will make a statement. [58377]

Mr. Denham: We have announced a number of measures to help women in low-paid employment, including the Working Families Tax Credit and the national minimum wage. Data from the Labour Force Survey indicated that about 700,000 women will be floated above the lower earnings limit as a result of the national minimum wage, assuming there is no change in the number of hours they work. As part of our programme of welfare reform we are considering the best way of delivering support to all those who need help through the social security system, including low-paid women.

State Pensions

37. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make it easier for pensioners to have their pensions paid directly into bank accounts. [58405]

Mr. Denham: Under existing arrangements, pensioners are able to choose from a number of ways in which to receive their retirement pension. One way is to have it paid directly into their bank accounts.

Prospective pensioners are advised about the options for payment on the claim form issued to them before their retirement date.

The choice of payment to a bank account can be made at the time a claim is made or at any time thereafter.

There are no current plans to make any changes in these arrangements.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the gross and net cost of (a) raising the basic retirement pension and linked benefits to £90 per week for a single person and £144 for a couple and (b) paying an additional non-contributory benefit of £40 per week to each person over pension age. [56016]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is in the table.

	Raise RP and linked benefits to £90	As previous column plus £40 non-contributory benefit
Gross cost	14.5	36.5
Means-tested benefit offset	−3.0	−5.5
Net costs	11.5	30.5

Notes:

1. Gross costs have been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department

2. Means-tested benefit offsets are based on the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey and the May 1996 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, both uprated to 1998–99 benefit and earnings levels. These do not take account of the changes to IS rates which will be introduced in 1999–2000

3. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £0.5 billion

4. Where both members of a couple are in receipt of a Category A pension, they have each been awarded a basic state pension of £90 per week, pro-rated according to the percentage of the full pension which they receive

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what total lifetime contribution to SERPs for a single man would provide an addition to the basic state pension equal to the increase in income support available under the forthcoming minimum pension guarantee of £75 a week. [58505]

Mr. Denham: A person retiring in 1999–2000 who had been contracted into SERPs since its introduction in 1978 would need to have had constant real earnings of approximately £100 per week (in 1999–2000) terms to receive a gross weekly income from the basic State Pension and SERPS of around £75.

Note:

Assuming the individual is entitled to a full State Pension of £66.75 (April 1999 rate). The calculation does not take account of the fact that SERPs is taxable and so might not produce a net State Pension of £75, but since taxation is dependent largely upon individual circumstances it is not possible to take account of this detail.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel), of 4 November 1998, Official Report, columns 603–05, what estimate he has made of the total amount by which those entitled to SERPS have been underpaid (a) weekly and (b) since the introduction of NIRS 2 because of problems with that system. [59091]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The estimated total amount of SERPS being underpaid weekly is about £620,000. The total amount estimated to have been underpaid since April is about £7.7 million.

Earnings Disregards

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons earnings disregards were not increased in the annual uprating of social security benefits. [58385]

Mr. Denham: We believe that, for those who are able to undertake it, paid work is the surest route out of poverty. This is why our welfare reform programme has focused on making work pay and providing new and innovative ways to help people on benefit make an early return to work through the New Deals for unemployed people, lone parents, people with a disability or long-term illness and through initiatives like Employment Zones.

Disabled People

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by income bands of £10 and by gender the numbers of gainers and losers classified by each change proposed in "Support for Disabled People". [58122]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The information is not available in the format requested. In particular it is not possible to identify the position in the income distribution of those who will be affected by the changes using income bands of £10. Such information as is available is as follows:

We estimate that around 55,000 men and 10,000 women will be affected by the proposed changes to Incapacity Benefit in the first year following the change (2001–02).

The vast majority of those who no longer qualify for Incapacity Benefit as a result of the proposed change to the contribution conditions are expected to be in the first and second quintiles of the household income distribution and to be already claiming income-based Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support. Their entitlement to these benefits will not be affected by this change and some may benefit from the proposed Disability Income Guarantee. The remainder of those who will no longer qualify for Incapacity Benefit will be people who are not entitled to income-based Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support because they have other income. They are expected to be predominantly in the middle of the household income distribution.

We expect that the majority of those who will have their Incapacity Benefit reduced as a result of taking some account of occupational and personal pensions over £50 a week will be in the top two quintiles of the household income distribution.

Both these changes will apply only to new claims for Incapacity Benefit. No-one who is already receiving Incapacity Benefit at the point of change will be affected.

Severe Disablement Allowance

We estimate that around 5,000 women and 3,000 men under 20 will gain by receiving the long-term rate of Incapacity Benefit at the end of the first year following the change. In addition, around 12,000 women and 8,000 men under 20 who were claiming Severe Disablement Allowance at the point of change will transfer to the long-term rate of Incapacity Benefit at the end of the first year.

People aged 20 or over who are already receiving Severe Disablement Allowance at the point of change will continue to receive the benefit, but no new claims from people aged 20 or over will be accepted. We estimate that around 10,000 women and 6,000 men aged 20 or over will no longer be able to claim Severe Disablement Allowance in the first year following the change. We estimate that, of those, around 6,000 women and 5,000 men will qualify for Income Support and will therefore see no change in their overall income. The 4,000 women and 1,000 men whom we estimate will not qualify for Income Support are expected to be concentrated in the middle of the household income distribution.

Disability Income Guarantee

We estimate that around 51,000 single men, 51,000 single women and 43,000 couples aged under 60, together with 30,000 disabled children, will benefit from this change in the first year (2001–02).

We expect that the majority of those who benefit will be in the second and third quintiles of the household income distribution.

Disability Living Allowance

We estimate that around 8,000 disabled children with severe mobility problems will benefit in the first year (2001–02) from our proposal to extend the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to children aged 3 and 4. It is not possible to identify where the families concerned fall within the household income distribution.

Notes:

1. Income quintiles are 20 per cent. bands of household net equivalised income. The first quintile is the lowest band; the fifth quintile is the top band.

2. Position in the income distribution is determined after housing costs and represents the expected position before the changes come into effect.

3. Incomes are equivalised to adjust for household size and compositions. No adjustment is made to household income to reflect any additional needs that claimants of these benefits may have. To the extent that these people have any additional disability related costs then their position in the household income standard could overstate their relative living standards.

4. The information showing where recipients of various benefits are in the income distribution is taken from the 1995–96 and 1996–97 Households Below Average Income datasets based on the 1995–96 and 1996–97 Family Resources Surveys (FRS). The FRS is a sample survey of the GB population and all estimates must be treated as approximate.

5. Information on the number of claimants likely to be affected by each of the proposed changes is derived from the Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, February 1998; the Disability Living Allowance Quarterly Extract, February 1998; and a 1 per cent. sample of 1996–97 claims for Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance produced by DSS Analytical Services Division. All figures are estimates and must be treated as approximate.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of claimants who will lose eligibility to the severe disablement allowance under his proposals set out in "Support for Disabled People"; and if he will break down this total between male and female claimants. [58301]

Mr. Timms: It is estimated that each year, around 16,000 people who become disabled after the age of 20 will no longer be able to claim Severe Disablement Allowance. Of these approximately 10,000 will be women and 6,000 will be men. For those eligible, Income Support will still be available; current statistical data indicate that nearly 70 per cent. of this group already claim Income Support.

War Pensions (Prisoners)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of war pensions are currently serving prison sentences; and what payments of war pensions have been made in respect of those people. [59204]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the War Pensions Agency is a matter for its Chief Executive, Mr. Gordon Hextall. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Gordon Hextall to Mr. Michael Hancock, dated 12 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the number of War Pensioners currently serving prison sentences and the payments being made to them.

It is the Secretary of State's normal policy that payments of War Disablement Pension (WDP) are forfeited during imprisonment. This is because it is considered inappropriate to make a payment from public funds to someone who has committed a criminal offence and is being maintained at public expense. On release the WDP is normally restored and, to assist with resettlement, it is the normal policy that arrears of one year's basic pension (or arrears for the period of imprisonment if less than a year) are paid. The Secretary of State also has discretion, in exceptional circumstances, to continue payment whilst a war pensioner is in prison.

Unfortunately statistics of war pensioners currently serving prison sentences are not kept as a matter of course. To identify such cases would require a manual analysis of the case files relating to all 254,209 War Pensioners. The information could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope that you find my reply helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of assessing income support entitlements on the basis of actual income from capital rather than tariff income, with no upper capital limit on eligibility. [58970]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The estimated costs are £200 million in Income Support, and a further £80 million in Jobseeker's Allowance. The present tariff is not intended to represent any return that could be obtained from investing capital. The system provides a straightforward method of calculating the weekly contribution which people with capital in excess of the lower limit are expected to make from those resources to help meet their normal living expenses. The rules are designed to ensure that help is targeted at those who need it most whilst not entirely denying benefit to those with only a modest amount of capital.

Notes:

1. The estimates have been based upon net investment income, as tax paid on investment income is already deducted from the income brought to account for Income Support in our model.

2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million and have been based on the Department's Policy Simulation Model of income-related benefits. This model draws data from the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey, uprated to 1999–2000 levels, and calibrates results to forecast benefit caseloads. This calibration is consistent with the Department's Comprehensive Spending Review forecasts.

3. Results should be regarded as subject to a high degree of uncertainty. They should be interpreted not as precise point estimates, but as indicative only of broad magnitudes.

Habitual Residence Test

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take into account in his review of the habitual residence test its application to spouses of those serving abroad in the armed forces when they return to the United Kingdom following separation from their partner. [59060]

Angela Eagle: The Government are currently examining the habitual residence test as it operates now and considering the need and possible scope for reform. As part of this work we are exploring a wide range of issues, such as the position of spouses who return to the UK following separation from their partner.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the range of qualifying benefits for eligibility for extended housing benefit; what plans he has to extend the range; and what assistance with rent payments is available to people starting paid employment who have to work a month before being paid. [59339]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 3 November 1998, Official Report, columns 681–702, our intention to widen the group eligible for extended payments of Housing and Council Tax Benefit to include former Income Support claimants who were incapacitated. The effect of this change is to make extended payments available to all the poorest people returning to work after 26 weeks out of a job.

The Extended Payment scheme is designed to encourage the long term unemployed who are capable of work to take up work, by removing the uncertainty many face about whether they will be able to pay their rent and council tax during the gap between the last payment of benefit and receipt of their first wages. It allows claims for Housing and Council Tax Benefit to continue for the first four weeks after starting work, regardless of earnings.

We are also considering other ways of easing the transition into work. As the Welfare Reform Green Paper makes clear we are looking at a range of proposals for improving the work incentives offered by Housing Benefit. This review is examining Housing Benefit and the way it is delivered.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of winter fuel payment cheques issued over the winter of 1997 were returned to local benefit agencies in (a) each London borough and (b) each London parliamentary constituency; and what was the national average; [59390]

(2) how long he estimates it will take for all work on winter fuel payment cheques issued during winter 1997 to have been completed in (a) each London borough, (b) each London parliamentary constituency and (c) nationally; [59392]

(3) how many Benefits Agency staff have been working on winter fuel payments relating to the winter of 1997 in (a) each London borough and (b) each London parliamentary constituency; and what is the national average; [59391]

(4) what procedures are in place for dealing with this year's round of winter fuel payments; and how these differ from those in force in the previous year. [59393]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Winter Fuel Payments scheme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Edward Davey, dated 12 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary questions asking, in (a) each London Borough and (b) each London Parliamentary Constituency, what percentage of Winter Fuel Payment cheques issued over the winter of 1997 were returned to local Benefit Agencies (BA) and what was the national average; when is it estimated that all work on the backlog of Winter Fuel Payments will have been completed and what is the national average; how many BA staff have been working on Winter Fuel Payments relating to the winter of 1997 and what is the national average. You also asked what procedures are in place for addressing this year's round of Winter Fuel Payments and how these differ from those in force in the previous year.

The making of Winter Fuel Payments to almost 10 million pensioners, in over seven million households, before the end of March 1998 was a challenging task for the BA. This was achieved whilst maintaining normal benefit business.

Not all of the information requested is available. The information that is available is not in the format requested. The BA collate Winter Fuel Payments scheme statistics by BA District which do not correspond to Parliamentary Constituencies or Local Authority boundaries. It would only be possible to provide figures in those formats at disproportionate cost. I am, however, able to tell you that in excess of 9.76 million Winter Fuel Payments were issued during the 1997–98 winter. Of these payments, the national average of returned payments was less than 2.07 per cent.

In excess of 9.76 million Winter Fuel Payments were made automatically by 31 March 1998. All payments were made to eligible pensioners based on official records. Whilst we have issued all payments and do not consider there to be a backlog, it is possible that a small number of pensioners have not yet been paid because the original girocheque was not cashed, or they have not yet queried their entitlement. It is not possible to estimate how many of these cases are outstanding. Local BA offices and the Winter Fuel Helpline are on hand to give advice to pensioners who feel that they are entitled to an initial or further payment.

Information is not available in relation to the number of staff employed exclusively on the Winter Fuel Payments scheme as those involved were also involved in other areas of work. However, funding for the administration of last winter's scheme was allocated and distributed to each of the BA's 13 Area Directorates (ADs) and our Pensions and Overseas Directorate. These ADs do not correspond to specific Local Authority or parliamentary constituency boundaries. Three ADs cover the south east and in total they received £669,800 to administer the scheme. This would be equivalent to some 130 full time staff posts for the duration of last year's Winter Fuel Payment exercise. Nationally, ADs received £2,140,500 to administer the scheme. This would be equivalent to some 421 full time staff posts for the duration of last year's exercise.

For the forthcoming winter delivery of payments will be broadly similar to last winter's exercise. Eligible pensioners in receipt of Income Support and Income Based Jobseeker's Allowance will be issued with a £50 payment by the end of November. Payments to other eligible pensioners will be made during January and will again be made automatically (a claim does not have to be made). The BA's Generalised Matching Service will be used to compare addresses in order to decide whether £10 or £20 is payable. Poste Restante arrangements whereby girocheques are issued direct to Post Offices will again be used for Retirement Pension, Graduated Retirement Benefit and Widow's Benefit Pension customers normally paid by order book. Around 5 million payments will be despatched to Post Offices over a three week period from 5 to 22 January 1999.

There is no doubt that the BA has learnt from the problems experienced by some pensioners last year and having had more time to effectively plan for this winter's payments, I am confident that we will improve the administration of this winter's scheme.

For last winter's payments the address data held for some customers was insufficient to make matching possible. In anticipation for this winter's payments an exercise to investigate and improve this data has been carried out. The BA, wherever possible, has ensured that the majority of eligible pensioners' addresses are now compatible with Post Office address records and can more accurately be included in the automated scans used in the identification process.

Technical changes to the data cleansing process should ensure that the incidents where both members of a couple who live in the same household each receive £20 will reduce. Scans based on surname, sex, postcode and date of marriage will match couples who share these details and will give a higher level of reliability this winter.

Improvements to the Pensions Computer System will allow BA local office staff to automatically issue additional payments where eligible pensioners have not received their full entitlement as opposed to clerically producing the additional payments. The additional girocheques will be printed and despatched automatically from the central computer centres and therefore the payments should be received more quickly.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59738]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer the then Minister for Welfare Reform, my right hon. Friend the Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field), gave my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 2 July 1998, Official Report, column 256.

There are no separate arrangements for maintaining registers for inspection by hon. Members and members of the public.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59722]

Angela Eagle: The staff of this Department, including all the Agencies, have access to nursery places and holiday playschemes in a variety of locations across the country. The cost of this childcare varies according to the age of the child, the nature of the provision and the location of the childcare. However, there is a subsidy available to staff of up to £30 per child per week. This represents up to 50 per cent. subsidy on the total cost of care.

Each business unit is responsible for making their own detailed arrangements which are suitable for local circumstances. Detailed information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department is developing its family friendly policies further, of which childcare is one, but not the only, dimension.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of claimants in 1997–98 for (a) jobseeker's allowance (income based), (b) jobseeker's allowance (contribution based only), (c) housing benefit with jobseeker's allowance and (d) council tax benefit with jobseeker's allowance. [59564]

Angela Eagle: The information is set out in the table. There is an overlap in the figures as most claimants receive both Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

Jobseeker's Allowance claimants, May 1997

	Number of recipients
Jobseeker's Allowance (Income-based)	1,224,000
Jobseeker's Allowance (Contribution-based only)	181,000
Housing Benefit with Jobseeker's Allowance	693,000
Council Tax Benefit with Jobseeker's Allowance	686,000

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Information refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
3. Figures will undercount the number of unemployed jobseeker's as they exclude claimants receiving National Insurance Credits only.
4. Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit figures do not include second adult rebate cases.
5. The figures shown are at May 1997, and are the latest available in the period specified.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if individuals receiving (a) interim estimated benefits and (b) initial awards of (i) retirement pensions, (ii) incapacity benefit and (iii) jobseeker's allowance payments will be given the correct payments in due course. [59573]

Mr. Timms: Yes. When information is available from NIRS2, the claims of all individuals receiving interim payments and initial awards of Retirement Pension, Incapacity Benefit and Jobseeker's Allowance will be looked at again and the correct amount of benefit put into payment. Arrears will be paid as appropriate.

Centenarians

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, by county, the number of centenarians in receipt of the state pension. [59897]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

There are approximately 8,000 people over the age of 100 years who are in receipt of the State Retirement Pension in Great Britain.

Note:

Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people currently in receipt of severe disablement allowance became eligible to receive the allowance at age 20 years or over. [59834]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

As at March 1997, the latest date for which information is available, there were 385,000 Severe Disablement Allowance (SDA) recipients. Of those, 134,000 were ex-Housewives Non Contributory Invalidity Pension or ex-Non Contributory Invalidity Pension recipients who were transferred automatically on to SDA when it was introduced in 1984. Of those qualifying for SDA after that date, 174,600 did so at the age of 20 or over.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the proportion of his Department's computer systems which will be millennium-compliant on 1 April 1999. [58848]

Mr. Timms: All but one of the Department's business critical computer systems will have been fully tested and corrected for millennium compliance by 1 April 1999. The supplier of the remaining system, the new National Insurance Recording System, was required to deliver it compliant and testing to confirm that will be complete by 31 October 1999, or earlier if possible. The target date for completion of work on non-business critical computer systems is 31 August 1999.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate (a) the percentage increase in cash terms and (b) the percentage increase in real terms in the grand total of (1) all social security expenditure and (2) non-cyclical social security expenditure, including in each case relevant expenditure by local government and by all departments of central Government, and including the cost of the working families tax credit, between (i) 1978–79 and 1982–83, (ii) 1982–83 and 1986–87, (iii) 1986–87 and 1991–92, (iv) 1991–92 and 1996–97 and (v) 1996–97 and 2001–02; and if he will set out in each case the totals which underlie these estimates. [59863]

Mr. Darling: The information requested is in the tables.

Departmental Annual Report

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide an update of Figure 3 from his most recent Departmental Annual Report to cover the remainder of the planning period. [59862]

Mr. Darling: The Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report published in June 1998 changed some of the definitions of the items of Social Security expenditure contained in figure 3. It is not, therefore, possible to provide information in the format requested. We are currently exploring the possibility of producing the equivalent of figure 3 for the 1999 Departmental Report.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Compensation Claims

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the last year for which figures are available. [59051]

Mr. Mudie: During the 1997–98 financial year the Department made compensation payments totalling (a) £232,197 in respect of personal injury claims and (b) £70,804 in respect of employment protection claims.

Higher Education

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many higher education students have withdrawn from courses before completion in each of the last five years. [59341]

Mr. Mudie: The available information is given in the following table which is taken from the Departmental Annual Report 1998.

Academic Year	Full-time and sandwich first degree drop-out rates[1] (percentage)
1991–92	17
1992–93	17
1993–94	[2]17–18
1994–95	[2]17–18

Notes:
[1] The institutional coverage of the drop-out rates is restricted to the former UFC universities in the UK and former polytechnics in England. first degree students in other UK HE institutions are excluded. Drop out covers all those leaving degree courses because of exam failure, ill health, personal and other reasons. It includes those switching to a lower level course but it excludes students transferring between degree courses or subjects. The rate for each academic year reflects the progression of students through the whole length of course. The rate is a weighted sum of the separate university and former polytechnic figures based upon graduate numbers. The calculation for the polytechnic drop-out rate is necessarily approximate because of significant limitations in the underlying data, in practice it has been necessary to estimate drop-out in 1991–92 to 1995–96 from the change in two successive years for a sample of around half of the 29 English former polytechnics.
[2] A range is given because the introduction of a new data source made it difficult to measure drop-out accurately.

The Department is currently working with the higher education funding bodies in the UK to develop a method of calculating drop-out rates which can be applied to all UK higher education institutions and which takes into account the non-traditional routes that some students follow. These routes may include changing courses or institutions, repeating years or leaving higher education for a year or more before continuing their studies. The Department expects to be in a position to publish figures based upon the new methodology by the time of next year's Departmental Report.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students from Doncaster Borough gained higher education places for the academic years (a) 1998–99, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1996–97 and (d) 1995–96; and what proportion the figures represent of those leaving school at 18 years. [59305]

Mr. Mudie: Figures for the number of accepted applicants are given in the table. (Data for 1998 are not yet available.) It is not possible to show these figures as a proportion of the number of 18-year-old school leavers in Doncaster because school leaver data by age and local authority are not available centrally.

New Deal

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of people in the Tynemouth constituency who will benefit from the new deal for the long-term unemployed. [59010]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The 1998–99 planning assumptions for new deal 25+ are not yet available. The first statistical information will be available in the GSS press notice due to be published in mid December.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what statistics he is collecting on the interval between interviews given to those on the gateway under the new deal for young people. [59176]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 11 November 1998]: Whilst the progress of each individual new deal client from one interview to another throughout the gateway is carefully monitored by their personal adviser, consolidated statistics could be produced at present only through disproportionate additional bureaucracy and cost.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have been sanctioned under the New Deal (a) by reason, (b) by category of intake, (c) by region, (d) by option where relevant and (e) by month, up to the most recent date for which the information is available. [59175]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 11 November 1998]: National to September, 1,352 new deal participants have been sanctioned, either under new deal sanction categories or through general Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) adjudication. The breakdown, by categories and regions, is as follows:

Disabled People (Discrimination)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to combat discrimination against disabled people in matters not yet covered by legislation. [58389]

Ms Hodge: The Disability Rights Task Force was set up in December 1997 to consider how best to secure comprehensive, enforceable civil rights for disabled people within the context of our wider society, and to make recommendations on the role and functions of a Disability Rights Commission.

It provided Government with its recommendations on the role and functions of the Disability Rights Commission before Easter. These formed the basis of the White Paper Promoting disabled people's rights—Creating a Disability Rights Commission fit for the 21st Century. We intend to legislate to create the Disability Rights Commission as soon as the Parliamentary timetable allows.

The Disability Rights Task Force is expected to report on the wider issues by July 1999.

Road Haulage Industry

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment has been made of the extent of (a) job losses and (b) business failures, in the United Kingdom road haulage industry since 1 May 1997. [59343]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have not made such an assessment, but have considered information which is available on an area which broadly corresponds to the road haulage industry—the service component of the road haulage industry (that is, freight transport by road):

For this category;

(a) information from the Summer 1998 Labour Force Survey suggests there were around 250,000 people in the UK in employment. This was not significantly different from the number in employment in Summer 1997 of approximately 245,000.

(b) in the UK during 1997, there were around:

3,300 business start-ups, enterprises registering for value added tax; and

3,850 business closures, enterprises de-registering from VAT.

Below the VAT registration threshold, enterprises are included only if they have chosen to register voluntarily or not to de-register.

Youth Service

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment he has made of the contribution of the Youth Service to lifelong learning; [59335]

(2) what factors underlay his decision on the priority given to the Youth Service in his Department's consultative document "The Learning Age". [59337]

Mr. Mudie: The Youth Service has an important part to play in helping to deliver Government policies on lifelong learning. This was acknowledged in the Green Paper "The Learning Age". To build on this, we plan to put forward more detailed proposals on the future of the Youth Service in the context of the full range of services for young people. This will extend the discussion by linking the Youth Service to developments across the range of learning provision for young people.

University College of St. Mark and St. John

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will grant the University College of St. Mark and St. John university status. [59348]

Mr. Mudie: It is for the Privy Council to award university status. My Department advises the Privy Council on applications from institutions in England, taking account of published criteria. The College of St. Mark and St. John does not currently meet these criteria. The Government have announced that colleges with the power to award their own degrees may apply for 'university college' titles. The College of St. Mark and St. John has notified its intention to apply for degree awarding powers.

Mature Students

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many mature students were accepted for (a) full-time and (b) part-time courses in higher education in each of the last three years. [59261]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Information for the three most recent years available is given in the following table:

Mature[1] home entrants (thousands) to higher education courses in the UK[2]

	Postgraduate		Undergraduate
Year	Full-time	Part-time	Full-time	Part-time
1995–96	27.6	68.0	118.7	231.2
1996–97	28.1	62.6	115.4	230.7
1997–98	28.6	64.1	110.5	239.4

[1] Mature students are defined as postgraduates aged 25 and over, and undergraduates aged 21 and over.

[2] The figures include those entering to study for a higher education qualification in either higher education institutions or further education institutions in the UK.

Higher education entrant figures for 1998–99 will not be available until April 1999.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which benefits will be included in the criteria to determine eligibility for free tuition for part-time mature students in higher education from 1999–2000. [59264]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Relevant benefits for this purpose will include Income Support and the Jobseeker's Allowance. Further guidance on eligibility will be given to the Higher Education Funding Council for England, and will take account of announced changes to the benefit system.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which categories of courses will be included in the eligibility criteria for free tuition for part-time mature students in higher education from 1999–2000. [59265]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Part-time undergraduate courses at degree, diploma and certificate level in all subjects will be eligible where they are funded from 1999–2000 onwards by the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the annual cost of providing free tuition for mature students on part-time courses of higher education from 1999–2000. [59263]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 12 November 1998]: We are providing £5 million in the first year to enable fees to be waived for those starting part-time undergraduate courses from 1999–2000 onwards who are in receipt of benefits.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to award the first individual learning accounts; and which category of students will be eligible. [56203]

Mr. Mudie: A national framework for individual learning accounts will be in place in the year 2000. It will begin with one million 'starter' accounts. Around 100,000 of these will start to become available from Spring 1999. Under the national framework learning accounts will be available to all, although we expect the starter accounts to be mainly targeted at those who will benefit most. The four groups outlined in the Green Paper "The Learning Age" were people without qualifications or with low skills, areas of skill shortage, employees in small firms and people returning to work.

Lifelong Learning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many bids he has received for financial support to establish local authority lifelong learning development plans; and if he will list the successful applicants. [59260]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 12 November 1998]: We are allocating financial support over the next three financial years to all Local Education Authorities in England to strengthen the contribution they make to lifelong learning. No bids will be required. Local Education Authorities will be asked to use this money to develop new, high quality, initiatives to widen participation in learning, in partnership with local learning providers, and to underpin future development activity with Local Authority Lifelong Learning Development Plans.

Special Needs

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment within what period of time he will determine the need for legislation on the areas of the provision for special educational needs as set out in the Government's paper "Meeting Special Educational Needs: A Programme of Action". [59835]

Ms Estelle Morris: "Meeting Special Educational Needs: A programme of action" states that if necessary we will legislate, when parliamentary time allows, to:

require all LEAs to have a parent partnership scheme and establish conciliation arrangements; and require LEAs to comply with Tribunal orders, having regard to new guidance on reasonable timescales for implementing them.

Parent Partnership Scheme

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the definition of a parent partnership scheme as referred to in the Government's action programme for SEN; and what will be the requirements to qualify for such schemes. [59831]

Ms Estelle Morris: A parent partnership scheme is a scheme which is designed to encourage effective partnership between parents, Local Education Authorities, schools and voluntary bodies in identifying and meeting the needs of pupils with special educational needs. I would also expect such schemes to provide information and advisory services for parents. Local schemes which fulfil these requirements are currently eligible for support under the Standards Fund. Support for such schemes will be increased to £6m in 1999–2000.

Infant Class Teachers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the basis for the calculation of the numbers of extra infant class teachers in post in September recently announced by his Department. [59668]

Ms Estelle Morris: We provided grants of £22 million to 65 local education authorities to provide 1,527 extra teachers to reduce infant class sizes from this September. The figure of 1,527 is based on information supplied by local education authorities to the Department.

Funding

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the £16 billion extra expenditure on education over the next three years, excluding that accounted for by increases in education standard spending assessments, capital funds and the standards fund, will be available for direct expenditure by schools. [59833]

Ms Estelle Morris: The majority of the £16 billion for education in England announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review will reach schools through Education Standard Spending, capital funds and the Standards Fund. Schools will benefit from direct grant funding for reducing class sizes where a total of £560 million will be spent from 1999 to 2002, and from programmes such as the new Education Action Zones. Full details will be published in my Department's Annual Report in the Spring.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve provision for 16 and 17-year-olds who are no longer able to remain in the parental home and who are not in paid employment. [56454]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

We are concerned that too many young people are not in either paid employment, training or education. This can lead to disaffection among young people, particularly young men.

There are a number of initiatives underway across Government Departments which will have an impact on education, training and employment opportunities for all young people, and we have set up a Ministerial Group to look specifically at issues affecting boys and young men. The Green Paper "Supporting Families", which was published on 4 November, sets out proposals for strengthening the family unit and providing support to those families dealing with particular problems such as truancy, low educational achievement and bad behaviour, all of which can lead on to unemployment or homelessness among young adults. More broadly, the Social Exclusion Unit is looking at teenage pregnancy and, as announced at the launch of the Womens Unit on 9 November, the issue of underachievement by teenage girls will be examined in the New Year.

In addition, a new educational maintenance allowance—linked to attendance and based on parental income—will be piloted for 16–18 year olds. If, as we expect, the new allowance succeeds in encouraging more young people to stay on in education, we plan to introduce it nationally, using money currently spent on post-16 Child Benefit.

These initiatives are designed to ensure that we tackle the problems in a holistic way, in addition to addressing the question of support through the Social Security system. Our overall aim is to see as many young people as possible staying on in education and training, including those already in jobs.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Open Day

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's open day held on 15 October; how many visitors attended; and how many groups were represented. [58822]

Mr. Fatchett: The FCO Open Day was, as last year, a great success. There was a total of 589 visitors, including 66 Parliamentary groups, 47 led by MPs. There was particular emphasis on the FCO's commitment to equal opportunities; the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment with responsibility for employment and equal opportunities, my hon. Friend the Member for Barking (Ms Hodge), presented the FCO with the "Two Ticks" certificate the FCO has won for its positive attitude to disabled people. The two half day sessions included visits to departments at work, video-conference links with British Embassies overseas and our Mission to the UN, and an exhibition by departments, staff associations and others. The feedback from visitors was very positive, with the video conference as the highlight for most visitors. The day demonstrated the openness of the FCO; we hope to repeat it next year.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have recently taken place in the food rations for the displaced Tamil population in the Vanni; and if he will make a statement. [59485]

Mr. Fatchett: The Sri Lankan Government reduced rations to those affected by the conflict in the North and East in July. Rations were restored to pre-July levels in early September except in the uncleared areas of Mullaitivu and Kilinochchi in the Vanni. Although the situation is difficult, we understand from Non-Governmental Organisations operating in the area that there is at present sufficient food there. We will continue to impress upon the Sri Lankan Government the need to ensure that adequate supplies reach the civilian population.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what inquiries he has made to ensure that recent arms exports to Sri Lanka are not being used for internal repression; if recent exports of arms to Sri Lanka comply with the Government's ethical foreign policy; and if he will make a statement. [59484]

Mr. Fatchett: The most effective way of ensuring that defence exports are not used for internal repression is to carry out a thorough assessment of this risk when considering whether to authorise an export. For proposed exports to Sri Lanka we take into account reporting from our High Commission in Colombo and other relevant reports, including those of Non-Governmental Organisations.

Export licence applications to Sri Lanka are considered scrupulously on a case by case basis with reference to national and EU criteria. We do not license for export military equipment if there is a clearly identifiable risk that it might be used for the purpose of internal repression. Particular attention is paid both to the Sri Lankan Government's human rights record and their legitimate defence and domestic security interests.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding the use of unauthorised places of detention by armed groups supported by the Sri Lanka Government; and if he will make a statement. [59660]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned about reports that unauthorised places of detention are used by armed groups. We regularly raise our concerns about human rights issues with the Sri Lankan Government as I did when I visited Sri Lanka on 10 November.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the practice of the army and the police in the north and east of Sri Lanka of allowing armed groups to carry out search operations and screen civilians; and if he will make a statement. [59663]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received reports that armed groups have stopped and searched civilians in Sri Lanka, particularly in Vavuniya and the Eastern towns of Trincomalee and Batticaloa. We are also concerned about reports that these armed groups may be detaining civilians illegally. We regularly raise our concerns about human rights issues with the Sri Lankan Government as I did when I visited Sri Lanka on 10 November.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received that internally displaced persons attempting to return to their homes in Vavuniya and the Vanni in Sri Lanka have been killed by the army. [59662]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received no such reports.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding evidence of mass graves at Chemmani, Jaffna in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [59661]

Mr. Fatchett: We are deeply concerned about reports that several hundred bodies of people who "disappeared" in army custody in 1996–97 may be in a mass grave at Chemmani in Jaffna. This is a subject which I raised with the Sri Lankan authorities while I was in Colombo on 10 November. We have urged the Government of Sri Lanka to investigate these allegations fully and with the minimum of further delay.

International Criminal Tribunal (Former Yugoslavia)

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of the investigations by the International Criminal Tribunal in Kosovo. [59483]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) has conducted initial investigations in Kosovo following the announcement in July by Justice Arbour that in her view the conflict there falls within the Tribunal's mandate. Along with our EU Partners we have formally protested to the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia following their recent decision not to issue the necessary visas to Justice Arbour and her officials to enable them to carry out further investigations in Kosovo. We have made it clear to Belgrade that their actions constitute non-compliance with UN Security Council Resolutions 1160, 1199 and 1203. We are supporting the adoption of a new UN Security Council Resolution demanding the full cooperation of the Federal Authorities with the ICTY. A draft resolution is currently being discussed in New York.

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment the Government have made of the compatibility of the Federal Government of Yugoslavia's refusal to grant a visa to the Chief Prosecutor of the UN War Crimes Tribunal with (a) the terms of UN Security Council Resolution 1199 and (b) other UN Security Council resolutions; and if he will make a statement; [59650]

(2) what representations the Government have made, through the UN, concerning the refusal of the authorities in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to allow the Chief Prosecutor of the UN War Crimes Tribunal to investigate alleged Serbian atrocities in Kosovo. [59649]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Along with our EU Partners we have formally protested to the FRY Authorities following their recent decision not to issue the necessary visas to Justice Arbour and her officials to enable them to carry out further investigations in Kosovo. We have made it clear to Belgrade that we view their actions as non-compliance with UN Security Council Resolutions 1160, 1199 and 1203. We are also supporting the adoption of a new UN Security Council Resolution demanding the full cooperation of the FRY Authorities with the ICTY. A draft resolution is currently being discussed in New York.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what military matters concerning the Falkland Islands were raised by President Menem of Argentina during his official visit to the UK; and if he will make a statement. [59412]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: During their talks at 10 Downing Street, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister welcomed President Menem's commitment to reconciliation and his public renunciation of the use of force against the Falklands. President Menem raised our embargo on the export of arms and military equipment to Argentina. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister responded by saying that we would reappraise the embargo in a positive light, mindful of our security considerations. At present the embargo remains in place unchanged.

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received an official request from the Government of Argentina for talks on the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [59410]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Government of Argentina have repeatedly called on us to enter into negotiations on sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. In response we have made it clear that the United Kingdom does not regard sovereignty over the Falklands as negotiable.

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the United Nations regarding initiating an agreement to set a date for the opening of talks between the UK and Argentina over the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands. [59413]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No such discussions have taken place. We do not regard the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands as negotiable. Moreover, the United Kingdom Permanent Representative to the United Nations at New York told the General Assembly on 22 September:

"we have no doubt about Britain's sovereignty over the Falkland Islands and the other British Dependencies in the South Atlantic".

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of comments by the President of Argentina following his official visit to the UK that he expects Argentina to be in talks with the UK about the future sovereignty of the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [59409]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Our position remains as I explained in my reply to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 29 October 1998, Official Report, column 275. We do not regard the sovereignty of the Falklands as negotiable. There will be no change in the status of the Islands unless that is the wish of the Islanders themselves.

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions were held by Her Majesty's Government on the Argentine claim to the Falkland Islands with President Menem of Argentina during his official visit to the UK. [59411]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We did not enter into any discussion on sovereignty over the Falkland Islands during the recent visit of President Menem. The President and his delegation reiterated to us the Argentine view on the Falklands. In response we made it clear that the UK does not regard its sovereignty over the Falklands as negotiable.

EC Documents

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of European Community documents are (i) not public documents and (ii) not publicly released as a matter of course though of an unrestricted nature. [59800]

Ms Quin: A number of European Community documents are automatically placed in the public domain, for example, Commission proposals, Council common positions and Council press releases. All other Council documents can be requested by the public under the conditions of Council Decision 93/731/EC of 20 December 1993. Equivalent arrangements exist for other institutions. All applications are treated on a case-by-case basis. In 1997, 2,431 Council documents were requested, of which 78.3 per cent. were released.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a list of requests for access to documents of the European Communities by members of the public which were not granted in 1997, together with the reasons for refusal. [59794]

Ms Quin: A review of implementation of Council Decision 93/731/EC on Public access to Council documents is produced every two years. This lists the statistics on requests for access to documents and the reasons for refusal. In 1997, requests were made for 2,431 documents and access was refused to 528 of these documents. Statistics on the invoking of reasons for refusal of access under Decisions 93/731 for 1996–97 are contained in the Council review, copies of which I am placing in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the establishment of a register of unrestricted European Community documents. [59801]

Ms Quin: During their Presidency in the first half of 1998, the UK Government pressed for a public register of Council documents (both European Community and European Union) to be established. We expect the register to be up and running at the beginning of 1999.

EC Proposals

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those proposals under consideration at European Community level intended for formal discussion after ratification of the Treaty of Amsterdam, presently without treaty base. [59802]

Ms Quin: There are no legislative proposals currently being considered at Ministerial level which do not have an existing treaty base. Certain matters are being considered at working group level, however, to prepare for the implementation of the Amsterdam Treaty once it enters into force. These include preparations for the incorporation of the Schengen acquis, proposed common principles for European elections, and proposed measures to establish the Policy Planning and Early Warning Unit for CFSP.

People's Europe '98

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason the European Movement was approached to help organise People's Europe '98. [59804]

Ms Quin: Decisions about the involvement of organisations in the People's Europe '98 conference were the responsibility of the organisers. We suggested to the organisers that a wide range of opinion should be represented.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the involvement of (i) the Confederation of British Industry, (ii) the Institute of Directors, (iii) the Federation of Small Businesses and (iv) the Forum of Private Business in People's Europe '98. [59803]

Ms Quin: Decisions about the involvement of representatives of civic society in the People's Europe '98 conference were the responsibility of the organisers. At our suggestion, the organisers sought to ensure that a wide range of opinion was represented, including non-governmental organisations, local government, trade unions, small business, youth organisations and academia.

Building Europe Together Programme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the publications under the Building Europe Together project and released in the United Kingdom. [59785]

Ms Quin: The following publications were produced under the European Commission's Building Europe Together programme: factsheets on some of the areas covered by the Amsterdam Treaty; and booklets entitled "The Citizen's Guide to the Treaty of Amsterdam" and "The Treaty of Amsterdam: Questions and Answers". All of these are available on the Internet. The booklets are available, only on request, from the Commission Representation in the UK.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 33, if he will request the Israeli Government to list the number of building permits issued for Jewish housing in East Jerusalem since 1994 indicating where building (a) has been completed, (b) is in progress and (c) has yet to start. [59556]

Mr. Fatchett: We have no exact figures but, according to the available information since February 1995 approximately 3,000 Jewish housing units have been built on confiscated land and a further 6,200 units are at various stages of the planning process. Of the latter, 6,000 are planned for Har Homa (Jebel Abu Ghneim), although tenders have been issued for only 1,025 units; 58 building permits have been issued on the Mount of Olives; and 70–130 units are planned for Ras al-Amoud, although these are not at a very advanced stage. We are unaware of any actual building underway on housing units in East Jerusalem this year: most of the activity has involved either paper exercises or the laying of infrastructure and erection of fences in preparation for building.

International Criminal Court

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to ratify the International Criminal Court Treaty. [59779]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We intend that the UK should be among the first sixty States to ratify the Statute of the International Criminal Court. Legislation will be necessary before we can proceed to ratification. We will introduce such legislation as soon as the Parliamentary timetable allows.

Sanjiv Kumar Nandra

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 530, in respect of Sanjiv Kumar Nandra, ref IMM/ECR/98/S, when the Migration and Visa Correspondence Unit will write to the hon. Member for Leicester, East; on what date Mr. Sanjiv Kumar Nandra was interviewed in New Delhi; and when Mr. Sanjiv Kumar Nandra was expected to come to the United Kingdom following his interview in New Delhi. [59554]

Mr. Fatchett: The Migration and Visa Correspondence Unit wrote to my hon. Friend about this case on 27 May 1998. Mr. Sanjiv Kumar Nandra was interviewed in New Delhi on 29 May 1997. We have no knowledge of Mr. Sanjiv Kumar Nandra's intended dates of travel since such information is not normally provided with settlement applications.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59744]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We keep registers of births, marriages and deaths at British consulates abroad. Only Consular officers have access to the master registers kept at post but information from them can be supplied to bona fide applicants on request. Copies of these registers are transmitted annually to the Office for National Statistics, and indexes to them are then made generally available (to hon. Members and members of the public) at the Family Records Centre at 1 Myddleton Street, London, EC1.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59727]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department is currently providing 29 nursery places for children aged from 3 months to 5 years. In addition, holiday playschemes are available during school holidays. Parents pay an average of £83.50 per week for nursery places and £8.06 per day to holiday playschemes.

The FCO records information about childcare on a calendar year basis. In 1996, 155 staff used FCO childcare facilities. This number included members of the then Overseas Development Administration. This represented 1.85 per cent. of total staff in the FCO and ODA at that time.

In 1997, 50 parents used these facilities: some of them used the facilities for more than one child or in the case of the Holiday Playscheme on more than one occasion. This represented 0.7 per cent. of total FCO staff.

High Commissioners

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to ensure Her Majesty's Government's representatives abroad are of High Commissioner status in as many different Commonwealth countries as finances allow. [59569]

Mr. Fatchett: One of the main strategic aims of UK foreign policy is to strengthen the Commonwealth and improve the prosperity of its members. This is being taken into account in the current review of our global representation which will modernise our world-wide operations and ensure that staff and resources are deployed so as best to meet our objectives.

Jean Monnet Projects

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the criteria for the selection of European centres of excellence as Jean Monnet projects. [59790]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available. The EC programme "Jean Monnet: European Integration in Universities" is implemented by the European Commission without direct involvement on the part of EU Member States; however, I advised that 23 per cent. of all Jean Monnet projects are UK led.

EU Information Projects

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 205, if he will place in the Library a financial breakdown by project of the information strategy for EU applicant countries; what criteria determine the selection of such projects; and what monitoring is undertaken by representatives of Her Majesty's Government. [59784]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

Information on individual projects is held by the European Commission. I will place it in the Library as soon as possible.

The objectives of the programme are to promote understanding in Central and Eastern Europe of the EU's pre-accession strategy, the Europe Agreements and the role of Phare as the main financial instrument of the strategy, and more broadly to promote understanding of the EU and the implications of accession. Activities which meet these objectives are approved by the Commission for management by the Commission services or candidate country Governments.

Management and monitoring of the programme is carried out by the Commission. Member States receive a report on the activities of the previous year before approving commitments for the current year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Dome

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the foreign-owned companies he has contacted in relation to providing financial backing to the Millennium Dome project; and if he will make a statement; [57981]

(2) if he will list the meetings he has had with the American company, McDonald's in his official capacities in relation to the Millennium Dome; and if he will make a statement. [57982]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 27 October 1998, Official Report, column 130.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the criteria which have been followed by the Millennium Experience Company when deciding which companies to approach in their efforts to attract private sector financial backing to the project; and if he will make a statement. [57984]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) sponsorship strategy aims to identify business and commercial sectors, and individual companies within those sectors, which have a potential affinity to the various components of the Dome. These components include the different exhibit zones and the linked National Programme of activities around the country. A further important consideration is the NMEC's overriding objective to ensure that sponsorship arrangements do not impact adversely on the integrity of the project as the national focus for the millennium celebrations.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the contacts the Millennium Experience Company has had with the American company, McDonald's; and if he will make a statement. [57983]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has been in discussion for some months with a number of major companies operating in the UK and elsewhere, including McDonald's. The unique nature of the sponsorship arrangements for the Millennium Experience project inevitably requires a series of meetings at officer and Director levels and such meetings have taken place between the NMEC and all committed and potential sponsors.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will detail the merchandising arrangements which have been agreed between the Millennium Experience Company and private sector financial backers; and if he will make a statement. [57985]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The Millennium Experience is not a trade show. Opportunities for sponsors to promote or sell their own products will be strictly controlled through contractual arrangements with the NMEC and these will ensure that the integrity of the project is not adversely affected.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make it his policy to publish, within one week of their agreement to commit funds, the identity of all new private sponsors of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich; [59232]

(2) if he will make it his policy to publish, within the week of their agreement at board level to commit funds, the identity of all new corporate sponsors of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. [59233]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The timing of any announcements about sponsorship is a matter for negotiation between the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) and individual sponsors. Both the NMEC and its sponsors have operational and commercial considerations to take into account which will influence the timing of announcements.

However, association with the nation's unique focus for the millennium celebrations is something which I would expect all those who support it, financially or otherwise, to want to declare as soon as possible.

Communication Satellites

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will devise a strategy to deal with the possibility of communication satellite damage and its potential effects on the British economy; and if he will make a statement. [58548]

Mr. Battle: The responsibility for the safety of communications satellites lies in the first instance with the owners and operators of the satellites. This responsibility has been carried out admirably by inter-governmental organisations such as Intelsat, Eutelsat and Inmarsat and by the private sector for many years. The wider issue of space debris and its implications for satellite safety is a major concern of spacefaring nations. This is tackled by a number of international organisations as it is not feasible for any one country to develop a space debris strategy in isolation. The British National Space Centre works on this issue with its European Space Agency partners on the Space Debris Advisory Committee and at National Group meetings. The British National Space Centre also plays an active part in the Inter Agency Debris Committee and the United Nations Committee for the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space. Her Majesty's Government remain committed to an international approach to common space problems.

Vibration White Finger

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the delay in reaching agreement on the payment of compensation to those suffering from (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic bronchitis and emphysema. [58727]

Mr. Battle: On Vibration White Finger (VWF) discussions were held with the claimants' solicitors on 2 November where good progress was made towards reaching a final agreement on a scheme for compensating miners with VWF. Those present agreed a single medical assessment process for working out the degree of injury, and agreed that a pilot of these tests can begin on 1 December at our testing centre in Sheffield. We are working hard to establish whether full and final offers can be made to miners on the basis of existing medical reports being sufficient evidence. The next meeting is scheduled for 30 November following a further exchange of information and proposals. I have given officials and advisers attending that meeting a mandate to progress negotiations to a rapid conclusion and, assuming the plaintiffs' solicitors act reasonably, I believe an agreement can now be reached with no further need to visit the courts. To reduce delays further, sets of medical assessment equipment have already been purchased and work has been done to identify organisations able to deliver these assessments.

With regard to chronic bronchitis and emphysema. The Plaintiff's Solicitors Group accepted my Department's suggestion to adjourn a High Court hearing scheduled for 6 November and, instead, held a meeting with officials where good progress was made to resolve the outstanding issues. It was agreed that the medical advisers from both sides should get together to discuss the outstanding medical issues. This meeting took place on 11 November. My understanding is that this discussion went well and should allow us and the plaintiffs' solicitors to get on with agreeing the arrangements for handling the many thousands of claims from miners or their widows. I am determined that a final agreement is reached as soon as possible. There will need to be a tendering process for the required medical services which will inevitably take time and we are considering ways to speed up that process. In the meantime we are looking at ways in which we can extend the offer of interim payments to other categories of claimants.

Commercial Debts

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money has been set aside in the current financial year to publicise the enactment of the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998. [59144]

Mrs. Roche: The Government are committed to tackling late payment and are working in partnership with the business community to improve the UK's payment culture. We are supporting the Better Payment Practice Campaign which is disseminating information about the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998.

To date £186,459 has been spent to support the campaign of which £40,000 has been contributed by the private sector. The total figure does not include staff time, or time given by Members of the Better Payment Practice Group, or other resources. The Government's contribution has paid for the production of a User's Guide to the Act and a dedicated web-site.

In addition individual trade and business organisations have publicised the Act through trade publications at no cost to Government.

Gas and Electricity Services

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to require providers of gas and electricity services to advertise their prices in a standard format. [59303]

Mr. Battle: This is a matter for Director General of Gas Supply and the Director General of Electricity Supply. However, I understand that OFGAS are consulting with suppliers and others to see whether it is possible to reach agreement on a simple means of presenting price information in a way which will enable customers straightforwardly to compare different companies' offers. I understand too that OFFER are considering a similar approach.

In addition, as I announced on 23 September, at my request the Association of Energy Suppliers, whose membership includes the majority of domestic gas and electricity suppliers, have recently clarified their code of practice on doorstep selling to ensure that all their sales representatives provide, on request, clear written information on prices.

Oil Production and Transportation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates the Government have made in their environmental assessment of the volume of oil that might be transported by tanker from the trenches licensed for production in the Atlantic Frontier and the likely increase in the number of tankers as a result. [59376]

Mr. Battle: There are currently two oilfields, Foinaven and Schiehallion, producing from the Atlantic Frontier with combined reserves of approximately 700 million barrels of oil. Both fields use shuttle-tanker export for produced oil and the shuttle-tanker frequency for both fields is one return journey every five days or so. Over the next twenty years we anticipate approximately 1,000 return shuttle-tanker journeys to deplete Foinaven and Schiehallion.

Any new oil developments in this area will be treated on a case-by-case basis in the light of existing and potential infrastructure provision and will be subject to a full Environmental Impact Assessment process.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of electricity produced in the last year for which figures are available came from renewable sources. [58716]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 11 November 1998]: In 1997 electricity generated from renewable sources accounted for just over 2 per cent. of total UK electricity generation. Through the contracts granted under NFFO-5 and previous NFFO rounds, taken with existing large hydro capacity, that figure is expected to rise to 5 per cent. by about 2003. We have set ourselves the target of achieving a figure of 10 per cent. by 2010.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated concerning the effect on employment of increasing spending on Government research and development on renewable energy. [59773]

Mr. Battle: My Department has not commissioned specific work in this area, but the UK renewables industry is currently estimated to employ around 3,500 people directly. Some of these jobs have resulted from the DTI's New and Renewable Energy Programme and the EPSRC's parallel R&D programme, but the majority have been created as a result of contracts placed with suppliers of electricity from renewable sources under the Government's Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation. If spending on R&D in this area were increased as a result of the current review of policy on renewable energy then we might expect to see a modest increase in jobs in the industry, research organisations and consultancies.

The development and deployment of renewables is likely to lead to further job opportunities. The EU White Paper on Renewables estimates that a doubling of the proportion of the Community's energy to come from renewables to 12 per cent. would create at least 500,000 jobs in the EU by 2020.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when the review of renewable energy sources is to be published; [59769]

(2) if the review of renewable energy sources will consider longer term and higher targets than the present one; [59770]

(3) if the review of renewable energy sources will consider whether electricity supply companies should be obliged to purchase a certain percentage from renewable sources; [59771]

(4) what estimate he has made of the extent to which the target of 10 per cent. of electricity from renewable sources could be met from offshore wind energy alone. [59772]

Mr. Battle: As part of the renewables policy review my Department is examining what contribution new and renewable energy technologies could make in the UK, what role UK industry might have in home and export markets, and the contribution renewables could make in achieving our national and international commitments for greenhouse gas reductions. I am looking at both the timescale to 2010, and laying the foundation for an expanding contribution in the longer term. I expect to make an announcement about the review later this year.

To achieve an aim of 10% electricity from renewables would require 3–4 Gigawatts (GW) DNC (Declared Net Capacity) of additional renewable capacity beyond that secured under the current NFFO arrangements. It would require significant contribution from wastes, including landfill gas; onshore wind; offshore wind; and energy crops. Small scale hydro could also be expected to continue making a smaller but important contribution. Decisions on the proportions that these technologies might contribute to meeting a 10% target would be made progressively in the light of experience and further developments in the market.

Under the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) Public Electricity Suppliers are already required to buy a defined amount of electricity generated by renewable sources. We are also working with renewable energy generators to encourage them to take advantage of the liberalised market and to take up the opportunity for 'green electricity' trading.

The renewables policy review will reflect the outcome of our current consultation on the future of gas and electricity regulation. Our proposals for the future of regulation are contained in "A Fair Deal for Consumers; Modernising the Framework for Utility Regulation" and include separate licensing arrangements for electricity supply and distribution, new electricity trading arrangements. We are considering in parallel how NFFO might be adapted to the new circumstances.

Export Licences (Sri Lanka)

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what export licences have been (a) granted and (b) refused for the export of military equipment to Sri Lanka since June. [59509]

Mrs. Roche: The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating.

The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 1 June and 16 October 1998, 23 individual licences were issued covering the export to consignees or end-users in Sri Lanka of goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, the so-called Military List: 15 standard individual export licences (SIELs) and 8 open individual export licences (OIELs). In the same period, no applications for such SIELs or OIELs were refused. Individual licences may cover a range of goods with various ratings. Where this is so, the licence is included in the Table in the total for all of the relevant ratings.

Individual licences issued between 1 June and 16 October 1998 covering the export to Sri Lanka of goods on the Military List

Rating	Number of SIELs issued covering goods with this rating	Number of OIELs issued covering goods with this rating
ML5	1	0
ML10	1	2
ML11	4	4
ML15	1	1

This information should be considered in light of my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

This information does not cover any Media OIELs that may have been issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

In addition, goods on the Military List may have been exported to Sri Lanka under certain Open General Export Licences; copies of all Open General Export Licences valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

Radio Advertising

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce the results of wealth warnings on radio advertising; and if he will make a statement. [59491]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 12 November 1998]: I am considering the responses received to the consultation on wealth warnings on radio advertising. I will announce my decision shortly.

Radiation-Induced Illness

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what compensation has been paid by nuclear companies to those suffering from radiation-induced illness in each of the past 10 years. [59613]

Mr. Battle: The UK civil nuclear industry (BNFL, BNFL Magnox Generation Group, UKAEA, Nuclear Electric Ltd., Scottish Nuclear Ltd. and Urenco (Capenhurst) Ltd.) plus MOD, the Atomic Weapons Establishment and Devonport and Rosyth Dockyards and all civil and military nuclear associated trade unions have a voluntary scheme for determining compensation due to employees or former employees who develop radiation-linked diseases. Between the introduction of the Scheme in 1982 and the end of 1997, compensation payments have been awarded in 75 cases with over £3¼ million in compensation being paid. Details on the number and totals of compensation payments made in each of the past ten years are as follows:

Year	Awards	Total amount of compensation paid (£)	Participants
1988	2	39,337	BNFL (1982), UKAEA (1987)
1989	2	51,267
1990	3	115,431
1991	4	136,346
1992	7	378,002
1993	5	110,088	Nuclear Electric, Scottish Nuclear, BNFL/Magnox Generation Group and URENCO (Capenhurst) join
1993	[1]4	192,633
1994	20	1,011,746	MOD and AWE join
1995	6	257,920
1996	10	341,946
1996	10	341,946
1997	1	20,000	Devonport and Rosyth docklands join
1997	[1]1	21,244

[1] Following changes in the method of technical assessment, this led to a subsequent re-analysis of past claims. Further compensation was awarded to five pre-1991 cases.

Since 1995 the employers and unions from the organisations participating in the Scheme agreed that, in order to protect the identification of individual claimants, information on successful claims will be provided only for the compensation scheme as a whole. Details on the compensation scheme payments have therefore been contained in an Annual Press Statement from the Compensation Scheme for Radiation Linked Diseases. I am arranging for copies of the annual statements for 1995, 1996 and 1997 to be placed in the Library of the House. I understand that the annual statement for 1998 is to be published shortly and I will arrange for copies of this statement to be similarly placed.

Japanese Vehicles

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the likely increase in (a) the number of Japanese vehicles imported and (b) the increase in market share of Japanese imports in the UK car market when the voluntary restraint agreement on imports is lifted. [59462]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 12 November 1998]: I welcome the opening of the car market that will occur when the voluntary restraint agreement between Japan and the European Union expires in 1999. I have not estimated what difference this will make to import volumes and market share.

Industrial Policy

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the current objectives of the Government's industrial policy; and if he will make statement. [58845]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Government's objectives for the improvement of business competitiveness will be set out in the forthcoming Competitiveness white paper.

Dounreay

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on (a) current reprocessing contracts at Dounreay, (b) future reprocessing contracts at Dounreay and (c) future reprocessing contracts at Dounreay involving processed fuel. [59925]

Mr. Battle: On 5 June 1998, the Government announced that they had accepted UKAEA's recommendation that it should accept no new commercial reprocessing contracts at Dounreay and would end reprocessing once its committed commercial business and own spent fuel liabilities had been completed. In answer to a question following the announcement, 5 June 1998, Official Report, columns 385–86, UKAEA provided details of Dounreay's reprocessing contracts to the House of Commons library and also to the Trade and Industry Committee's inquiry into Georgian nuclear material.

The Fuel Cycle Area at Dounreay is currently shut down following the Health and Safety Executive's direction to halt operations after the loss of electrical supplies in May 1998 and will restart only when HSE is satisfied it is safe to do so.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59723]

Dr. Howells: Departmental staff in central London have access to a 32-place holiday playscheme for a minimum of 54 days each academic year. Staff contribute £7.50 per day per place towards the £16.17 daily fee.

From this year DTI staff in Cardiff have access to a local holiday playscheme for a contribution of £6.50 to the £13.00 daily fee per place. An annual contribution is also made towards the costs of an inter-Departmental Easter and Summer playscheme for staff in Government Office for the East Midlands.

Approximately 100 staff used the central London playscheme in 1996–97, rising to 189 staff (about 6 per cent. of London-based HQ staff) in 1997–98. In 1996–97 and 1997–98 respectively 11 and 9 staff in the Government Office for the East Midlands used the local playscheme facilities.

In addition, the Department offers a range of other family friendly policies to help staff balance their work and family lives including flexible working hours, part time working, 5 days' paid paternity leave, paid leave for domestic emergencies and career breaks.

Manchester United Takeover Report

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he expects the MMC report on the proposed BSkyB takeover of Manchester United to be published before the conclusion of the Restrictive Practices Court inquiry into the BSkyB/BBC/Premier League television arrangements. [59935]

Dr. Howells: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) are due to deliver their report on BSkyB's proposed bid for Manchester United to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by 12 March 1999. The report will be published as soon as possible thereafter.

The proceedings issued by the Director General of Fair Trading in the Restrictive practices Court concerning the Premier League's collective selling of clubs' broadcasting rights, and the exclusive nature of restrictions in agreements with broadcasters on televising of such rights, will commence on 11 January 1999.

My right hon. Friend has no role in the proceedings or in the decision which will be taken by the Court. I cannot comment on whether the MMC's report will be published before the conclusion of the Court's inquiry.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the proportion of his Department's computer systems which will be millennium-compliant on 1 April 1999. [58890]

Mr. Mandelson: On current plans all of the Department's business critical computer systems will have been corrected, fully tested and put back into use by 1 April 1999. The target date for completion of work on non-business critical computer systems is the end of July 1999.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bug busters have completed their training and started work on the millennium date change problem; and what estimate he has made of the number that will be in place by (a) 1 January 1999, (b) 1 April 1999, (c) 1 July 1999, (d) 1 October 1999 and (e) 1 January 2000. [58983]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 9 November 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

We expect 20,000 to have undertaken training as a result of our initiative in line with our target. Already 1,547 have completed or booked on to courses and we are actively encouraging small businesses to take up the place on offer.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59737]

National Minimum Wage

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has to help businesses overcome problems relating to new regulations as a result of the introduction of the national minimum wage; [59860]

(2) what effort he is making to overcome the fears of the business community of being overloaded by new regulations at the introduction of the national minimum wage next year. [59859]

Mr. Ian McCartney: We have based our approach to the National Minimum Wage Act 1998 and the draft Regulations on the Better Regulation Unit's five key criteria of transparency, accountability, targeting, consistency and proportionality. We consulted and involved the business community at all stages and will provide detailed guidance for employers once the Regulations have been approved by Parliament.

Assisted Area Status (Coastal Resorts)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which coastal resorts have assisted area status. [59838]

Mrs. Roche: There is no single definitive list of coastal resorts.

In England, the current Assisted Areas map in coastal areas covers part or all of the coasts of the following counties or former counties: Merseyside, Lancashire, Cumbria, Northumberland, Tyne and Wear, Durham, Cleveland, North Yorkshire, Humberside, Lincolnshire, Norfolk, Essex, Kent, East Sussex, the Isle of Wight, Dorset, Devon, Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly. In Wales, the current coverage includes part or all of the coasts of the following unitary authorities: Newport, Cardiff, the Vale of Glamorgan, Bridgend, Neath Port Talbot, Swansea, Carmarthenshire, Pembrokeshire, Ceredigion, Gwynedd, Isle of Anglesey, Denbighshire and Flintshire. In Scotland the coverage includes part or all of the coasts of the following unitary authorities: Dumfries and Galloway, South Ayrshire, North Ayrshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute, Highland, the Western Isles, Moray, Angus, Fife.

Car Prices

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the impact of (a) 10 per cent. and (b) 15 per cent. reduction in new car prices on the (i) revenue and (ii) profits of United Kingdom-based car manufacturers. [59566]

Mr. Mandelson: The revenue and profits of businesses are influenced by a range of factors, of which the price of the product is only one. I do not therefore propose to make such an estimate.

Car Imports

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the likely increase in car imports into the United Kingdom by (a) volume and (b) market share if the present restrictions on non-EU imports are lifted. [59565]

Mr. Mandelson: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport is currently engaged in public consultation on the future of the Single Vehicle Approval scheme under which cars which are not made to European Type Approval standards are admitted into the UK. In doing so he will take account of the views of all affected industry and consumer interests on the effect of the arrangements and the proposed changes to them, including the effect on import levels.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate the Government have made of the likely change in car prices to personal customers in the United Kingdom if (a) the restrictions on non-EU imports are lifted and (b) the present exclusive franchise system of distribution is scrapped. [59567]

Mr. Mandelson: As far as the changes to the Single Vehicle Approval scheme are concerned, I refer the right hon. Member to my answer of Official Report, column 433.

The system of distributing and selling new cars through franchised dealers appointed by manufacturers is common to all the world's leading car markets. The European Commission is to review its operation in 2000, and in doing so will review the benefit the consumer receives from the system. The Government supports this approach.

Overseas Trade Fairs and Seminars

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the support available from his Department to assist United Kingdom businesses participating in overseas trade fairs and seminars; and which trade fairs, seminars and outward missions his Department will support in the year 1 April 1999 to 31 March 2000. [60317]

Mr. Mandelson: On 16 December 1997 and 25 March 1998 the then Minister for Trade announced details of the new Support for Exhibitions and Seminars Abroad scheme (SESA) for all events taking place from 1 April 1999. The scheme is based on wide consultation with business and recommendations of the Export Forum and its main features include:

a combined scheme covering both trade fairs and seminars, assistance for new exporters to become established in markets abroad, help for smaller groups in niche sectors and difficult markets, and help for experienced exporters entering new target markets.

The simplified grant structure has a ceiling of £2,300 per participant with an additional supplement for those taking part in events in the emerging target markets identified by the Export Forum.

A copy of an Overview of the SESA scheme will be placed in the Library of the House.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Trade announced on 12 October our programme for supporting trade fairs and seminars abroad, and outward missions. I will place lists of the events in the Library of the House. Organisations that bid for support have already been informed.

Unsolicited Communications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take to deal with unsolicited direct marketing faxes and calls; and if he will make a statement. [60316]

Mrs. Roche: Unsolicited direct marketing faxes and phone calls can be a real source of annoyance and an invasion of privacy, and the Government take these problems seriously. We will be dealing with them in forthcoming Regulations under the European Communities Act 1972 which will implement the Telecommunications Data Protection Directive (97/66/EC).

The DTI has carried out a wide consultation on draft Regulations with both business and consumer interests. We are now revising the Regulations in the light of comments received and hope, before the end of this year, to make and lay Regulations before Parliament. In accordance with the Directive, these will ban unsolicited direct marketing faxes from being sent to any private individual or sole trader in the UK, as well as to any partnership in England and Wales. The Regulations will also establish an "opt-out" scheme for corporate subscribers who do not wish to receive such faxes. A similar "opt-out" scheme will enable individuals to avoid receiving unsolicited direct marketing calls.

Our intention is to bring the Regulations into force as soon as is practicable next year, bearing in mind the need to ensure that an effective mechanism is set in place so that the "opt-out" schemes can deliver the level of protection required. We will also take into account the need to allow sufficient time for industry to establish its compliance systems.

The Government previously stated that they intended the draft Regulations to come into force on the same date as the Data Protection Act 1998. In his written answer of 26 October 1998, Official Report, column 58, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Knowsley, North and Sefton, East (Mr. Howarth), announced that, because of the need to prepare and consult on substantial subordinate legislation, the Government now hoped to bring the Data Protection Act 1998 into force in the second quarter of next year. We do not anticipate that this will affect the timing of the Regulations dealing with unsolicited direct marketing calls and faxes.

Nuclear Industry Expenditure

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the amount of money spent in the last financial year by (a) BNFL, (b) Atomic Energy Authority Technology, (c) UKAEA and (d) NIREX on (i) public relations, (ii) educational materials for schools (iii) information materials for parliamentarians and (iv) advertising. [60007]

Mr. Battle: This is a matter for the companies concerned. I have asked the Chief Executive of BNFL, the Chairman of UKAEA and the Managing Director of NIREX to write to my hon. Friend providing these details. AEA Technology is a company in the private sector.

Energy Policy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the current reviews and consultations being carried out by his Department on energy policy. [59994]

Mr. Battle: My Department is currently reviewing its policies and programmes with respect to support for new and renewable sources of energy. We have reviewed our policy with respect to support for clean coal technology, and set out our broad aims in the White Paper Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation (Cm 4071), but the detail of the programme is still under consideration. Energy Papers setting out the details of both these programmes will be published shortly.

In addition, following up the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation, the Department is leading a Steering Committee which will take forward work on the recommendations made during that review by Merz and McLellan on electricity system security, and is working closely with OFFER to develop and implement the new trading arrangements for electricity which will replace the current Pool.

Congress of Europe

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons he attended the 50th Anniversary of the Congress of Europe; at what cost; and at whose invitation. [60003]

Mr. Wilson: I attended and addressed the 50th Anniversary of the Congress of Europe on behalf of the UK Presidency, at the invitation of the Secretary General of the European Movement. The cost was £640.00.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the Food Standards Agency to be operational. [58273]

Mr. Rooker: The Government remain committed to setting up a Food Standards Agency, but I cannot anticipate the Queen's Speech.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Syms: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent by (a) his Department and (b) the Meat Hygiene Service on advertising for and recruitment of vets in each European Union country. [58499]

Mr. Rooker: For the financial year 1998–99 to date, the Department and the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) have spent the following on advertising and recruitment for vets in the following European Union countries:

£ (rounded)

Country	Department	MHS
UK	2,200	3,564
Eire	650	650
France	—	3,400
Germany	—	430
Italy	—	1,480
Spain	—	6,000

Badgers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what sums he has expended in efforts to produce an effective vaccine against TB in badgers. [59033]

Mr. Rooker: Work on the development of a vaccine to prevent TB in badgers began in 1994. By the end of the financial year 1998–99, £1.96 million will have been spent. Following the recommendations in the Krebs Report, the focus of vaccine research has changed from badgers to cattle, but development work which is taking place at present is of value to both.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what differences exist between the study area and adjacent areas as regards the prevalence of tuberculosis in badgers. [59035]

Mr. Rooker: At the Central Science Laboratory's study area at Woodchester Park in Gloucestershire the annual prevalence of bovine tuberculosis excretion in badgers varied between 0.5 per cent. and 5.7 per cent. between 1981 and 1995. The badger population outside the study area has not been systematically investigated.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what conclusions he has reached as to (a) the amount of tuberculosis transmission between adult male badgers, transmission from mother to juveniles when suckling and aerosol infection between sow and young in setts and (b) the possibility of eradicating tuberculosis in badgers and keeping them clear of further infection. [59034]

Mr. Rooker: There are no quantitative data on the relative contributions made by each of the methods of transmission mentioned at (a). We currently have insufficient information to say whether eradication of TB in badgers may be possible. The Department's research programme and the survey and other information gained during the randomised trial are vital to improve our understanding of how to control the disease in the longer term.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has made of (a) the number of badgers in England and Wales, (b) the highest and lowest densities per square kilometre and (c) the incidence of tuberculosis in those populations. [59036]

Mr. Rooker: With respect to part (a) of this question, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 252. The highest badger density data published is 25 adults per square kilometre at the Woodchester Park study area in Gloucestershire. In marginal habitats, densities as low as two badgers per kilometre have been recorded by researchers. The incidence of TB in badgers has not been systematically investigated outside the Woodchester Park study area.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme (Northamptonshire)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the pieces of land in Northamptonshire to which public access has been announced under the voluntary code which are part of the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. [58778]

Mr. Morley: There are 42 agreements under which land managers receive payments under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme for providing access to land in Northamptonshire. The list is published in the Ministry's Conservation Walks Register. I have placed an extract from the Register covering the county of Northamptonshire in the Library of the House. Details are also available on the MAFF website.

Food Labelling

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress made in the programme to label (a) meat and (b) other produce with the country of origin; and when he expects such labelling to begin. [59347]

Mr. Rooker: Rules on the labelling of food products are harmonised in the EC. Generally, the place of origin of any food must be given if omitting it could mislead the purchaser about the true place of origin of the food.

More specifically, fresh fruit and vegetables covered by EC marketing standards regulations are required to be marked with the country of origin at all points of sale. Under the Beef Labelling Scheme, any beef labelled with country of origin information must derive from animals born, reared and slaughtered in that country. National origin labelling of beef will become compulsory from the year 2000. The labels on pre-packaged poultrymeat must give an indication of its country of origin when it is imported from outside the Community and we are currently taking steps to require this information on labels, tickets or notices near where unpackaged poultry is offered for sale.

Separately, members of the British Retail Consortium have recently given a voluntary undertaking not to sell imported beef, lamb and pig meat, processed in the UK, under a British label. This is a welcome commitment, for UK producers and consumers alike.

Imported Beef

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the results of the consultation on whether the same restrictions on removing the central nervous system and specified bovine materials should apply to imported beef as are placed upon domestic animals. [59447]

Mr. Rooker: The Specified Risk Material Order 1997 prohibits the import into Great Britain of specified risk material (as defined therein), including the brains and spinal cords of bovine animals more than 6 months old and sheep and goats more than 12 months old. The Order also prohibits the importation of beef and a range of other animal products unless they are accompanied at the time of import by a certificate issued by the veterinary authorities in the country of origin confirming that they do not contain and were not derived from specified risk material.

The Order came into force on 1 January 1998, following the European Commission's decision on 16 December 1997 to defer the application of EU-wide measures to control the use of specified risk materials. The Government took the view that the interim safeguard measures in the Order, which complemented the controls on specified risk material derived from animals slaughtered in the UK, were necessary to protect public health. The provisions of the Order were notified to a large number of interested individuals, companies and organisations in writing and in a meeting prior to its entry into force but no formal consultation exercise was carried out.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59714]

Mr. Morley: In accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, no registers are limited to inspection by hon. Members only. The following registers are open for inspection by both hon. Members and the public, subject to some restrictions where indicated.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what child care provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59716]

Mr. Morley: The demand for child care provision for members of staff is regularly reviewed in MAFF and its Agencies through staff surveys.

The Ministry and some of its Agencies provide both subsidised nursery places and holiday play schemes for staff with children, where these can be justified by a sound business case. Some of these are in facilities shared with other organisations.

Nursery places available to MAFF and Agency staff:

1 April 1996: 80

1 April 1997: 120

1 April 1998: 130.

At 1 April 1998 costs to parents for full time places varied between £50 and £90 a week, reflecting local costs, facilities and value for money.

Holiday play schemes have been made available to staff at ten Ministry and Agency locations throughout the country over the period from 1 April 1996 to 1 April 1998. Daily costs to parents during 1997–98 varied between £4.50 and £9.

The number of parents who benefit from these child care facilities is usually greater than the number of places available because of turnover, availability of part time places and the option to use holiday play schemes for only part of a holiday.

Child care provision is only one of the family friendly measures and arrangements available to staff in MAFF and its Agencies. Others include: flexible and part time working, career breaks, special leave for domestic emergencies, and paternity and maternity leave on full pay.

BSE

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the amount of money his Department has spent in Staffordshire on measures relating to the BSE problem; and if he will make a statement. [59545]

Mr. Morley: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the publications in which his Department has taken advertisements to publicise the millennium bug and indicate the cost of these advertisements; [59562]

(2) if he will list the publications in which his Department has placed advertisements to publicise the millennium bug, indicating the cost of the advertisements. [59910]

Mr. Morley: The Government are taking action centrally, primarily through Action 2000, to ensure that businesses are aware of the potential threat of the Millennium bug. My Department is in close contact with the farming and food industries to reinforce the message. We have not so far considered it appropriate to take out any direct advertisements.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate he has made of the susceptibility to the millennium bug of farm machinery and equipment in the United Kingdom; and what measures he proposes to take to deal with the problem; [59563]

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure that the operation of farm machinery in the UK is not affected by the millennium bug. [59909]

Mr. Morley: Farmers, like other businessmen, use a wide range of machinery and equipment, some of which may be susceptible to the Millennium bug. My Department is working closely with the NFU and others to ensure that farmers are aware of the potential for disruption to their businesses and of the action they can take to avoid this. Questions of equipment safety are, of course, a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52700]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The term research covers a wide range of activities from scientific and engineering research through to consultancies and public opinion surveys. The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HEALTH

New-variant CJD

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent his Department has recorded which of the known new-variant CJD victims were previously blood donors; if he will publish the information his Department has collated on this matter; and if he will take steps to trace and destroy blood retained by the Blood Transfusion Service from these individuals. [59982]

Ms Jowell: Cases of new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease are reported to the CJD Surveillance Unit in Edinburgh which informs the United Kingdom blood services. Four such cases have been notified and steps have been taken to trace and withdraw components or products from the donation, as a precautionary measure whenever this has been possible.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what screening tests are currently available for new-variant CJD; [59985]

(2) what efforts his Department is making to develop a test for new-variant CJD. [59984]

Ms Jowell: There are no screening tests for new variant CJD (nvCJD) currently available. The diagnosis can be confirmed only by direct examination of brain tissue.

The development of efficient diagnostic techniques for CJD was identified in the Government's strategy for research relating to the human health aspects of Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies (TSEs) published in November 1996. Efficient diagnostic techniques are vital to the assessment of disease mechanisms, to diagnosing the presence of the disease in a patient and to epidemiological surveillance.

The Department is currently funding the Public Health Laboratory Service for two specific projects in this regard. One project is aimed at the development of panels of cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) for the evaluation of tests for CJD, and the other is aimed at the development of a sensitive and specific test for the detection of abnormal Prion Protein in blood and urine samples.

A complete list of Government funded research on diagnostic tests for TSEs is available on the Medical Research Council's Website at http://www.mrc.ac.uk/tse_tb2.htm.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the risk of transmitting new-variant CJD by blood transfusion. [59980]

Ms Jowell: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee considered all available risk assessments in June 1998. Following this the Committee recommended that the Government should extend the use of leucodepletion for all blood destined for transfusion as soon as practically possible to reduce the theoretical risk of transmission of new-variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the risk of infection by new-variant CJD posed to close blood line relatives of the known new-variant CJD victims. [59979]

Ms Jowell: There is no scientific evidence to suggest that patients with new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease pose any risk of transmitting the infection to close blood line relatives.

Blood (Leucodepletion)

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has evaluated on the leucodepletion of blood within the Blood Transfusion Service. [59991]

Ms Jowell: The Department has considered all the published research on leucodepletion. The National Blood Authority and the Department are currently carrying out further research on the effects of leucodepletion, which will be evaluated when completed. The need for further research will be assessed.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the conclusions of the National Blood Authority to be published with regard to the leucodepletion of blood within the blood transfusion service. [59981]

Ms Jowell: In July 1998, on advice of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, the National Blood Authority was instructed to implement the leucodepletion of all blood. This process will be completed by next autumn.

Carers (Specialist Equipment)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance his Department makes available to carers for the purchase of specialist equipment. [58391]

Mr. Hutton: Carers do not directly receive money to purchase specialist equipment. The Government's objective in providing equipment to disabled and older people is to help them live as fully and independently as possible, ensuring that service providers make practical support for carers a high priority. In 1996/97, the latest year for which figures are available, the National Health Service and social services spent a combined figure of approximately £250 million on the provision of disability equipment, excluding home adaptions. Expenditure on Disabled Facilities Grants by housing authorities was £95 million.

Paramedics

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received relating to setting up a statutory body to inspect qualifications and training procedures for paramedics; and if he will make a statement. [59899]

Mr. Milburn: The Ambulance Service Association is responsible for the provision and management, including certification and assessment arrangements, of the current system of national awards for ambulance and paramedical personnel. The Council for Professions Supplementary to Medicine considers petitions for state registration. We understand that a petition in respect of paramedics was submitted by the Ambulance Service Association to the Council on 12 October 1998 and will be submitted to the Government shortly.

Tuesday 17 November 1998

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Sandford Rectory

Mrs. Browning: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if the Church Commissioners have transferred since 1968 the trust owning Sandford Rectory, Devon to (a) other trustees and (b) other parties. [60200]

Mr. Stuart Bell: No. Since 1930 the property has been vested in the incumbent of the benefice of Sandford with Upton Hellions by virtue of his office.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Law Lords

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the (a) total number and (b) percentage of currently active law lords who have professional experience of (i) human rights work and (ii) commercial law. [59601]

Mr. Hoon: All sitting Law Lords have such experience.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Parole

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what responses he has received to the consultation document "Improving Parole Decision Making"; and how he intends to proceed with the proposal to delegate authority in parole cases involving prisoners with determinate sentences of between four and 15 years. [60440]

Mr. Straw: The consultation period ended on 4 November 1998. We have received 38 responses to the paper: 33 supported the proposals in the paper in their entirety; five others offered differing degrees of support. Of these:

three respondents had no objections to the proposals but suggested that ministerial involvement in all parole and lifer cases should cease.

one respondent favoured further delegation to the Parole Board but suggested a cut-off point of 10 years rather than 15 years.

one respondent suggested that the number of previous parole reviews should determine which cases should be decided by the Parole Board.

In the light of the positive responses to the paper, I have today laid before Parliament a draft Order giving effect to the proposals.

Medway Secure Training Centre

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of young offenders who have served a sentence at the Medway Secure Training Centre subsequently obtained a school place in each of the last five years. [59405]

Mr. Boateng: Since Medway Secure Training Centre opened on 17 April 1998, a total of 29 trainees have been released to serve the second half of the Secure Training Order sentence under supervision in the community. At the time of release, arrangements were in place for eight to go straightaway into full time education, with 16 receiving part time tuition for several hours per week. The remaining five had no firm arrangements for education at the point of release, but provision has since been made for four of them to receive education, including two who have been placed in full time education.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60060]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60062]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government Departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. Departments' plans have been published in the Library. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60061]

Mr. Straw: Four millennium compliance problems have occurred in my Department, affecting management information, statistical and payroll data. Three of these were solved before December 1997. In the fourth case, the few statistical records affected are being dealt with manually while the software is corrected. This correction is due to be completed by the end of December 1998. The agencies and public bodies for which my Department is responsible have not reported any compliance problems.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60063]

Mr. Straw: Contingency planning is a major element of the response of my Department and its agencies to the millennium date change problem. In line with recent Cabinet Office recommendations, the target is to have initial contingency plans in place by the end of January 1999.

Chief executives of national departmental public bodies and similar bodies sponsored by my Department provided quarterly progress reports against their Year 2000 plans, for publication on the Internet. These refer specifically to contingency planning.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers ordinarily resident in a non-EU European country sought entry to the UK, by country of residence, in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what were (a) the numbers of Roma people and (b) the citizenship of the applicants, within each of the individual country totals. [59906]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information regarding persons applying for asylum in the United Kingdom gives a breakdown only by nationality. I regret, therefore, that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been provided with accommodation by local authorities in seaside towns since 1996. [60351]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is not held by my Department.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy on securing accommodation (a) directly and (b) by contracting with local agencies in seaside towns for asylum seekers under the proposed new national support scheme. [60350]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The project team is currently considering the issue of the provision of accommodation, but it is too soon to indicate precisely how accommodation will be supplied. The issue is appropriate accommodation availability, not proximity to the sea.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he or his Department have had with local authorities and other interested parties in seaside towns regarding the availability of accommodation for asylum seekers under the proposed new national support scheme; [60348]

(2) what assessment he has made of the availability of accommodation in seaside towns for asylum seekers under the proposed new national support scheme. [60347]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There has been no such assessment on discussions directed at seaside towns.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for consultation on the operation of the proposed new national support scheme for asylum seekers with (a) local authorities, (b) housing associations, (c) voluntary bodies and (d) the private sector. [60352]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have set up a stakeholder group, consisting of representatives of Government, local authorities, housing associations and voluntary bodies. That group will meet with the project team at key stages of the project. In addition, the project team will be consulting widely, including with representatives of the private sector, about the plans for the support system.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy on directing local authorities and housing associations to provide surplus accommodation for asylum seekers under the proposed new support arrangements. [60349]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There will be a general duty on local authorities to assist the Secretary of State in discharging his functions to provide accommodation. That duty is to extend to registered social landlords, but only so far as is compatible with their memoranda and articles of association. A local authority is also to be under a duty to supply such information about its housing stock in such manner as the Secretary of State may reasonably direct. There will also be a power for the Secretary of State to direct local authorities to provide accommodation if he concludes that a particular local authority is unreasonably refusing to do so.

Integrated Emergency Management

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place between the Home Office and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on national standards of integrated emergency management. [59590]

Mr. George Howarth: Officials at the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) are aware that National Standards for civil protection in England and Wales are being developed. No formal discussions have taken place between the Home Office and DETR to date.

Dr. Robert Gross

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Minister in his Department is responsible for the handling of the request from the United States of America for the extradition of Dr. Robert Gross; what discretion is available to him in extradition cases; and what are the factors which will influence the exercise of that discretion. [59525]

Kate Hoey: A request by the United States for the extradition of Dr. Gross is currently before the courts awaiting the hearing of a habeas corpus application. It will be my responsibility, if he is not discharged by the courts, to decide in due course whether his surrender should be ordered.

At that stage, Dr. Gross would have an opportunity to make representations against surrender. In reaching a final decision under the Extradition Act 1989, I would have regard to all of the circumstances in the case, including any grounds for concluding that it would be wrong, unjust or oppressive to order surrender.

Offenders (Service Provision)

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve the provision of services for offenders diagnosed as having both mental health and substance misuse problems. [59699]

Mr. George Howarth: The Prison Service is committed to improving services for prisoners with mental health problems who do not meet the criteria for transfer to hospital under the Mental Health Act 1983. A joint Prison Service/National Health Service Executive working group has considered ways of increasing the NHS input to services for prisoners with mental health problems. The Government will consider the working group's report and recommendations very carefully.

Prison Medical Officers are encouraged to establish links with their catchment area psychiatric units to enable the assessment of mentally disordered prisoners and, if appropriate, their transfer to psychiatric hospital. The number of prisoners transferred under the 1983 Act has risen from 325 in 1990 to 745 in 1997.

The Prison Service is to be allocated an extra £76 million over the next three financial years to help implement its drugs strategy. This will allow a major expansion of drug treatment services. It will also deliver the Government's manifesto commitment on voluntary testing and improve throughcare arrangements for drug misusers.

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders were introduced by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The aim of the orders is to provide effective treatment in the community, with rigorous testing to evaluate an offender's progress. Pilots have started in three probation service areas and funding of £1.75m has been provided for these pilots, which will run until March 2000. In addition, probation services are being encouraged to contribute from existing resources to partnership work with other agencies to address the problems of other drug misusing offenders under their supervision.

Probation Service (Paedophiles)

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide additional funding for probation services which have significantly greater than average workloads as a result of the supervision of paedophiles. [59702]

Mr. George Howarth: Over the next three financial years, we are providing an additional £127 million in probation grant, which takes account of the work which area services have to undertake in supervising sexual offenders; but we have no present plans to adjust the formula used to allocate grant to probation areas to reflect the number or proportion of paedophile offenders under supervision in each area.

Firearms Compensation

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average time currently taken to process claims under categories A and B of the Firearms Compensation Scheme; [59853]

(2) how many people under categories A, B and C of the Firearms Compensation Scheme have received full compensation for their claims; [59854]

(3) what is the current delay in processing applications for compensation under Category C of the Firearms Compensation Scheme; and what was the delay (a) one month ago and (b) two months ago. [59852]

Mr. Boateng: Payments under Options A and B of the compensation scheme for large calibre handguns and the ex gratia scheme for small calibre pistols were completed at the end of May, apart from a small number of cases still under inquiry, in an average processing time of 19 weeks. Processing of the Option A and B claims under the statutory compensation scheme for small calibre pistols surrendered during February 1998 began in August, and around three quarters of these claims have now been paid in an average processing time of 30 weeks.

The average processing time for claims processed so far under Option C of the compensation scheme for large calibre handguns and small calibre pistols is 53 weeks. In the great majority of these cases, payments have already been made under Options A and B. I regret that information is not available on the comparable processing times for earlier periods.

Around 42,000 claimants under the large calibre and ex gratia schemes and around 7,000 claimants under the statutory small calibre scheme have received payment under Options A and B. Around 6,500 claimants under the large calibre and ex gratia schemes have received payment under Option C. Option C payments under the statutory small calibre scheme will begin when the overall work position permits.

I outlined the measures we are taking to speed the processing of the compensation claims in my reply to a written question from the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 28 October 1998, Official Report, columns 179–80.

Junior Football Clubs (Injury Insurance)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will make it a requirement for junior football clubs that they provide adequate insurance against injury for their members; [59710]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the adequacy of insurance against injury for the members of junior football clubs; [59709]

(3) what requirements there are for junior football clubs to provide adequate insurance against injury for their members. [59708]

Mr. Banks: I have received no representations to date concerning the adequacy of insurance against injury for the members of junior football clubs. Responsibility for personal injury insurance for junior football club members rests with the clubs themselves. I understand that although there is no requirement for junior football clubs to take out personal injury insurance policies the Football Association is encouraging its County Associations to stress the importance of best practice in this area to their affiliated clubs. A number of County FAs are working closely with insurance companies to develop personal injury insurance schemes on a corporate basis for all their affiliated clubs. These pilot schemes are an encouraging development.

Coalfield Communities

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of lottery funds excluding Millennium Landmark projects has been received by coalfield communities in (a) South Yorkshire and (b) nationally. [59820]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 November 1998]: In the coalfield communities of South Yorkshire, which comprise the local authorities of Barnsley, Doncaster, Rotherham and Sheffield, there have been 608 non-Landmark awards worth £112,812,862. This represents 2.78 per cent. of the National total of over £4.25 billion awarded to 31,788 non-landmark awards.

Information on lottery awards is available on the Department's website www.lottery.culture.gov.uk.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what has been the (a) average value and (b) number of lottery grants of less than £1 million received by coalfield communities (i) in South Yorkshire and (ii) nationally. [59822]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 November 1998]: To date the National Lottery distributors have awarded over £5.07 billion to 31,788 awards. In the coalfield communities of South Yorkshire there have been 609 awards worth £162,812,862.

The average value and number of grants in South Yorkshire coalfield communities and nationally are set out in the following table:

	Average value of all awards (£)	Total number of awards under £1 million
Coalfield communities in South Yorkshire	267,344	577
Nationally	159,684	31,111

Information on lottery awards is available on the Department's website www.lottery.culture.gov.uk.

Sport (Injury Insurance)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what statistics are collected by, or reported to, his Department relating to minors sustaining personal injury while taking part in the activities of junior sports clubs. [59707]

Ms Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

The Department does not collect information on injuries from sporting activities at junior clubs. Although the hospital episode statistics data system has information on injuries and accidents, these relate only to events which require medical treatment at a hospital. These do not specify the location of the accident. The Department of Trade and Industry's Home and Leisure Accident Surveillance System records treatment for injuries from sporting activities from a sample of accident and emergency departments in the United Kingdom. Under this system an estimated 215,000 children under 15 had sports injuries in 1996 in the UK. Although the database cannot identify whether they occurred in junior sports clubs, it can differentiate between organised and non-organised games.

CABINET OFFICE

Sickness Absence

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what are the figures for (a) the public sector, including local authorities, grant-maintained schools and NHS trusts and (b) the private sector for days lost due to absence from work through sickness, expressed as a number of days per employee in each sector in the most recent available year. [59584]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Information about the average number of days lost per employee due to absence through sickness in the public and private sectors is not collected centrally. However, the Office for National Statistics estimate from the Labour Force Survey that in the United Kingdom 5.5 per cent. of public sector employees and 4.4 per cent. of private sector employees were absent from work due to sickness or injury for at least one day in an average week between autumn 1997 and summer 1998.

Better Regulation Task Force

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to his oral statement of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 168, what the remit will be of the better regulation task force's assessment of SMEs; and when he expects them to report. [60150]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The statement of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to which the question refers was a reference to a review of the role of regulation in relation to productivity which will be undertaken by the Better Regulation Task Force, for which this Department has responsibility. The review was first announced in the pre-Budget Statement on 3 November 1998, Official Report, columns 681–702.

I can confirm that the Task Force has established a sub-group to take this work forward. They are currently agreeing the details of their terms of reference, including the timetable for this work. The review will examine the degree to which regulation acts as a barrier to business start-up, survival and growth. The Task Force will consider existing material and seek further evidence from a wide range of interested parties.

I hope that the Task Force will present their first findings next Spring, and a final report as soon as practicable thereafter.

Relocation

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the decision was taken to relocate parts of the Cabinet Office to Admiralty Arch, Ripley Block and Kirkland House; and if he will make a statement. [60470]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The relocation was announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 132–33, in connection with the review of the Cabinet Office by the Cabinet Secretary, Sir Richard Wilson. The funding for the project was agreed as part of this Department's Comprehensive Spending Review, in collaboration with HM Treasury. The buildings will be occupied by civil servants. Although these decisions were taken before my appointment to the Cabinet Office, I fully support this initiative to create a focus for the drive to modernise Government and to tackle the new challenges it faces. Ministerial accommodation will remain at 70 Whitehall.

DEFENCE

Gulf War

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if British tanks fired depleted uranium shells during the Gulf War; and if he will make a statement. [59333]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Main Battle Tank used by UK forces during the Gulf conflict in 1990–91 was the Challenger 1, armed with the 120mm rifled-barrel L11 gun. However, when planning Operation GRANBY, it was assessed that the existing tungsten-based armour-piercing rounds in use with Challenger 1 might not be sufficiently powerful to defeat the most modern Iraqi tanks—Soviet designed T72s. It was therefore decided that MOD should undertake the emergency development and deployment of a new armour-piercing round for Challenger 1.

This new round was based on a 120mm armour-piercing round, containing a solid depleted uranium (DU) penetrator core with a protective (non-DU) coating and known as CHARM 1, which was already being developed for use by the more powerful gun on the new Challenger 2 Main Battle Tank, also then under development. In fact, the CHARM 1 round needed only minor modifications in order to fit the existing gun on Challenger 1, but a totally new charge needed to be developed. The new charge and slightly modified round, known as Jericho I and Jericho II respectively, were deployed to the Gulf and issued to UK armoured formations just before the start of Coalition operations against Iraq.

The MOD's current assessment is that UK forces fired fewer than 100 Jericho II rounds against Iraqi military forces during hostilities, which equates to less than 1 metric tonne of DU overall, although additional rounds were fired during earlier work-up training to establish the round's Mean Point of Impact (MPI).

Territorial Army

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors were taken into account in deciding to reduce the size of the TA force; and if he will make a statement. [59695]

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce his conclusions on the future of the Territorial Army. [60246]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friend to the statement I made earlier today, Official Report, columns 749–70.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Territorial Army building, Surbiton Road, Kingston-Upon-Thames. [59865]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the document concerning the future of the Territorial Army, placed in the Library of the House today.

Training Review

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects his Department to complete its review of its training methods. [56348]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We have completed our initial review of my Department's training methods and now plan a further study involving representatives of the Royal College of Surgeons and other bodies to determine appropriate means of providing necessary training in surgical trauma skills. We intend that the study should be led by an independent figure and should be completed in the first part of next year. Meanwhile, UK military participation in the Danish Armed Forces medical exercises involving the use of pigs remains suspended.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those hon. Members who have made representations to him on behalf of constituents concerning Gulf War illness. [58808]

Service Children's Education

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to set targets for pupils in schools operated by the Service Children's Education Authority; and if the Service Children's Education Authority is to be included within the inspection regime currently in operation for local education authorities. [59190]

Mr. Spellar: Service Children's Education is an Agency of the Ministry of Defence charged with the provision of education services to MOD personnel serving overseas and with the provision of advice to service personnel in UK on educational matters. Key Targets for the Agency are approved annually by Ministers and those for 1998 were announced in the House on 25 June 1998, Official Report, columns 565–66. In addition, the current Key Targets are set out in the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts which were laid before Parliament on 30 July 1998.

Whilst SCE schools are subject to inspection by Ofsted, the Agency falls outside Ofsted's remit to monitor Local Education Authorities. However, the Chief Executive reports on a termly basis to an Owner's Board whose membership includes representatives of the DfEE, Ofsted and an LEA. SCE is also subject to MOD's own internal management inspection and audit as well as being audited annually by the National Audit Office for the production of the Agency's Accounts.

Officer Training Corps (Queen's University)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Officer Training Corps at Queen's University, Belfast. [57588]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Department has no plans to make changes to the University Officer Training Corps. Queen's University Officer Training Corps will continue to provide an opportunity for students to undertake a wide variety of military training, which will enable them to develop their self-confidence and initiative and to gain useful skills for any future profession.

Major Eric Joyce

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he (a) has taken and (b) proposes to take following the recent appearance on television of Major Eric Joyce speaking on behalf of the Scottish Labour Party; and if this contravened Queen's Regulations. [58791]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 9 November 1998]: Serving members of the Armed Forces are not permitted under Queen's Regulations for the Army to take an active part in the affairs of any political organisation. Major Joyce's future in the Army is currently under consideration by the Army Board.

Cruise Missiles

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will undertake a study of the potential environmental effects of cruise missiles landing on (a) oil wells and (b) petroleum-refining complexes. [59547]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 16 November 1998]: We have no current plans to undertake such a study.

Field Park Squadron

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what receipts were generated for the Defence Budget by 198 Field Park Squadron in financial years (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [59467]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There have been no significant receipts generated to the Defence Budget by 198 Field Park Squadron in the last three financial years.

Hurricane Mitch

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the marginal costs that will be incurred by the Ministry of Defence in assisting the provision of aid and relief to Central America following Hurricane Mitch. [59466]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Full details of the marginal costs to the Ministry of Defence of providing this humanitarian assistance are not yet available. We estimate, however, that the figure should be below £100,000, as help has been provided by forces which would otherwise have been engaged in operations or training in the Caribbean area.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Council (1) what is her latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in her Department, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if she will make a statement; [60052]

(2) if she will list the problems which have arisen in her Department from millennium compliance; if she will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work; [60053]

(3) what assessment she has made of the extent to which the computer systems in her Department will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if she will make a statement; [60054]

(4) if she will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by her Department in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60055]

Mrs. Beckett: Work on ensuring the Millennium compliance of the Privy Council Office's systems is being taken forward as part of the Cabinet Office's Year 2000 Programme. No insurmountable problems are expected for the Cabinet Office and its agencies arising from millennium compliance. Plans are well advanced to replace non-compliant systems as part of an ongoing programme of work. Business continuity is not believed to be at risk, but the Cabinet Office and its agencies nevertheless have continuity plans that cater for possible disruption. Details of the Cabinet Office's programme, together with costs, were published following my last quarterly statement to the House on 9 September and are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Council what estimate she has made of the cost to the UK public sector of tackling the millennium computer problem and the embedded chip problem; and if she will make a statement. [59945]

Mrs. Beckett: The latest estimate of the cost of tackling the Millennium bug across central government departments and agencies is £400 million. This figure is based on departmental returns to the September quarterly review.

Forecasts which have been made by independent experts and companies with experience of the costs of tackling the problem have put the total cost of tackling the Millennium bug across the whole of the UK public sector in the range of £1 billion-£3 billion. These figures appear to be reasonable. For example, the NHS Executive has estimated the cost across the NHS in England at around £310 million, while the Local Government Association has put the cost to local authorities at £500 million.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Council what action she is taking to increase the preparedness of (a) local authorities, (b) the Police, (c) defence forces and (d) the NHS in relation to the millennium computer problem; and if she will make a statement. [59946]

Mrs. Beckett: As the Cabinet Minister responsible for the co-ordination of Government policy in response to the Millennium Bug, I have been working with colleagues to drive forward action in both the public and private sector. As a key part of this work, I am responsible for monitoring and reporting on the progress across all central government departments and agencies and key parts of the wider public sector, including local authorities, the Police, the Ministry of Defence and the NHS. Details of the progress in each of these four sectors were included in the last quarterly statement which I issued on 9 September. I will be making my next quarterly statement on progress in tackling the Millennium Bug to the House shortly. Specific questions about progress in these four sectors are the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, Home Affairs, Defence, and Health respectively.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Passes

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if she will publish the total number of House of Commons passes issued for persons classified as assistants/research assistants to hon. Members, and the known number who work full or part-time in the above positions. [59944]

Mrs. Roe [holding answer 16 November 1998]: 448 photo-identity passes have been issued for hon. Members' research assistants. The numbers who work full or part-time are not known, as an hon. Member is not required to give this information.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorist Offences

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have been (a) killed by explosions caused by terrorists and (b) killed by bombs which they were constructing, transporting or placing in position, in each of the last 10 years and the current year. [59030]

Mr. Ingram: The following table illustrates the number of persons killed by explosions caused by terrorists and by their own bombs over the period in question:

Year	Number of deaths caused by explosions	Killed by own bomb	Total
1988	39	3	42
1990	22	0	22
1991	18	0	18
1992	11	0	11
1993	17	2	19
1994	5	0	5
1996	1	0	1
1998[1]	30	0	30

[1] To 8 November

Omagh Bombing

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the injuries suffered by the surviving victims of the Omagh bomb. [55477]

Mr. Ingram: (a) The following is a list of the injuries suffered by the surviving victims, admitted to hospital, in the immediate aftermath of the Omagh bomb:

Abdominal Organ Injuries: 4

Amputees: 5

Blast Lung: 1

Burns: 8

Eye Injuries: 2

Fractures: 24

Fracture and Eye Injury: 3

Head Injury: 1

Soft Tissue Injury: 10

Wounds/Shrapnel: 77.

Many of the victims had multiple injuries. Injuries treated for those victims who were not admitted to hospital included wounds, shrapnel injuries, soft tissue injuries and ear injuries.

(b) Three of the surviving victims remain in hospital at the present time. Injuries suffered by the three patients are as follows:

Burns [over 60% of body] and multiple injuries

Amputation of lower leg and severe burns

Amputation of lower leg and multiple shrapnel injuries.

Regional and Minority Languages

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list (a) Ulster Scots and (b) Irish as two minority languages to benefit from the provisions of the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages; and if she will make a statement. [59289]

Mr. McFall: The Government intend that the Charter will apply to the Irish language in Northern Ireland from the coming into operation of the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. In regard to Ulster-Scots, arrangements are in hand to commission independent academic research which will help to determine whether Ulster-Scots should be treated as a language for purposes of the Charter. The Charter does not distinguish between regional languages and minority languages.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what child care provision is made available by her Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59730]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 16 November 1998]: In Northern Ireland, current policy is that Departments can contribute to staff child care costs where this is justified on value for money grounds.

The Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments do not provide child care facilities. However, child care provision in the form of subsidy based schemes is only one of a range of family friendly measures that are available to staff. Others include flexible working hours, part-time and job sharing arrangements, paid and unpaid special leave and career breaks and reimbursement of expenses when the normal working routine is broken by the job demands. Information packs from the Northern Ireland Childminding Association are also given to staff applying for maternity or paternity leave.

In April 1998, NIO (Belfast) introduced a child care voucher scheme for staff which provided a contribution of £60 per month towards pre-school child care costs. Initially places on the scheme have been limited to 23 (2.8 per cent. of total staff) but it is planned to extend it to all staff with pre-school children within the next four years. NIO (London) introduced a similar scheme in July 1997 at the rate of £100 per month per child under the age of 5. Prior to July 1997, the NIO (London) subsidised 5 places in a nursery close to the office. The total proportion of staff that used these facilities in 1996–97 was 3 (2.9 per cent.) and in 1997–98 was 5 (4.4 per cent.).

In the Department of Health and Social Services, the Child Support Agency provides financial assistance to staff in the form of a subsidy towards the cost of placing a child in a registered nursery of the parents choice. The parents pay the first £30 of the cost, the Agency pays up to the next £30 (grossed up by 45.7 per cent. to cover Tax and NI Contributions) and the parent pays the balance. There are 40 subsidies available. In 1996–97, 30 (2 per cent. of staff) were taken up and 40 (3 per cent.) in 1997–98.

The Department of the Environment provides a pre-school nursery subsidy scheme for up to 44 staff at any one time selected by a random draw. A reserve list is held to fill drop-outs from the 44. The subsidy is 35 per cent. of the weekly nursery fees up to a maximum of £30 gross per week. Forty-eight staff (0.6 per cent.) received subsidies in 1996–97 and 54 (0.7 per cent.) in 1997–98.

The Department of Education, in May 1997, introduced an emergency child care subsidy scheme to provide the actual cost of emergency child care for a maximum of 2 days on any one occasion (limited to 4 occasions in a year) with the care provider being a registered childminder, playgroup or nursery. There has been no uptake of the subsidy. The scheme was introduced on a trial basis and the Department is presently reviewing the aspect of sufficient time off for staff to make alternative arrangements which has been identified as the main difficulty with the scheme.

The Department of Finance and Personnel, through the Equal Opportunities Unit, financially assists 8 holiday playschemes. Subsidies of 50 per cent. accommodation costs and 40 per cent. staff costs are provided to each playscheme. Total financial assistance in 1997 was £20,250.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60145]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Following recommendations made by the PAC, the President of the Council wrote to Cabinet colleagues and Ministers in October asking all Departments to complete risk assessments and have initial year 2000 business continuity plans in place by the end of January 1999. This has been conveyed to all Northern Ireland Departments and they have been informed that future quarterly surveys by the Cabinet Office will require reports on progress against targets in this area. Millennium contingency planning has to cover the eventuality of system failures due to embedded chip malfunction.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is her latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which her Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if she will make a statement; [60142]

(2) what assessment she has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which her Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if she will make a statement. [60144]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. In Northern Ireland, the Departments and their agencies are directly responsible for much of the services provided by local government and the privatised utilities in Great Britain—e.g., Health and Personal Social Service, Housing Benefits, Water and Sewage. Electricity is the only privatised service in Northern Ireland.

The information that the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published in the Libraries of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Libraries of the House and on the Internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the problems which have arisen in (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which her Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if she will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60143]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The problems are the same for all organisations striving for millennium compliance and the Northern Ireland departments are working closely with their Great Britain counterparts, sharing information and advice, to address these. Specifically, some departments in Northern Ireland have lost skilled computer staff to the private sector and this has impacted on some compliance programmes. However, steps are being taken by the individual departments and centrally by the Northern Ireland public service to address the situation.

Northern Ireland Bill

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 26 October 1998, Official Report, column 34, concerning the human rights and equality provisions of the Northern Ireland Bill, if she will place in the Library copies of her correspondence with the Secretary-General of the Council of Europe. [60270]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Copies of correspondence between myself and the Secretary-General of the Council of Europe have been placed in the Library.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Montserrat

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the final version of the Sustainable Development Plan for Montserrat will be published. [60359]

Mr. Foulkes: Agreement has been reached between the Government of Montserrat and Her Majesty's Government on the final text of the Sustainable Development Plan. This followed a wide-ranging consultation exercise involving Montserratians on island, elsewhere in the Caribbean and in the UK, and regional and international aid agencies. The plan reflects the shared priorities of our two Governments for the social and economic recovery of the island and sets out a plan for the future of the island and the strategies needed to achieve its goals and objectives.

Copies of the final text will be placed in the Libraries of the House today. The formal published version will be made available in early December.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what is her latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which her Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if she will make a statement; [60056]

(2) what assessment she has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which her Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if she will make a statement. [60058]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right. hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle), on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Libraries of the House and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will list the problems which have arisen in (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which her Department is responsible for millennium compliance; if she will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work; [60057]

(2) if she will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60059]

Mr. Foulkes: We have recently reviewed the Year 2000 compliance programme. Work is well advanced on mission-critical systems and we have systems in place for testing at various milestone dates. Our key systems will be fully tested and independently audited before the Year 2000.

Our current switchboard is not compliant, but will become so with the next installation of software which will be in place before the end of 1998. Our equipment to send telexes is not compliant, but is in any case to be discarded for more modern forms of communications. We shall provide fuller details in our next quarterly return.

We have obtained assurances from our prime hardware and software suppliers. In several cases we are required to upgrade software to more modern versions. We have developed a programme of work to take this forward. Progress is reported in our quarterly return.

Work will start in early December to develop a separate series of business continuity plans, which will complement the work already done on business critical systems. Progress will be reported in the appropriate quarterly return.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which forum the Government will propose as appropriate for future negotiations on a multilateral agreement on investment, in order to ensure (a) that the interests of developing countries are represented and (b) that developing countries are equal participants in the negotiations. [59183]

Mr. Foulkes: The Government, and the EU as a whole, have a long-standing objective of pursuing investment negotiations in the WTO, and have called for investment to be on the agenda of any future multilateral Round of negotiations. This objective was reflected in the White Paper on International Development in November 1997, underlining the developmental value of a stable and transparent framework for international investment.

Any decision to begin negotiations on multilateral investment disciplines in the WTO will require consensus among WTO members. Over three quarters of WTO members are developing countries. We are committed to helping strengthen the capacity of developing countries—many of which have limited resources—to participate effectively in the WTO. Specifically on investment, we have already agreed a contribution of over £0.5 million for a programme run by the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) to provide advice and training to developing countries on the issues posed by a possible multilateral framework for investment.

SCOTLAND

Local Government

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's current estimate of the cost to be borne by Scottish local authorities arising from new central Government initiatives in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and

(c) the following three years, by initiative, indicating the contribution to be made towards such costs from central Government. [56952]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 3 November 1998]: In 1998–99 the following amounts were added to the local government finance spending plans inherited from the previous Administration:

Additional resources for schools: £89 million (announced in the July 1997 Budget) plus £19 million (announced in March 1998 Budget).

Recommendations resulting from the Pennington Report: £2.6 million.

The cost of new central Government initiatives over the next three years was considered in the course of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. In total, following the review the following additional resources (each representing increases compared with 1998–99) have been provided over the next three years:

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Education	154	266	373
Social Work	51	94	130
Police	23.7	50.9	71.8
Fire	8.5	16.9	24.3
Other Services including Loans Charges	58.8	163.5	319.2

Decisions for subsequent years have not yet been made.

Youth Clubs

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make more money available to youth clubs in areas with high levels of juvenile crime. [57609]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The Scottish Office does not provide funding for youth clubs. In the main youth clubs are run by local authorities or voluntary groups which have access to local facilities. The Scottish Office provides a grant to Youth Clubs Scotland, a national voluntary organisation which is involved with the informal education of young people. The grant towards headquarters expenditure is awarded under the Scottish Office community education recurrent grant scheme for voluntary organisations. Youth Clubs Scotland has been awarded a grant of £75,000 in 1998–99, an increase of 7 per cent..

Youth Employment

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of young people who took up the employment option under the New Deal have secured full-time employment at the end of their placement (a) in total and (b) by local authority area. [58980]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 11 November 1998]: The latest New Deal figures published by the Government Statistical Service relate to August, and information on those completing their placement is not yet available. We plan in future to publish figures by units of delivery which in Scotland are based on local enterprise company areas.

Intellectual Property

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the purpose and scope of the reservation of intellectual property in the Scotland Bill. [60441]

Mr. McLeish: The purpose of the reservation is to ensure the continuation of uniform intellectual property laws across the UK. This will avoid difficulties for owners of intellectual property rights arising from, for example, difference in what can be protected, the extent of the protection and remedies for breach of rights. Indeed, the benefits of harmonisation in this area are becoming increasingly recognised with the ever wider harmonisation of intellectual property rights and related matters across Europe and the rest of the world.

Patents, designs, registered trade marks and copyright are well known examples of intellectual property rights and are reserved. The reservation also embraces all other existing and future analogous rights and matters, such as rights in performances and semi-conductor topographies, moral rights, the law of passing off and trade secrets, and the new database right. Moreover, rights such as those in utility models and matters such as technical measures for the protection of copyright works and information relating to the management of rights, all of which are included in recent draft EC Directives on intellectual property, fall within the scope of the reservation. Furthermore, all matters relating to the Patent Office are reserved, as are current and future ancillary matters.

The existing major legislation on intellectual property, namely the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, the Patents Act 1977, the Trade Marks Act 1994 and the Registered Designs Act 1949, exemplifies but does not limit the range of provisions relating to 'intellectual property' which falls or may in the future fall within the reservation.

There is just one exception from the reservation, that is UK plant breeders' rights within the meaning of the Plant Varieties Act 1997. Agricultural Ministers, that is the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, are jointly responsible for UK plant breeders' rights. Devolution in this one area of intellectual property is therefore consistent with the joint responsibility which already exists for plant breeders' rights.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement; [60136]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [60134]

Mr. Dewar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, announcing the results of the most recent quarterly review of Government Departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the Year 2000 date change issue and providing information on progress and costs. Information on progress in the wider public sector in Scotland, including the National Health Service, water authorities, nationalised industries and some non-departmental public bodies, is available on The Scottish Office's Web site. The results of the next quarterly review of progress will be announced shortly to the House and updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the Web.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60137]

Mr. Dewar: My Department and Agencies recognise the need to review and keep up to date their plans to deal with threats to business community, including the millennium date change. I expect them to have completed a review of key aspects of their operations, and to ensure that appropriate plans are in place, by the end of January 1999.

Planning to ensure the continued delivery of key public services is primarily the responsibility of those who manage these services. The Scottish Office will continue to encourage organisations in the wider public sector in Scotland to ensure that their contingency plans are adequate in the light of the millennium date change issue.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60135]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Office has been working since 1996 to ensure that the service it provides to the public will not be materially affected by the Year 2000 computer problem. The Department expects that all of its important systems will be tested and proved to be Year 2000 compliant by March 1999. Agencies and other public sector bodies in Scotland including the water authorities, the NHS in Scotland, local authorities, the nationalised industries and certain non-departmental public bodies are responsible for ensuring that their services will not be materially affected by the problem. Their progress is monitored by The Scottish Office. A range of progress reports is published on the Web, including the Web sites maintained by The Scottish Office, the NHS in Scotland and the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency.

Financial Management

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to ensure adequate training in financial management of those in charge of the financial management of projects receiving Government funding as a condition of grant; [59630]

(2) what plans he has to insist on adequate external auditing and monitoring of projects receiving Government funding as a condition of grant. [59631]

Mr. McLeish: Grant conditions, and monitoring arrangements for different grant schemes operated by The Scottish Office are set taking into account all the circumstances surrounding the individual scheme. The conditions and monitoring arrangements are kept under review.

Where the grant is towards a particular project the conditions normally include a requirement for external validation that the grant has been used for the purpose for which it was provided. Alternatively, in the case of grants to local authorities, the Scottish Office may make arrangements directly with the Accounts Commission for Scotland for the external auditing of councils' grant claims.

In the particular case of grants under the Urban Programme to local authorities, the standard terms and conditions require local authorities to establish effective appraisal, monitoring and financial systems.

These conditions also require the local authority to ensure that the expenditure by third parties receiving funding from the Council is accounted for properly; and that the accounts of third parties are either audited statutorily, or in the case of unincorporated bodies, reported on by a qualified accountant.

The reporting accountants have to report if they are not satisfied: that proper records have been kept; that the accounts are consistent with the records; that they have received all necessary information; and that other information in the annual report is consistent with the financial statements.

Training in financial management is a matter for the bodies concerned.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that councils arrange for adequate auditing arrangements and training in financial management when giving grants to projects receiving public funds. [59629]

Mr. McLeish: Local authorities are fully responsible for ensuring that there is clear public accountability where they provide public funds to external bodies. I expect councils to follow the guidance laid out by the Accounts Commission and COSLA in the Code of Guidance on Funding External Bodies and Following the Public Pound. This sets out the procedures for specifying minimum standards of accountancy and audit arrangements in appropriate cases. Where these are found wanting in individual cases, I would expect councils to take firm corrective action.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's response to the recent report by Edinburgh City Council into the financial management of publicly funded projects in the city. [59632]

Mr. McLeish: The City of Edinburgh Council has identified weaknesses in the management of some projects. This is primarily a matter for the Council but the Government place the highest importance on the proper conduct and management of projects and organisations which are publicly funded and discussions are taking place with the Council on the issues raised in its report and the action it should take.

Aspirin Poisoning

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many cases in Scotland in each of the past five years individuals have had to spend more than one night in hospital because of aspirin poisoning. [59638]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on the number of emergency admissions staying more than one night in hospital with a reported diagnosis of aspirin poisoning is shown in the table. The table refers to the number of emergency admissions during the specified year. It is possible that an individual patient may have had more than one admission in any year.

The data exclude poisoning by compounds of aspirin with phenacetin-codeine which cannot be separately identified under the World Health Organisation's International Classification of Diseases 9th Revision.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths have been recorded in Scotland from aspirin poisoning in each of the past five years, and in how many of these cases aspirin had been taken (a) in soluble form and (b) in dispensable form. [59633]

Mr. Galbraith: The information available is given in the list. It is not possible to distinguish the form in which the aspirin had been taken.

Sheriff Courts

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many summary criminal trials in each Scottish sheriff court have been adjourned on more than one occasion in each of the past four years; [59627]

(2) how many summary criminal trials in each Scottish sheriff court have concluded at the first trial diet; and how many have been adjourned because of pressure of business in each of the past four years. [59628]

Mr. McLeish: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Scottish Court Service to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Ewart to Mr. Donald Gorrie, dated 17 November 1998:

Mr. McLeish has asked me to respond to your question about summary criminal trials. The attached tables show the number of:

Summary cases with one trial diet;

Summary cases with 2 or more trial diets;

Summary trials adjourned through lack of court time for each Sheriff Court over the past years.

I hope this is helpful.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Coalfields Task Force

9. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he can report on implementing the recommendations of the coalfields task force. [58612]

Mr. Prescott: I will launch the Government's response to the Coalfields Task Force Report at the Second Coalfields Conference on Tuesday 1 December at the Peterlee Leisure Centre in County Durham. Copies of the written responses will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Leylandii

10. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce legislation relating to Leylandii and other fast-growing trees. [58613]

Mr. Meale: We are considering whether there is a need for Government intervention in relation to problems caused by leylandii trees and other high garden hedges. We will announce our conclusions in due course.

Council Tax

11. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the need to review council tax rates for (a) second and (b) mobile homes. [58614]

Ms Armstrong: On 30 July we published our Local Government White Paper—"Modern Local Government: In Touch with the People". In this we explained that the council tax is working well as a local tax and that it has been widely accepted. In reviewing council tax, we had to balance the expense and potential great disruption of a revaluation against various proposals for change. We have concluded that the current valuation base remains broadly acceptable, and is likely to remain so for the next few years. While we shall be keeping the fairness of the council tax under review we do not propose to change the council tax levels for second homes or mobile homes during the course of this Parliament.

28. Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the current arrangements for levying council tax on second homes. [58639]

Ms Armstrong: In response to the consultation paper on local government finance, we received 40 representations on second homes. Since the election, we have also received an additional 121 representations on second homes. Of the representations received, 118 were in favour of not applying the 50 per cent. reduction for second homes and 43 were in favour of retaining the reduction.

Capital Receipts

12. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the capital receipts programme on housing to date. [58615]

Mr. Prescott: Having a decent home for everyone is a goal of a civilised society. We promised to release funds to restore and build new houses for rent, and that is what we are doing. Capital allocations of around £750 million have been made available to local authorities under the Capital Receipts Initiative in 1997–98 and 1998–99. I have today placed information in the Libraries of both Houses on the capital receipts allocations for Local Authorities in England for 1997–98 and 1998–99.

20. Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the capital receipts programme in the London region to date. [58623]

26. Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the capital receipts programme in the London region to date. [58630]

Mr. Raynsford: Under the Capital Receipts Initiative, London has received £220 million in 1997–98 and 1998–99. On average, around 70 per cent. of these resources will be spent by local authorities on renovations to their own housing stock, benefiting over 100,000 dwellings. Approximately 40 per cent. of this work will include energy efficiency improvements. The resources will also help to finance the building or acquisition of around 1,000 extra dwellings.

Business Taxes

13. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has had from the business community regarding his proposals for new business taxes. [58616]

Mr. Raynsford: Since the publication of the White Paper "Modern Local Government: In Touch with the People", we have discussed the proposals for local business rates with representatives of a number of business organisations.

Local Government Reform

14. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the structure of local government. [58617]

Ms Armstrong: As my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister told the House when announcing our White Paper on modern local government, on 30 July 1998, Oficial Report, columns 529–46, on 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 529–41, our programme of reform today is about how councils work and how they can be more in touch with the people whom they serve. We have seen over the past few years what a distraction boundary and structure changes can be.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

15. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's actions to meet the carbon dioxide reductions agreed at Kyoto. [58618]

Mr. Meacher: On 26 October the UK became one of the first developed countries to launch a consultation exercise on policy options for meeting its climate change targets. The paper lists the steps the Government have already taken and sets out in detail further options.

Local Government Finance

16. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure a more equal level of funding for local authorities in England. [58619]

Mr. Raynsford: We made a commitment to a fair distribution of grant for all authorities. We shall make changes only where we are convinced that it would be fair to do so and in keeping with our policy priorities.

Opencast Coal Mining

17. Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what response he has had to the announcement of new planning guidance governing opencast coal mining. [58620]

Mr. Caborn: I published draft revised planning guidance on coal extraction in England on 16 October. Comments are requested by 15 January 1999. As yet we have received very few responses.

Children's Parliament

18. Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the purpose of the Children's Parliament. [58621]

Mr. Prescott: The purpose of the Children's Parliament on the Environment is two-fold: first, to build on the interest that young people have in the environment and to stimulate them to think about what can be done, and in particular what they can do themselves, to secure a healthy future for everybody; and, secondly, to provide children with an opportunity to develop an understanding of, and take an active role in, the democratic process, and to understand their duties, responsibilities and rights as citizens.

Housing Revenue Account

19. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the total amount paid from housing revenue account surpluses in housing benefits to council house tenants in the last financial year. [58622]

Mr. Raynsford: Our latest information is that £1.226 billion of housing element surpluses in the Housing Revenue Account was used to offset the cost of rent rebates in 1997–98.

Capital Allocation System

21. Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the capital allocation system. [58624]

Ms Armstrong: Following the publication of the capital finance consultation paper "Modernising local government: capital finance", we received 353 responses from the English local authority community, 27 from organisations representing local authorities, 4 from business and their representative organisations and 40 from others with an interest in local government including members of the public and academics. The vast majority of these responses concerned the capital allocation system.

Representations on the capital allocation in Scotland are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Standard Spending Assessments (London)

22. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the formula for the computation of standard spending assessments for London borough councils. [58625]

Mr. Raynsford: We have been considering a range of suggested changes to the calculation of Standard Spending Assessments, taking account of discussions that have taken place this year with local government representatives, to ensure a fair distribution among all authorities.

Countryside Access

23. Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received on access to the countryside for walkers. [58626]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has received over 2,000 formal responses to our consultation paper "Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales". In addition, since the closing date for responses to the consultation paper on 5 June, approximately 340 letters have been received from members of the public on this subject, and approximately 230 letters from Members of Parliament. Ministerial colleagues and I have held meetings recently with organisations representing both landowners and recreational users.

Sellafield

24. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the recent Environment Agency proposed decision concerning the MOX plant at Sellafield. [58627]

Mr. Meale: The Agency's draft determination was received in my Department on 2 November 1998. Requests have been made to Ministers to call in the application for their own determination. These requests are being considered carefully and my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will announce their decision as soon as they are able to do so.

Regional Bodies (South-East)

25. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to promote the public accountability of the Government's regional bodies in the south-east. [58628]

Mr. Caborn: We are committed to improving the openness, accountability and effectiveness of non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs). The South East Regional Development Agency—like other Regional Development Agencies—will be required to take into account the views of, and give an account of its activities to, the South East Regional Chamber which will represent those in the region with an interest in its work.

Affordable Housing

27. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans to increase the supply of affordable housing. [58631]

Mr. Raynsford: We are making available nearly £5 billion extra for investment in housing over the lifetime of this Parliament. The majority of these resources are being directed through local authorities, who we expect to take investment decisions that reflect local needs and priorities. Where demand for affordable housing is high, local authorities may use a proportion of their resources to provide new social lettings. We have also boosted the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme relative to the spending plans of the last Government, thereby ensuring that it will continue to play a key part in support of social housing provision, complementing local authority housing strategies.

Our revised Planning Circular on affordable housing (6/98) will enable local planning authorities to increase the supply of affordable housing secured through the planning process.

Ports Policy

36. Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what response the Government have made to the EU Transport Commissioner's EU Green Paper on ports policy. [58642]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The European Commission issued its Green Paper on ports last December. We published a detailed response at the end of March 1998, setting out our broad support for the Commission's proposals for establishing fair competition between European ports. Copies of our response are in the Library of the House.

Manchester Airport Eastern Link Road

37. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will visit Heald Green, Bramhall, Hazel Grove and Woodford to study the effects of cancelling the completion of the Manchester Airport Eastern Link Road. [58643]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Roads Review led us to conclude that further consideration was necessary of the transport pressures around the airport and to the south-east of Manchester. We therefore proposed a study, which will look at potentials for increased use of public transport and address the problem of through traffic, while not encouraging further car commuting.

Cycling

38. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress the Government are making towards its target in respect of cycling by 2002. [58644]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The target of doubling the number of trips by bicycle by the end of 2002, and doubling them again by the end of 2012, was established by the National Cycling Strategy. In the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone", we endorsed that target. Good progress is being made in implementing the Strategy.

Integrated Transport Strategy

39. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what part parkway stations play in his integrated transport strategy. [58645]

Dr. Reid: Carefully designed park and ride schemes can contribute to more sustainable transport. Local authorities should consider the potential of park and ride, as part of a package of traffic management measures, when preparing their local transport plans.

Railtrack

41. Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement regarding the permitted development rights of Railtrack. [58647]

Mr. Raynsford: The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 grants planning permission for classes of development described in Schedule 2 to the Order. No specific application for planning permission is required. Part 11 grants permission for development authorised under local or private Acts or Orders subject to conditions. Part 17 grants permission for certain development by statutory undertakers, including development by railway undertakers on their operational land required in connection with the movement of traffic by rail. The question of permitted development rights and Railtrack is currently before the Secretary of State in relation to the Hinksey Sidings site in Oxford.

Rail Industry

42. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what further action his Department is taking to improve the performance of the rail industry. [58648]

Dr. Reid: We recently announced the creation of a shadow Strategic Rail Authority to get a grip on the rail industry. We have called all franchisees and Railtrack to a meeting with the Deputy Prime Minister and me on 26 November to identify solutions to their current poor performance.

Strategic Rail Authority

43. Jacqui Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what remit the shadow strategic rail authority will have. [58649]

Dr. Reid: The shadow Strategic Rail Authority, to be formed by close working between the British Railways Board and the Franchising Director, will be operational by Spring 1999. It will lead changes to the way the privatised railway is controlled, in advance of legislation to establish the SRA on a statutory basis. We will announce the remit of the shadow SRA in due course.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

44. Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to ensure that the north-west region benefits from the channel tunnel rail link. [58650]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The deal which my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 367–84, secured the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link which will deliver economic, transport and environmental benefits for the whole country.

North-West Trains

45. Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take action to prevent reductions in services by North-West trains. [58651]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Train operators are contractually committed to maintain an agreed minimum level of service in their Passenger Service Requirement (PSR), which is a key component of the franchise agreement. These minimum levels are broadly based on those that were operated prior to privatisation. To deviate would put the train operator in breach of its contract. Where additional services above the PSR have been added for commercial reasons, operators have the freedom to reduce them, after informing the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising and rail user groups.

Cleaner Vehicles

46. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce measures to encourage the purchase of more fuel-efficient, less polluting cars. [58652]

Dr. Reid: The Government have already introduced fiscal measures including fuel duty incentives and are consulting on a lower rate of Vehicle Excise Duty to encourage less environmentally damaging cars. We have also supported more stringent European vehicle emission and fuel quality standards and welcome the recent voluntary agreement from motor manufacturers to improve the fuel efficiency of new cars. The market for less polluting vehicles will be further stimulated through the Cleaner Vehicle Task Force, a partnership between the Government and the private sector to promote environmentally friendly vehicles people will want to drive and buy.

Regional Airports

47. Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what future role he envisages for regional airports. [58653]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We promised in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone" that, taking account of the emerging findings of a series of regional air services studies, we would encourage the growth of regional airports to meet local demand for air travel where consistent with sustainable development principles. The aim is to maximise the contribution which regional airports make to local and regional economies, to relieve pressure on congested airports in the south-east of England and to reduce the need for long surface journeys, particularly by road, to south-east airports. The south-west England study was already under way when the White Paper was published and the Welsh study is now also under way. Work on setting up the other four studies is in hand. We announced last week the details of our proposals to free soundly financed local authority airports from public sector borrowing controls. The new financial regime will come into effect, subject to Parliamentary approval, on 1 April 1999 and we have invited applications from those airport companies which wish to benefit from the new freedom.

Connex South Central

48. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to improve commuter services on lines operated by Connex South Central. [58654]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In August the Franchising Director asked each train operating company to submit to him an action plan indicating how they intend to improve performance. Connex South Central has submitted an action plan which the Franchising Director is currently reviewing. We have announced our intention to establish a Strategic Rail Authority which will be responsible for overseeing the performance of the franchise agreements and the strategic development of the rail network. In any new or re-negotiated franchise contracts we expect to see much better performance requirements and arrangements to enable passengers to hold operators responsible for the services they run. We also propose to amend the Railways

Act so that financial penalties for poor performance can be imposed much faster, and infringements penalised. Ministers are to meet with representatives from all train operating companies on 26 November to discuss future railways policy and in particular ways of improving poor performance generally.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many routes operated by Connex South Central the punctuality of rail services (a) improved and (b) deteriorated in the last period for which figures are available. [60296]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The latest figures released by the Franchising Director cover the three rail industry periods from 28 June 1998 to 19 September 1998. The Connex South Central franchise is split into two route groups—South London lines and Sussex Coast for the purpose of performance monitoring. Comparing the annual average at the end of September 1997 with the annual average at the end of September 1998, both route groups improved. Copies of the Franchising Director's latest report—issued on 4 November—are in the House Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 116, concerning Connex South Central, if, when Ministers meet Connex South Central, he will ensure that the company puts in place an action plan to improve services in the coming winter. [60301]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director has required all train operating companies to produce and implement an action plan setting out how they propose to deliver improvements in performance. These have been received and are being evaluated. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister will be meeting representatives from the train operating companies on 26 November, and will impress the importance of delivering improved performance on them then.

Road Freight Hauliers

49. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from road freight hauliers regarding the impact of the proposals in the White Paper on integrated transport strategy on their industry. [58655]

Dr. Reid: The industry is generally satisfied with the Government's approach to sustainable distribution as set out in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone".

This Government's policy towards the haulage industry is to promote an industry which is sustainable, which is efficient and effective and which meets the Government's environmental and social objectives at the same time.

For example, industry has welcomed the fact that 40 tonne 5-axle lorries will be allowed for domestic use as well as for international movements. Industry has endorsed our intention to improve enforcement in the industry through improvements in the efficiency of the enforcement agencies. We are ensuring that modern IT systems are introduced which will allow better co-ordination and sharing of data between the agencies. They have endorsed our intention to impound illegally operated vehicles used by cowboy operators. The industry has been very constructive in helping us to formulate these proposals. Such a scheme will help to ensure that, within the UK, hauliers operate within a competitive regime which is both fair and honest.

Leisure Craft

50. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact the new Maritime and Coastguard Agency will have on leisure craft. [58656]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 7 October, at the official launch of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA), I announced the Government's continuing commitment to improve the safety of recreational craft. The MCA will develop a voluntary Code of Conduct for all recreational craft which will include best practice and a voluntary registration and identification scheme. The Agency will also continue safety education initiatives. The Code will be developed by the Sea Safety Liaison Group which, in addition to the MCA, comprises representatives of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, Royal Yachting Association, the Royal Life Saving Society UK and the British Marine Industries Federation and will be subject to external consultation before being launched next Summer.

In due course the Government also intend to pursue the primary legislation needed to enable local authorities to have better control, through byelaws, of their coastal waters.

I believe this strategy will do a great deal to improve the safety of the increasing numbers of people who use our coastal waters for recreation.

Community Transport Schemes

51. Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the costs of implementing a comprehensive nationwide network of community transport schemes. [58657]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have commissioned a major review of voluntary and community transport nationwide. The review, which was carried out in collaboration with the Community Transport Association, has looked at both the range and the scope of work currently undertaken by voluntary and community transport operators and at what measures should be considered to enable them to deliver their invaluable services most effectively. A report will be published early in the New Year.

Vehicles (Safety Checks)

40. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact of the Government's policy on safety checks on the roadworthiness of vehicles. [58646]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government's policy is to require vehicles to undergo periodical tests for roadworthiness and for exhaust emissions. This contributes towards well-maintained, safe vehicles and relatively low levels of pollution.

Rural Areas (Parliamentary Representation)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral statement of 20 October 1998, Official Report, column 1062, on what definition of rural areas his statement that more Labour Members than Conservative Members represent rural areas was based. [57958]

Ms Armstrong: There are more Labour Members of Parliament representing the non-metropolitan counties of England than there are Conservative MPs representing similar constituencies. There are no Conservative MPs representing any rural or urban constituencies in Scotland and no Conservative MPs representing any urban or rural constituencies in Wales.

Compensation Claims

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the latest year for which figures are available. [59054]

Mr. Meale: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and place a copy in the Library.

Supermarket Developments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received from supermarket chains regarding planning policy for supermarket store developments. [58884]

Mr. Raynsford: The Secretary of State has received a number of letters from representatives of the retail sector, but has had no direct representations about planning policy for supermarket store developments. My colleague the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning and I have met representatives of the retail sector recently.

M65 (Blackburn)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons resurfacing work is being carried out on parts of the M65 at Blackburn. [59473]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 17 November 1998:

I have been asked by the Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the M65 at Blackburn.

Small areas of the road surface of the M65 Blackburn Southern Bypass have proved to be sub-standard and have had to be replaced for safety reasons. The problems only became apparent after traffic started to use the road, which was opened in December 1997.

The cost of the work was met by the Contractor who originally constructed the Motorway.

The work was carried out at night to keep inconvenience to traffic to a minimum and was completed in the early hours of Friday 13 November.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate was made of the final construction cost of the Jubilee Line Extension in each year since the project was started. [59588]

Ms Glenda Jackson: At project go-ahead in October 1993, the project was expected to cost £1.9 billion plus a further £219 million on improvements to the core network related to the JLE project. This estimate remained unchanged until August 1995 when cost increases were identified, bringing the total to £2.3 billion. In 1996 a revised forecast of £2.69 billion was made. This increased to £2.76 billion in 1997. London Transport's latest estimate of final cost is £2.85 billion, but this is being reviewed, having regard to the rephased programme for line opening in 1999.

Drinking and Driving

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to be in a position to publish the responses to his Department's consultation document on tightening the laws relating to drinking and driving; and if he will make a statement as to what action he proposes to take. [59700]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We shall make an announcement when we have finished considering the responses to our consultation exercise.

Childhood Cancers

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the degree of correlation between the incidence of childhood cancers and proximity to industrial sites. [59609]

Mr. Meale: The Small Area Health Statistics Unit at the Imperial College of Science, Technology and Medicine has carried out a number of studies of cancer incidence and mortality around industrial sites at the request of Government Departments. A study of lympho-haematopoietic cancers around all industrial complexes in Great Britain which include major oil refineries specifically examined rates in children aged 0 to 14 years of age. It found no evidence of association between residence near oil refineries and the overall incidence of lymphatic and haematopoietic malignancies in this age group.

The results of this work are due to be published early next year and a copy will be placed in the House Library.

Visual Display Units

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to require the manufacturers and retailers of visual display units to affix to the front of the screen surround a notice advising users of the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992. [59653]

Mr. Meale: There are no plans to require manufacturers and retailers of visual display units to affix any information about the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992 to the front of the screen surround. The Regulations place duties on employers rather than on manufacturers or suppliers. Employers are required to provide health and safety information and training to all their employees who habitually use display screen equipment as a significant part of their normal work.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to publicise more widely the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992, Guidance on Regulations and Supplementary Practical Advice Guide. [59654]

Mr. Meale: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has recently revised and reissued its free guidance booklet "Working with VDUs". Since February, over 174,000 free copies have been sent out and over 25,000 priced packs of 10 leaflets have been sold. "Working with VDUs" includes details of HSE's comprehensive priced guidance on the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992 and explains how to obtain copies. In addition, Health and Safety Executive (HSE) Inspectors and Local Authority Enforcement Officers raise awareness of the Regulations and guidance during their inspections of workplaces.

Railway Property Maintenance

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to extend the duties to clean railway stations and other railway property under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to companies which took over responsibility for maintenance of property previously managed by British Rail. [59614]

Ms Glenda Jackson: An Order to place a duty on the privatised railway companies to clear litter from their land will be laid before Parliament early in the new year.

Coastguards

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the dates during the last six months when there was no officer on duty at Tyne-Tees coastguard station qualified above the rank of coastguard watch assistant. [59886]

Ms Glenda Jackson: During the last six months, there has been no period when the watch complement at the Tyne-Tees coastguard station fell below the required criteria.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the aircraft movements at Heathrow airport between midnight and 7 a.m. on Christmas morning 1997, indicating (a) airline, (b) aircraft, (c) origin or destination and schedule and (d) actual times of arrival and departure. [60185]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information from Heathrow Airport Ltd is as follows:

[1] Actual Time of Arrival—time of touchdown of aircraft.
[2] Scheduled Time of Arrival—refers to the time the aircraft was scheduled to reach the stand after taxiing from the runway exit.

There were no departures during the period midnight and 0700.

Of the above landings between midnight and 0600, all of the flights except for the Citation (a small business jet) counted against the movements limit and against the noise quota, in accordance with the night flying restrictions.

Teesside Development Corporation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, columns 114–15, for what reasons the names of the companies which submitted bids for Teesside Development Corporation equipment are commercially confidential. [59864]

Mr. Meale: The firms that submitted the bids would have presumed that they were tendering on a commercially confidential basis, in accordance with normal practice. It would be improper for me to release their names without their approval.

Radioactive Gases (Cap La Hague)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation he has made of the spread of radioactive gases over the South Coast from the French nuclear power station at Cap La Hague. [60107]

Mr. Meale: No specific evaluation of the kind referred to has been made. The Government are not aware of any unauthorised release of radioactive gases from a French nuclear installation which might have affected the South Coast of England. The UK would be notified of any such incident by the French authorities, under the terms of a bilateral agreement. In addition, any elevation in the background levels of radioactivity in the UK would be detected by the RIMNET network of continuously operating gamma dose rate monitors, many of which are located along the South Coast and in the Channel Islands.

Routine aerial releases of radioactivity from the reprocessing plant at Cap La Hague and other sites in France are subject to stringent controls by the French competent authority, to ensure that the levels of radioactivity to which the public are exposed are below safety levels set by the European Union and the International Atomic Energy Agency. Under Article 37 of the Euratom Treaty, the European Commission must be satisfied that no contamination of another Member State will result, before any routine releases of radioactivity can be authorised. Environmental monitoring programmes carried out in southern England and the Channel Islands have detected no elevated levels of radioactivity.

Local Government Debt

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to reduce the level of local government debt. [59856]

Ms Armstrong: Local authorities' new borrowing is regulated by the issue of credit approvals, in accordance with the policy established by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Under this Act, authorities also have a statutory duty to make provision to meet their existing debts. It is for them to decide whether it would be prudent to repay any loan before they are contractually required to do so. Incentives to reduce the level of debt include the greater freedom for debt-free authorities to spend their capital receipts.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60081]

Mr. Meale: The Department and its agencies report fully on problems arising from millennium compliance in the quarterly review process organised by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council. As part of the initial planning process, possible problems were identified, corrective action put in hand and in many cases work is complete. All remedial work has been prioritised with business critical areas being tackled first. Information on specific problems, priorities and progress will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published in the Library of the House.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement; [60082]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [60080]

Mr. Meale: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector including CAA, London Transport, the Environment Agency and Local Authorities. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of Departments' plans which have been published in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the Internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60083]

Mr. Meale: I am mindful of the advice given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to Cabinet Colleagues and members of MISC4 in October in response to the PAC recommendations. DETR, its agencies and associated public bodies have been asked to review their existing contingency plans to take account of possible problems arising from millennium compliance. It is my intention that they will have completed risk assessments and have initial Year 2000 business continuity plans in place by the end of January 1999.

Airline Safety

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what guidance he has issued to the Civil Aviation Authority concerning the responsibilities of UK airlines safely to transport exceptionally tall people; [59603]

(2) what representations he has received relating to the responsibilities of UK airlines in respect of the safe transport of exceptionally tall people. [59602]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have not received any representations about the responsibilities of UK airlines in respect of the safe transport of exceptionally tall people.

The detailed safety regulation of aircraft and their operations is the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA). The CAA has set minimum requirements relating to the spacing of passenger seats for UK registered aircraft and carries out regular checks to ensure compliance.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to prevent airlines from charging a premium to passengers requesting the allocation of emergency exit row seats. [59604]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The practice of charging a premium for allocating specific seats to passengers, particularly on charter flights, is essentially a commercial issue for the airlines and provided the seat spacing does not fall below that stipulated by the Civil Aviation Authority, the Government would not wish to intervene.

Pigeon Proofing

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on Railtrack's responsibilities with regard to the pigeon proofing of bridges. [59866]

Ms Glenda Jackson: While Railtrack is responsible for the safety and general condition of their railway bridges, the main responsibility for minimising the nuisance and mess caused by pigeons rests with the local authorities. Railtrack has in the past entered into agreements to provide anti-pigeon netting, providing the local authority is willing to bear the cost of the project. For operational reasons (urgent safety works may require Railtrack to remove the netting) any installation is subject to a legal agreement.

Multiple Occupation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish for consultation the national mandatory licensing scheme for buildings in multiple occupation. [60269]

Mr. Raynsford: We hope to publish a consultation document on our proposals for a national mandatory licensing scheme for houses in multiple occupation early next year.

Roads (Noise Abatement)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ring-fence money provided for the Highways Agency to carry out noise abatement measures on existing roads; when he expects to announce how much will be provided; and if he will make a statement. [59598]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We announced our intention to establish a ring-fenced budget and revised criteria for this purpose in "A New deal for Trunk Roads in England". Work on this is currently in hand and we shall make a full announcement as soon as possible.

Parish Council Audits

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the average charge made by the District Auditor on behalf of the Audit Commission to carry out audits of parish councils' yearly accounts; what percentage this charge represents of the average annual precept for parish councils; what options for redress are open to parish councils in the case of disputes over audit fees; and if he will make a statement. [59599]

Mr. Raynsford: The average audit fee for the audit of parish councils' accounts was £175 in 1997–98 which represents some 1.25 per cent. of the average annual precept of parish councils in England. The number of hours required for any audit are agreed between the auditor and the audited body at the time of the audit. The first option for redress for a parish council would be to discuss the matter with the auditor. Subsequently they should pursue any complaint through the formal procedure operated by the Audit Commission.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment will be looking retrospectively at all the genetically modified crop approvals given to date in the light of its new remit. [59751]

Mr. Meale: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked ACRE to look at not only direct and indirect effects of releasing genetically modified organisms but also the possible resultant changes in agronomic practice and subsequent effects of biodiversity. This will apply only to applications to market GM crops for cultivation in the UK. When the results are known of the farm-scale ecological monitoring we will be asking ACRE to consider whether there are any implications for approvals given to date.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if companies are still required to give information about the progress of a genetically modified crop to his Department after the crop has been given marketing consent by his Department. [59749]

Mr. Meale: Companies are required to inform my Department if new information becomes available concerning the risk assessment on which the original marketing consent was based.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for the monitoring of genetically modified crops; and if he will ensure that this includes the monitoring of gene transfers. [59753]

Mr. Meale: All experimental releases of GM crops must be monitored by consent holders, and reports must be submitted to my Department on the outcome of the monitoring. In addition, my Department is funding the monitoring of releases of Plant Genetics Systems' herbicide tolerant oilseed rape which is being grown in the UK under a marketing consent for seed production only. This work is being carried out by the National Institute for Agricultural Botany and includes monitoring for evidence for gene transfer. Other genetically modified crops will be included in this programme when they enter commercial production.

Negotiations are now underway on the European Commission's proposal for amending Directive 90/220 on the deliberate release of genetically modified organisms to the environment. The Government support the proposals for post-market monitoring of GMO products including monitoring for gene transfers.

At the House of Lords Select Committee, my right. hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment announced his intention to allow farm scale plantings of GM crops to take place in order to carry out ecological monitoring. The Government are still in the early stages of developing the specifications for how the ecological monitoring will be carried out.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what acreage of the genetically modified oilseed rape (Ref. 95/ml/1) marketed by Plant Genetic Systems Ltd has been licensed to be grown on a commercial scale in the United Kingdom. [59750]

Mr. Meale: The genetically modified oilseed rape developed by Plant Genetic Systems has been granted a consent for commercial seed production only. No specific acreage has been licensed by the Secretary of State for growth in the UK.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what were the earliest dates that herbicide-tolerant or insect-resistant crops could have been grown legally in the UK. [59752]

Mr. Meale: Legislation has permitted the growing of genetically modified crops, under consent from the Secretary of State, since February 1993. They could have been grown prior to this under the Genetic Manipulation Regulations 1989 and a voluntary agreement covering risks to the environment. The first release of a GM crop under this scheme was in 1987.

New Forest (Car Parking)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will give a decision on the appeal by New Forest District Council against Hampshire County Council on the question of car parking charges which the Government Office of the South East has referred to him. [60164]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A decision will be issued shortly.

Traffic Congestion (Southend)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of traffic congestion within Southend-on-Sea; and if he will promote a bypass road from Shoeburyness to the A127. [58635]

Ms Glenda Jackson: These are both matters which are the responsibility of Southend-on-Sea Borough Council and Essex County Council. Essex County Council have withdrawn their proposal for a £75 million road and both authorities are now pursuing sustainable transport solutions in the South East Essex package.

Night Flights

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to issue detailed proposals on the next night restrictions regime for Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted; and what his plans are for consulting on the introduction of runway alternation at night at Heathrow and the continuance of westerly preference at night. [60384]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is the second consultation in the two-stage process announced earlier this year on 27 February 1998, Official Report, column 404.

Part 1 of this consultation invites comments on detailed proposals for future night restrictions at the three airports. Part 2 deals with Heathrow only, and invites views on options for the possible introduction of night-time runway alternation and on changing westerly preference at night.

It also includes a summary of the assessment of the continuing trial procedure for landings over London in the early morning. The Government wish to consider all responses to Part 2 before reaching a view.

In developing these proposals we have taken into account the responses received to the preliminary consultation paper. We have sought to strike the right balance between the need to protect local communities from excessive aircraft noise at night and the need to allow air services to operate at night where they benefit the local, regional and national economy.

A ban on night flights is not considered practicable but further steps are proposed to restrict operations by the noisiest types of aircraft at night and to encourage the use of quieter types.

Our aim is to put in place arrangements which, over time, will bring about improvements in the noise climate during the night quota period (11.30 pm-6.00 am) around Gatwick, and further improvements around Heathrow. We also wish to provide for the planned development of Stansted, broadly as envisaged in 1993, while maintaining and strengthening the incentive for airlines to use quieter aircraft.

The main proposals are:

- to reduce the seasonal noise quotas for Heathrow to nearer the level of current usage, in order to safeguard the improvements in the night quota period achieved since 1993;
- to reduce the seasonal noise quotas for Gatwick from winter 2001–02 onwards and to balance the movement limits pro rata per season, from winter 1999–2000 onwards;
- to increase the Stansted noise quotas gradually from winter 1999–2000 onwards, while maintaining the incentive for airlines to use quieter aircraft;
- to ban aircraft classified QC/4 in the noise quota count (QC) system from being scheduled to land or take off during the quota restricted period from the start of the 2002 summer season at all three airports, subject to the technical reviews of the quota count system; and
- to reduce to 5 per cent. the amount of end of season flexibility permitted, except when there are calendar reasons for retaining 10 per cent.

Copies of the consultation paper will be placed in the House Library. The closing date for responses to the consultation is 12 February 1999.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on the economic development activities of local authorities of the proposed Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [59533]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

Following the French withdrawal last month from the negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) in the OECD, it appears most unlikely that the Agreement will be concluded.

The Department looked closely at the possible impact of the draft MAI on local government activity, in consultation with the Local Government Association. We reached the conclusion that there should be no conflict between the broad principles of the MAI and the social and economic development objectives of local governments. However, there were some respects in which we felt that the draft text required greater clarity in order to provide increased certainty.

PRIME MINISTER

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Prime Minister what plans there are for a ministerial visit to St. Helena. [59436]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 12 November 1998]: At present there are no plans for a Ministerial visit to St. Helena.

All elected members of the St. Helena Legislative Council have visited the UK during the last year at the invitation of the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd). While they were here they were able to meet a number of British Government Ministers.

Senior officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department for International Development visit St. Helena regularly. The next visit by officials will be in December to review the three year Country Policy Plan and the Government's £26 million aid grant.

"Europe in Ten Points"

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's input into section A, People's Europe, in the European Communities document "Europe in Ten Points"; and what discussions were held on the subject during the recent Heads of Government meeting at Pörtschach. [59996]

The Prime Minister: The present Government made no contribution to the pamphlet "Europe in Ten Points".

The meeting of Heads at Pörtschach was an informal meeting in preparation for the full European council in Vienna, at which a broad range of issues were discussed. No formal decisions were taken. There was discussion of how to enhance democratic legitimacy, make a reality of subsidiarity and improve the efficiency of the Community institutions.

Millennium

Mr. Brady: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has made for a specific Minister in each Department to be on duty at midnight on 31 December 1999 to deal with emergencies arising from the millennium bug. [59908]

The Prime Minister: In line with the practice of the previous administration, the Civil Contingencies Committee (previously the Civil Contingency Unit) is always on standby for any emergency event which warrants a contribution from central Government. The existence of the Year 2000 problem is of course one of the matters which the Civil Contingencies Committee has taken into account in its planning arrangements.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Prime Minister how he will ensure that essential services are able to maintain adequate staffing levels on New Year's Eve 1999. [59855]

The Prime Minister: Individual Ministers are responsible for ensuring that their departments have plans in place to deal with possible Year 2000 failures. Where appropriate, these plans will make provision for essential staff to be on duty over New Year's Eve 1999.

Across the wider public sector, Chief Executives of Local Authorities and NHS Trusts, and Chief Police and Fire Officers will be responsible for ensuring that staff are on duty on New Year's Eve 1999.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will send a delegation of officials to Iraq to discuss the areas of disagreement between the UK and Iraq. [60090]

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions Her Majesty's Government have held with Arab states aimed at obtaining overflying rights in the event of an attack on Iraq. [60228]

The Prime Minister: We regularly discuss these and other bilateral matters with Arab states.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will investigate allegations that (a) Polish and (b) other members of UNSCOM have provided information to the US on the location of possible targets for attack. [60198]

The Prime Minister: This is a matter for UNSCOM. I am, however, aware that UNSCOM has dismissed these allegations as groundless. I am satisfied that UNSCOM has been operating in accordance with its mandate from the United Nations Security Council.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the German Foreign Minister's statement in a Die Zeit interview that an attack on Iraq would mean that UN weapons inspectors would be unable to return to Iraq for a long time. [60199]

The Prime Minister: The ultimate aim of our policy, and that would include any use of military force against Iraq, is the full implementation of all relevant Security Council resolutions. We attach great importance to UNSCOM and IAEA being able to carry out their work effectively.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Prime Minister what child care provision is made available by his Office for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59720]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 November 1998]: For the purpose of this question, my office is part of the Cabinet Office.

Staff in the Department, with children between the ages of 5 and 12, may use the Westminster Holiday Playscheme during the school half terms and major holidays.

Six programmes within the Westminster Holiday Playscheme ran in the financial year 1996–97 and six ran in the financial year 1997–98. The cost borne by Cabinet Office parents in total in the financial year 1996–97 was £1,789.25 and the number who used the scheme was 28. The cost to parents in the financial year 1997–98 was £2,056.79 and the number who used the scheme was 45. The proportion of total staff who used the playscheme in the financial year 1996–97 was 2.8 per cent. and in the financial year 1997–98 it was 4 per cent.

The Department places great importance on maintaining and developing a wide range of family friendly policies. Child care is just one element of these policies. Others include maternity leave at full pay, career breaks of up to five years, special leave to help those caring for elderly dependants, five days' paid paternity pay and special leave for domestic emergencies. In addition staff are able to claim help with additional child care costs associated with activities such as attendance at a training course or while on special duties. Other measures to help staff balance work and family life include a range of flexible working patterns.

Savers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) of 3 December 1997, Official Report, column 349, by what date he expects his target of six million new savers to be achieved. [60084]

The Prime Minister: We have designed the Individual Savings Account and the Cost, Access and Terms standards to respond to the concerns of those who are not currently saving, or who are only saving very little. Half of this country's population have savings of less than £200. We are confident that ISAs will be attractive to significant numbers of new savers over the coming years.

Select Committee Reports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the implementation of the recommendations contained in departmental Select Committee reports which have been accepted by Government departments. [59841]

The Prime Minister: Implementation of recommendations is a matter for individual departments and the relevant Select Committees. Departments set out in the Government response to a Select Committee report how they propose to implement the recommendations and, where appropriate, indicate a timetable. Select Committees then monitor progress as they see fit.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 365, what assessment he has made of the impact of the Working Time Directive on the rate of inflation in each of the next three years. [60201]

The Prime Minister: The Government do not believe that the Working Time Directive will have any significant impact on the rate of inflation over the next three years.

Charities (Ex-Service Men)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 361, if he will list the support given to (a) St. Dunstan's and (b) other such organisations. [60202]

The Prime Minister: We are very conscious of the tireless and highly professional way organisations such as St. Dunstan's assist their former colleagues and know how greatly their efforts are valued both by the present Service community and by ex-Servicemen and women.

There is, however, a considerable amount of Government assistance for those ex-service personnel who are disabled, including St. Dunstaners, including payment of tax-free War Pensions and enhanced occupational pensions through the Armed Forces Pensions Scheme (AFPS). Taken together, the AFPS and the War Pension Scheme provide a system of compensation for anyone disabled or widowed as a result of service in the Armed Forces. All War Pensioners are entitled to priority treatment through the National Health Service for treatment of their disability.

However, in keeping with the long standing practice of successive Governments, that public funds, raised through taxation, are not provided to assist charities' core activities, St. Dunstan's, in common with all registered charities, be they concerned with the Armed Forces or otherwise, is required to raise its own funding. The Charity Commissioners advise there are some 180,000 charities and it would be impossible for central Government to assist with fairness to any measurable degree. Again in common with all other charities, St. Dunstan's does receive support from the Government by way of certain tax reliefs.

Under Section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968, there are powers to fund voluntary organisations whose activities support the Department of Health's policy objectives relating to health and personal and social services. However, the budget is finite and more applications are received than it is possible to meet. Earlier this year, an application from the Diana Gubbay Trust for the Blind, which is administered by St. Dunstan's, was reluctantly turned down as it was for more than the total amount of money available. A further application has been received by the Department of Health and will be given serious consideration.

Joint Statement (Liberal Democrats)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on the constitutional and practical implications of the agreement between the Government and the Liberal Democrats; [60239]

(2) if Liberal Democrat Members who sit on Cabinet sub-committees are in receipt of classified material not available to all hon. Members belonging to the Government party; [60236]

(3) which members of the Liberal Democrat party will sit on Cabinet sub-committees as a result of his recent agreement with the leader of the Liberal Democrats; [60238]

(4) if the constitutional convention of collective Cabinet responsibility extends to Liberal Democrats serving on Cabinet sub-committees. [60240]

The Prime Minister: Members of the Liberal Democrat Party sit on only one Cabinet Committee: the Joint Consultative Committee (JCC). It is a matter for the Liberal Democrats as to which of their members attend. These arrangements will not change as a result of my recent joint statement with the leader of the Liberal Democrats.

Members of the Liberal Democrat Party who attend the Joint Consultative Committee are not bound by the constitutional convention of collective responsibility for decisions of the Government. However, they naturally receive the papers and minutes of the Committee, which, as is usual for Cabinet Committees, are classified documents.

No new constitutional implications arise as a result of my joint statement with the leader of the Liberal Democrats. Any practical implications will emerge from the review of the work of the JCC which is being undertaken by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office and the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith).

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost to the National Insurance Fund of the 2 per cent. inducement to purchase personal pension schemes; and how much of it was provided in respect of schemes which were mis-sold. [59759]

Mr. Denham: For tax years 1987–88 to 1992–93 inclusive, most people who contracted-out of the State Earnings Related Pension Scheme (SERPS) with an Appropriate Personal Pension (APP), qualified for an additional 2 per cent. incentive payment of minimum contributions. Up to the end of January 1998 (the last month for which figures are available) the total amount paid was £3,396.8 million.

Figures are not available for the amount paid to schemes that were mis-sold. People who were previously in their employer's contracted-out pension scheme for two years or more, and who were entitled to stay in that scheme but left voluntarily after 5 April 1988 while continuing to work for the same employer, would not have qualified for the incentive. The majority of people who were mis-sold an APP would have left their employer's scheme and would not therefore have qualified for the 2 per cent. incentive.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the cost to the National Insurance Fund for 1999–2000 and subsequent years, of the changes in (a) employers' and (b) employees' contributions announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Financial Statement on 17 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1097–111, and his pre-Budget statement on 3 November 1998, Official Report, columns 681–88. [59756]

Mr. Timms: The proposed changes to employees' National Insurance contributions from April 1999 are broadly revenue neutral for employers as a whole. The changes to employees' contributions will reduce contribution revenue to the National Insurance Fund by £1.2 billion in 1999–2000 and by £1.4 billion a year in 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost to the National Insurance Fund of the reduction in employers' contributions in April 1997 for the years 1997–98 and 1998–99. [59818]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

National Insurance Recording Computer

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 603, in how many cases new claimants for incapacity benefit have claims remaining to be processed, or have been referred to income support, as a result of the problems with the implementation of NIRS2; and when those claimants will be given correct payments of incapacity benefit. [59297]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 11 November 1998]: 95 per cent. of Incapacity Benefit claims received since 19 June 1998 have been processed normally by obtaining the contributions information from other sources. The remainder are either awaiting processing as normal or have been referred to Income Support. It is estimated that approximately 8,000 claimants have been referred to Income Support because the contributions information could not be obtained from other sources. These claimants will have their Incapacity Benefit claims reviewed as soon as the NIRS2 system is available.

It is planned that all new claims to Incapacity Benefit should be processed through NIRS2 from 18 November.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what contingency plans the Contributions Agency and Benefits Agency developed to accommodate the phased implementation of the introduction of NIRS2. [59285]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 11 November 1998]: Due to the scale, complexity and sensitivity of the NIRS2 system it has been thoroughly tested prior to acceptance by the Contributions Agency (CA). During the first year of operation the system is being introduced through a series of pilots leading to national implementation.

Contingency plans were developed by both the CA and the Benefits Agency (BA) in order to accommodate the phased implementation and the attendant difficulties. The CA appointed a Continuity Planning Manager in January 1998 with the aim of ensuring that CA, BA, Inland Revenue and other major stakeholders involved with NIRS2 developed robust and comprehensive contingency plans. These plans have been systematically updated to ensure minimum impact on contributors and benefit claimants.

The BA's contingency plans are based upon long-standing emergency procedures. As part of those procedures, managers and staff were provided with comprehensive guidance to enable them to deal with claims that could be affected by problems with the introduction of NIRS2. The guidance was issued at the beginning of the year and has been revised as required.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 603, how much of the NIRS2 system remains to be switched on. [59286]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 11 November 1998]: On the 13 July 1998, the majority of the new system was switched on. With effect from 14 September 1998 further parts of the system were integrated with those already available.

The system is now being used to process Employers' End of Year National Insurance Returns. It is debiting the self-employed on a monthly basis and issuing National Insurance bills to the self-employed on a quarterly basis as well as making monthly payments to the pensions industry in relation to age-related rebates. NIRS2 has been processing all new and repeat claims for Jobseeker's Allowance since 9 November 1998, and it is planned that Incapacity Benefit will be processed from 18 November 1998.

There are still some functions within NIRS2 which are being piloted. These relate to the processing of Retirement Pensions, Widows Benefits and other functions to maintain individual National Insurance accounts. As soon as piloting is complete the functionality will be made available to system users.

Benefits (Entitlement Rules)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on those changes to benefit entitlement rules he currently proposes, indicating for each proposal the number of people who (a) will lose and (b) will be denied benefits as a result of proposed changes and their average financial loss. [56250]

Mr. Timms: The Government set out their proposals for taking forward the reform of the Welfare State in the document "A new contract for welfare: Principles into Practice" (Cm 4101). These proposals are based on the principles of work for those who can and security for those who cannot. Details of proposals which affect benefit entitlement are as follows:

Severe Disablement Allowance—we propose to reform Severe Disablement Allowance (SDA) to provide more help to young people disabled at birth or early in life who do not have the opportunity to work and to build up entitlement to Incapacity Benefit. In the first year we estimate that there will be around 8,000 new claims from this group of people who will gain from the proposals. In the second year of the scheme almost 20,000 existing SDA recipients will be transferred on to the higher rate of Incapacity Benefit. These people will see increases of up to £25.60 a week at April 1998 rates.

We estimate that around 16,000 people per year aged 20 or over will no longer be able to claim SDA following the introduction of these changes. However, around 70 per cent. of those currently receiving SDA also receive Income Support (IS) and it is likely that the same proportion will continue to qualify for IS. This group will therefore see no change to their overall level of income. For those whose other income means they do not qualify for IS, the average loss will be in the region of £50 a week.

At the point of change, no one on SDA aged 20 or over will lose the benefit as a result of the changes.

Disability Income Guarantee—we propose to introduce a new Disability Income Guarantee for the poorest severely disabled people who have the highest care needs. We estimate that around 175,000 people under age 60 will benefit from the Guarantee in the first year. For adults, the Guarantee will mean an extra £5.75 a week for a single person and £8.30 for a couple, at April 1998 rates. Families will receive an extra £5.75 a week for each disabled child that qualifies.

Disability Living Allowance—we propose to extend the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to severely disabled children aged 3 and 4. We estimate that around 8,000 children will gain from this change during the first year by £35.85 a week at April 1998 rates.

Incapacity Benefit—we propose to modernise the Incapacity Benefit rules to strengthen the link between work and entitlement and to introduce a fairer partnership between State and private provision. These measures will apply only to new claims for benefit. At the point of change, no one already on Incapacity Benefit will lose benefit as a result of these changes.

In the first year following the introduction of the changes, we estimate that around 30,000 claimants will not qualify for Incapacity Benefit as a result of the change to the contribution conditions. Approximately 70 per cent. of them will already be on income-based Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support when their claim to Incapacity Benefit is made, and their entitlement to these benefits would continue. Over the same period, we estimate that a further 35,000 claimants will have their Incapacity Benefit reduced as a result of taking some account of their occupational and personal pensions.

The average net loss will be around £27 a week at April 1998 rates.

The single gateway—from April 2000, in the pilot areas, new benefit claimants of working age who are out of work will be required to participate in an interview with a personal adviser as a condition of receiving benefit. This will affect approximately 400,000 new claimants per year over the 12 pilot areas.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60125]

Mr. Timms: The major systems key to the payments of benefits and pensions are designed to hold dates in a format unaffected by the turn of the century. The first part of our contingency is that testing has been built in to allow for a full year's running before 31 December 1999 except for the National Insurance Recording system which is not expected to be confirmed compliant until 31 October 1999, or earlier if possible. Additional testing including business assurance testing will continue to provide further confidence.

The Department expects to complete the programme of work to upgrade or replace business critical desktop computer systems by the end of March 1999. This target allows adequate contingency before the dates these systems might otherwise fail.

We have a range of plans to support the continuity of Social Security operations and are working closely with other Departments, public bodies and Action 2000 to identify and if necessary deal with specific Year 2000 related threats. Our target for having rehearsed Millennium-related business continuity plans is the end of March 1999. However, even beyond this date we will continue to assess the potential impact of residual risks arising from external factors over which we have no direct control, for example, electricity supply. We will continue to update plans and if necessary take action as more and better intelligence becomes available.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60122]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60124]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government Departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of Departments' plans which have been published in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the Internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60123]

Mr. Timms: This Department's Year 2000 activity is being progressed on the basis of business critical first. There have been no problems to date arising from Millennium compliance which have affected the Department's operations.

A problem which this Department has encountered in dealing with the Millennium date change concerns reliance on third parties. We have identified those suppliers which pose the greatest risk and where impact of external failure on the business would be greatest. We have successfully identified and contacted 99 per cent. of these business critical suppliers. In common with other organisations, it is proving difficult to obtain from some of our suppliers a precise account of the progress of their Year 2000 compliance work. We are validating risk assessments and ensuring relevant business continuity plans incorporate the necessary contingencies.

We anticipate that initiatives led by Action 2000, such as Pledge 2000 and the National Infrastructure Forum, to which this Department is contributing, will improve the quality of compliance information available.

SERPS

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of the number of pensioners contracted out of state earnings related pension scheme who are being underpaid sums of (a) £0.01 to £4.99, (b) £5 to £9.99, (c) £10 to £19.99, (d) £20 to £29.99, (e) £30 to £39.99. (f) £40 to £49.99, (g) £50 to £59.99, (h) £60 to £69.99, (i) £70 to £79.99, (j) £80 to £80.99 and (k) £90 to £100 per week. [59259]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 11 November 1998]: It is estimated that there are 7,000 cases of people contracted-out of SERPS where the calculation of the amount of SERPS payable has been prevented.

These are cases where a claimant paid into a personal pension or occupational pension schemes and there are unresolved issues relating to the membership of that scheme. The theoretical underpayment can range from £0.01 to £100 a week. Procedures are in place which allow Benefits Agency offices to obtain a clerical calculation in cases of financial hardship or where the claimant is not prepared to wait. An estimated 1,500 clerical calculations have been carried out enabling the correct payments to be made to these claimants. Approximately 5,500 claims are potentially underpaid. As soon as the system is operating satisfactorily any underpayments will be made.

A detailed breakdown of the amounts of underpayments is not yet available. A more accurate assessment will be available in due course. Considerable effort is being made to ensure that full normal operations can resume as soon as possible.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the real annual growth in the Social Security budget from (a) 1993–94 to 1998–99 and from (b) 1998–99 to 2001–02, after adjusting for the transfer from family credit to the working families tax credit; and if he will make a statement. [59431]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 12 November 1998]: Following real growth in the Department's benefit expenditure of 10.1 per cent. between 1991–92 and 1992–93 and 6.7 per cent. between 1992–93 and 1993–94, average annual real growth in the Department's benefit expenditure is estimated to be 0.6 per cent. from 1993–94 to 1998–99 and 1.5 per cent. from 1998–99 to 2001–02. Benefit expenditure grew by 4 per cent. over the last Parliament. It is estimated that it will grow by less than 2 per cent. in this Parliament.

Private Pensions

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the review of private pension provision will be completed. [59322]

Mr. Denham: The Government's Pension Review is looking at all aspects of pensions, including second tier pensions. As set out in the Green Paper "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare" (Cm 3805), we intend to publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 606–07, (1) what is the average loss in child maintenance to parents under the formula proposed in the Green Paper on child support, broken down into those now receiving (a) under £5, (b) £5-£9.99, (c) £10-£19.99, (d) £20-£29.99, (e) £30-£39.99, (f) £40-£49.99, (g) £50-£59.99, (h) £60-£69.99, (i) £70-£79.99, (j) £80-£89.99, (k) £90-£99.99 and (l) £100 and above per week; [59382]

(2) what the basis is of his estimate that compliance with child maintenance orders will rise to 80 per cent. or more under the new scheme. [59648]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Current banded assessment (£)	Average change in maintenance assessment
Under 5.00	*
5.00–9.99	2.50
10.00–19.99	4.50
20.00–29.99	7.00
30.00–39.99	11.00
40.00–49.99	14.50
50.00–59.99	19.00
60.00–69.99	21.00
70.00–79.99	24.50
80.00–89.99	24.50
90.00–99.99	24.50
100 and over	22.00
All cases	16.50

Notes:

1. Average changes in maintenance assessments calculated from February 1997 5 per cent. scan of the child support computer and based on estimated 1997–98 caseloads and do not take account of, for example, the introduction of the Working Families Tax Credit.
2. Average changes have been rounded to the nearest 50p. '*' denotes a change of less than 50p a week.
3. Caseloads include parents with a full maintenance assessment in place and for whom the non-resident parent has a positive assessable income.
4. Reflects benefit status of the parent with care at date of first assessment.

This table does not include parents with care on Income Support whose maintenance assessment is reduced; these cases will experience an overall increase in income because of the proposed introduction of a £10 maintenance premium. Also the information above defines cases as losers based on assessed maintenance, rather than maintenance paid, and before allowing for any changes in compliance which may occur as a result of the new formula.

Our estimates of increased compliance are based on the simpler, transparent rules of the new scheme. Non-resident parents will be able to see at a glance how much their assessment should be. Information on which the basic assessment is calculated will be more straightforward and there will be little opportunity for those who simply do not wish to pay to thwart the Agency's efforts in securing maintenance for the children. Assessments will be made faster and all the evidence is that non-resident parents are more willing to pay, and pay regularly, if they are contacted quickly.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals claimed invalidity benefit or its equivalent as a year on year figure from 1995 to 1998 in (a) each London borough, (b) each London parliamentary constituency and (c) nationally. [59356]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

3. An individual may make more than one claim to Incapacity Benefit during a year.
4. Incapacity Benefit replaced Sickness Benefit and Invalidity Benefit on 13 April 1995.

Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the additional cost of the guaranteed minimum income for pensioners if 100 per cent. take-up were achieved. [59819]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the table.

Estimates of the additional cost of 100 per cent. take-up of the guaranteed minimum income for pensioners, above the cost for take up included in the comprehensive spending review (CSR) package

£ million

Estimated expenditure across Income Support/Housing Benefit/ Council Tax Benefit

Year	Mid-range estimate
1999–2000	750
2001–2001	550
2001–2002	350

Notes:
1. 100 per cent. take-up could be achieved only if all eligible pensioners took up their entitlement from the very first day they became entitled. There will always be some pensioners who choose not to claim because they are entitled only to small amounts.
2. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest £50 million, and are based on the 1995–96 and 1996–97 Family Resources Survey, and forecasts of pensioner benefit units consistent with estimates produced for the Comprehensive Spending Review.
3. Estimates decrease over the three-year CSR period, reflecting the build up to 85 per cent. take-up by expenditure assumed in the CSR costings. Estimates are normally given in ranges, but for consistency with the CSR published figures, the mid-point estimate is quoted in the reply.
4. As all estimates based on household survey data are subject to a degree of uncertainty, these estimates should be treated as indicative of broad magnitudes only.

Photosensitivity

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the mobility allowance regulations to ensure that people who cannot walk in daylight because of disability arising from photosensitivity are included within the scope of the allowance. [59711]

Mr. Timms: Regulations provide entitlement to the higher rate of Disability Living Allowance mobility component where a person's "ability to walk out of doors is so limited, as regards the distance over which or the speed at which or at the length of time for which or the manner in which he can make progress on foot without severe discomfort, that he is virtually unable to walk".

It is accepted that a severe reaction to sunlight may cause severe discomfort, however, the discomfort is not related to the act of walking. This was also the view of the Court of Appeal and we will not therefore be reviewing the regulations.

Long-term Care

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will eliminate the difference in entitlement to social security benefits between those resident in local authority residential houses and those in private residential homes. [59712]

Angela Eagle: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Carlisle (Mr. Martlew) on 10 November 1998, Official Report, columns 163–64.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people, awaiting an appeal hearing on refusal of applications for, or withdrawal of, the mobility element of disability living allowance, have been waiting

(a) between six and 12 months and (b) over 12 months, for their appeals to be heard; and if he will make a statement. [59615]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the form requested. However, at the end of August 1998, the number of people awaiting an appeal hearing on refusal of applications for, or withdrawal of, the mobility element of Disability Living Allowance totalled 277. Of these, 121 had been waiting less than six months, 88 between six and 12 months and 68 over 12 months.

Child Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the current child dependency increases for widowed mothers allowance; and what additional uprating would have been needed to restore the combined value of child benefit and child dependency increases in April to their November 1979 level relative to (a) prices and (b) earnings. [59814]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

	First child	Subsequent child(ren)
November 1979
Child Dependency increase	7.10	7.10
Child Benefit	4.00	4.00
Total	11.10	11.10
April 1998
Child Dependency increase	9.90	11.30
Child Benefit	11.45	9.30
Total	21.35	20.60
If increased by earnings to April 1998
Child Dependency increase	26.70	26.70
Child Benefit	14.95	14.95
Total	41.65	41.65
If increased by prices to April 1998
Child Dependency increase	19.30	19.30
Child Benefit	10.60	10.60
Total	29.90	29.90

Notes:

1. The Retail Prices Index (all items) was used to put Child Benefit and Widowed Mother's Allowance child dependency addition into real terms as at April 1998
2. The average earnings of full time adult employees was calculated using the New Earnings Survey and Average Earnings Index (AEI), both produced by the Office for National Statistics

Benefit Uprating

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish details of the April 1999 benefit uprating. [59816]

Mr. Darling: The information requested was placed in the Library, and the Vote Office and copies of the schedule were sent to all right hon. and hon. Members of the House in October. These details are now reproduced.

[1] The Overlapping Benefits Regulations provide for the rate of child dependency increases, guardian's allowance and child special allowance to be adjusted where the increase or allowance is payable for the eldest eligible child for whom ChB is also payable. The weekly rate of the increase or allowance is reduced by the differential (less the 75p derived from the Oct 1991 increase in Chb and the £2.60 above normal uprating) between the rate of ChB payable for the oldest eligible child and that payable for a subsequent child.

Widowed Mothers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the percentage increases in April 1999 in (a) benefits, including child benefit, for the first and subsequent children of widowed mothers and (b) child benefit for two-parent families; and what is the reason for the differences between the percentages in (a) and (b). [59815]

Angela Eagle: The information is set out in the table.

	April 1998 (£)	April 1999 (£)	Increase	Percentage increase
Widowed mother
First child	21.35	24.30	2.95	13.82
Subsequent children	20.60	20.96	0.35	1.7
Two parent family
First child	11.45	14.40	2.95	25.76
Subsequent children	9.30	9.60	0.30	3.2

From April 1999 both Child Benefit and the Child Dependency Increases, including those paid to widowed mothers, will be uprated by the Retail Prices Index.

The Child Dependency Increases provide a "top up" to Child Benefit for those who are unable to take up employment. The reason for the difference between the percentages in (a) and (b) is that legislation specifically provides for the rate of Child Benefit to be taken into account when determining the levels of child dependency increases. The method is to calculate what the child dependency increase would be if the general uprating percentage were applied, and then to deduct the actual cash increase in Child Benefit. However, from next April, the standard rate of Child Benefit for the eldest child will increase by an additional £2.50, increasing to £2.60 after uprating. To ensure that families on other benefits, including widowed mother's allowance, gain equally from this additional measure they will receive the full £2.60 in addition to the normal uprating.

Benefits (Expenditure)

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money has been paid out in (a) industrial injuries benefit, (b) disability living allowance, (c) incapacity benefit, (d) income support and (e) widows pension in each of the last five years for which figures are available at current prices. [59995]

Mr. Timms: The information is set out in the table.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 167, concerning the Benefit Integrity Project, when the special working group will be set up. [60302]

Mr. Timms: At the Disability Benefits Forum meeting on 9 November 1998 it was agreed that a separate working group, comprising a small number of the Forum members and officials, should discuss proposals for a new, active, modern service for Attendance Allowance and Disability Living Allowance; including the replacement of the Benefits Integrity Project. Forum members who expressed an interest have been contacted and the first meeting of the working group, planned for December, is currently being organised.

Residential Living Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, columns 163–64, concerning residential living allowance, when officials were asked to consider whether residential allowance is meeting the objectives of community care, and for what reasons. [60304]

Angela Eagle: Officials began reviewing whether Residential Allowance meets the objectives of community care as part of the comprehensive spending review launched last year. This was in the context of identifying if there were any perverse incentives in the system, and of ensuring that resources are used in the most cost-effective way to produce the best outcomes for adults receiving community care services.

Benefits (Parliamentary Scrutiny)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to ensure that all changes to the eligibility criteria for disability living allowance and attendance allowance are subject to parliamentary scrutiny. [60274]

Mr. Timms: All legislation is subject to Parliamentary scrutiny. It is already possible to change the eligibility criteria for Disability Living Allowance through regulations which are subject to the negative resolution. We propose to introduce similar powers for Attendance Allowance.

Disability Living Allowance (Children)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to extend the mobility component of disability living allowance to children aged under five years; and when such changes will take effect. [60273]

Mr. Timms: Entitlement to the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance will be extended to 3 and 4-year-old severely disabled children who have difficulties walking. There is no firm date for implementation, but it is unlikely to be before April 2001.

Expenditure

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 1998, Official Report, column 1182, concerning the absence of revisions to social security expenditure plans since the Comprehensive Spending Reviews, what factors underlie the difference between the social security benefit line in Table 2 of the Comprehensive Spending Review and Table B12 of the pre-Budget report. [60295]

Mr. Darling: Revisions to the forecasts of Social Security expenditure published in the Pre-Budget Report reflect new information about caseloads and economic assumptions.

Mr. M. E. Hatcher

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reinstate the (a) medium rate and (b) high rate of disability living allowance awarded for life on 11 March 1997 to Mr. M. E. Hatcher, 1 Raddicombe Drive, Brixham, Devon; and if he will make a statement on the reasons underlying its withdrawal. [59715]

Mr. Timms: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 16 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will reinstate the (a) medium rate and (b) high rate of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) awarded for life on 11 March 1997 to Mr M.E. Hatcher, 1 Raddicombe Drive, Brixham, Devon: and if he will make a statement on the reasons underlying its withdrawal.

It may be helpful if I explain that entitlement to DLA does not depend on the diagnosis of a condition but on the way in which that condition affects a person on a day to day basis. Decisions are made by Adjudication Officers (AOs) who are statutory office holders. It would be improper for me to comment on, or interfere in their decisions. I can confirm that although an award of DLA may be given for life an AO may reduce or revoke an award on review if the information received indicates that a person's entitlement to DLA has changed.

Mr Hatcher's DLA was reviewed on 29 July 1998 after he requested his care component be uprated to the highest rate. It is for the AO to decide what evidence is required in order to reach a decision. The evidence used by the AO included the review request, a DLA claim pack received on 19 May 1998, and a report the AO requested from Mr Hatcher's GP. The evidence indicated that Mr Hatcher's care and mobility needs had reduced and he was no longer entitled to benefit.

A further review request provided more information from Mr Hatcher. The AO considered this evidence and decided that he had sufficient night needs for an award of middle rate care only from 2 May 1998 to 1 November 1999 but maintained the decision relating to the mobility component.

Since Mr Hatcher's latest request for a review, the AO decided, with advice from a Benefits Agency Medical Advisor, that a report from the Examining Medical Practitioner should be obtained. Mr Hatcher was invited to attend an examination on 6 November 1998. The doctor who was to carry out the examination has confirmed that the appointment was cancelled on 5 November 1998. A further appointment will not be arranged.

I am sorry I cannot be more conclusive within this reply.

Pension Schemes (Annuities)

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Government have to change the rules governing small self-administered pension scheme annuities. [59323]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

For many types of pension scheme the purchase of an annuity is the only means to guarantee that a pension can be paid for life (which is a requirement of pension scheme rules). This includes small self-administered schemes, but the trustees of these pension schemes have broad flexibility over the timing of an annuity purchase. We have no plans to change this flexibility.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement; [60120]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [60118]

Mrs. Roche: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector including British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. and the Post Office. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published and placed in the Libraries of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Libraries of the House and on the internet.

Miners' Widows (Compensation)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the exclusions regarding the compensation claims for widows of miners, other than miners who have suffered from chest diseases. [59373]

Mr. Battle: There are no exclusions regarding valid compensation claims from widows of miners for any diseases or accidents where British Coal have been found liable or liability has been accepted.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what value for money criteria Ministers have introduced regarding the compensation for widows of miners who have suffered chest diseases; [59369]

(2) what estimate he has made of the savings resulting from excluding widows of miners from compensation claims; [59371]

(3) if he will make a statement on the consultation undertaken by his Department regarding the exclusion of widows of miners from compensation claims; [59368]

(4) when he expects to reach a conclusion on policy concerning the exclusion of widows of miners from compensation claims; [59370]

(5) what limits his Department has introduced for compensation claims for widows of miners. [59372]

Mr. Battle: There has never been any intention to exclude widows with valid claims from receiving compensation. Our policy has always been that widows should be compensated fairly and in accordance with their legal entitlement. With regard to the British Coal respiratory disease litigation, we have put our proposals for dealing with claims from widows to the plaintiffs' solicitors and these are currently under discussion. We must ensure that the final arrangements are robust enough properly to validate claims and are fair to claimants. To this end, medical advisers met last week to address certain issues which should help to iron out the remaining problems quickly and put us in a position to begin making offers very shortly. We have made it clear previously that the necessary funds are available for settling all these claims.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on the motor industry of the proposed multilateral agreement on investment; [59534]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on the textile and clothing industry of the proposed multilateral agreement on investment. [59535]

Mr. Wilson: In developing their policy towards the MAI, the Government considered the impact that it might have on all sectors of the UK economy. We did not identify any particular sectoral impact to be expected from the MAI in either the motor industry or the textiles and clothing industry.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the changes to his Department's policies on the proposed multilateral agreement on investment. [59656]

Mr. Wilson: It is now most unlikely that an MAI will be concluded and it is better to start afresh in another forum, following full and open consultation with interested parties. The Government's support for separate negotiations on investment in the WTO as part of a comprehensive Round of multilateral negotiations has remained unchanged.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the relative merits of conducting negotiations on the proposed multilateral agreement on investment through (a) OECD, (b) WTO and (c) UNCTAD. [59536]

Mr. Wilson: Following the French withdrawal last month from negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment in the OECD, it appears most unlikely that the Agreement will be concluded. There is no prospect of the MAI being negotiated in any other forum. However, the Government—and the EU as a whole—have a long-standing objective of pursuing investment negotiations in the WTO, and have called for investment to be on the agenda of any future multilateral Round of negotiations. Although UNCTAD is not a negotiating forum for rules of this kind, it has been carrying out analytical work on investment issues and the Government would expect it to add its expertise to any WTO negotiation.

Change Bureaux

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate possible price-fixing of commissions charged by change bureaux at Heathrow airport. [59522]

Dr. Howells: Under the competition legislation, the Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for monitoring markets and considering allegations of anti-competitive behaviour, abuse of monopoly power or restrictive trade practices.

If anyone has evidence of anti-competitive behaviour by change bureaux at Heathrow Airport, they should send this to the Director General.

Turkey

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans ministers in his Department have to visit Turkey. [59542]

Mr. Wilson: I am planning to visit Turkey in Spring 1999.

Supermarkets

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to refer the profit margins enjoyed by supermarkets to (a) the Office of Fair Trading and (b) the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement. [60313]

Dr. Howells: Under UK competition legislation, the Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for monitoring markets and considering allegations of anti-competitive behaviour, abuse of monopoly power or restrictive trade practices. The Office of Fair Trading is currently examining the profitability of the major supermarkets in the grocery sector. The decision on whether to make a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission is a matter for the Director General.

Interest Rates

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement about the responses of the credit card companies to the recent reductions in the base interest rate; [59902]

(2) what assessment he has made of the readiness of the different sectors of the financial services industry to reduce interest rates charged by them following reductions in the base interest rate; [59901]

(3) if he will consult with representatives of the credit card companies with a view to securing reductions in the interest rates that they charge; [59903]

(4) if he will introduce legislation to control the interest rates charged by credit card companies. [59904]

Dr. Howells: It is for lenders themselves to determine the interest rates they will charge according to their own commercial judgment.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many projects in receipt of RSA have received offers of regional selective assistance from sources in more than one of England, Scotland and Wales. [59875]

Mrs. Roche: We do not keep a record of such projects and to obtain details would involve disproportionate costs.

Robert Maxwell Companies

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) on what dates the noble Lord Donoughue was interviewed by Department of Trade investigators in connection with Robert Maxwell companies; [57666]

(2) on what dates the right hon. Member for Airdrie and Shotts (Mrs. Liddell) was interviewed by Department of Trade investigators in connection with Robert Maxwell companies. [57665]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 2 November 1998]: Inspectors were appointed under Companies Act powers to investigate and report on the affairs and membership of Mirror Group Newspapers plc. They were asked to look, in particular, at the offers for sale of the company's shares in early 1991.

They have not yet completed their inquiries, which are conducted in private. It is not our policy to comment on which individuals may or may not have been seen by the inspectors.

Royal Observatory

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which body will have responsibility for the former buildings and remaining equipment on the site of the former Royal Observatory at Greenwich following its removal to Herstmonceux Castle. [60102]

Mr. Battle: The National Maritime Museum became responsible for the former Royal Observatory buildings at Greenwich and for much of the historically important scientific equipment they housed, following the removal to Herstmonceux Castle in 1948 of the Royal Greenwich Observatory with its continuing scientific programme.

The Royal Greenwich Observatory moved from Herstmonceux to Cambridge in 1990 and ceased operating there at the end of October 1998 with the transfer of the major elements of its scientific programme and associated equipment to other institutions, including the new Astronomy Technology Centre at Edinburgh, the telescope facilities on the island of La Palma, the University of Cambridge, the Central Laboratory of the Research Councils and the National Maritime Museum. The RGO's remaining historical artefacts have also been returned to Greenwich.

Railtrack

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on manufacturing supplier industries of Railtrack's halt in spending on its track and signalling renewal programme. [58842]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 11 November 1998]: I am not in a position to offer an assessment of Railtrack's ordering policy, or its ongoing infrastructure investment programme. Railtrack is now a private sector, commercial company, and will make its investment decisions in the light of its own priorities and obligations under its network Management Statement, produced for the Rail Regulator, under its Network Licence, and the Government will expect Railtrack to meet these obligations.

Compensation Claims

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the latest year for which figures are available. [59053]

Dr. Howells: In the Financial Year 1997–98, the DTI (including its Executive Agencies) paid a total of £10,590 to its employees or ex-employees in respect of compensation for personal injury. In the same period, no awards were made to employees or ex-employees by the Civil Service Appeals Board or Employment Tribunals in respect of employment protection compensation.

WALES

Farming Subsidies

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the amount of money lost by Welsh farmers as the result of delays in the administration of farming subsidy payment system; and if he will make a statement. [59317]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I appreciate the problems which can be caused but Welsh farmers do not lose their entitlement to subsidies because of delays. The vast majority of payments are made within EC deadlines.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will assess the amount of farming subsidy currently being lost by Welsh farmers as the result of farmers inaccurately filling out subsidy claims; and if he will make a statement. [59318]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: This information is not collected. An average of between 1 and 2% of claims are rejected annually in Wales. These may be rejected for a number of reasons including instances where farmers inaccurately fill out subsidy claims.

Wrexham to Bidston Rail Link

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he plans with North West Rail concerning the future of Sunday services on the Wrexham to Bidston rail link. [59515]

Mr. Hain: None. Sunday services on the Wrexham to Bidston line are supported financially by a consortium of local authorities, and I understand that an agreement is now in place which should ensure the continuation of these services up to and including the Summer 1999 timetable.

Rail Freight

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his recent efforts to transfer freight from road to rail. [59510]

Mr. Hain: The Government's proposals to encourage more freight to transfer from road to rail were set out in the Transport White Paper "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone" and the Welsh Transport Policy Statement "Transporting Wales into the Future". The plan for a European rail freight terminal at Wentloog will provide a major boost to the rail freight industry in Wales. There has also been a significant increase in the level of interest in our Freight Facilities Grant which should result in further projects to transfer freight from road to rail.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many houses have been built by the local authority housing departments in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [59514]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Information on the number of new dwellings completed annually by local authorities may be found in table 2.3 of Welsh Housing Statistics, 1998, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Schools (Delegated Funding)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the response to the Welsh Office consultation paper, Fair Funding: Improving Delegation to Schools; if the Government plan a further consultation document reflecting the response to the initial proposals; what further opportunities local education authorities and others will have to discuss the changes before they are implemented; when any changes are expected to come into force; and if he will ensure that the National Assembly for Wales is able to discuss them before a final decision is taken. [59379]

Mr. Hain: I announced my decisions on the proposals contained in the consultation paper Fair Funding: Improving Delegation to Schools on 23 September. A copy of my press release is in the Library. From April 1999, the new funding framework described in Fair Funding will replace the present systems of Local Management of Schools and grant-maintained school funding which operate under the Education Act 1996. The changes meet our commitment to fairer funding and greater delegation whilst ensuring that local education authorities have the resources to provide those services which have to be delivered centrally.

Since my announcement, the Welsh Office has issued the following documents to LEAs and others for consideration:

- the outline scheme and draft regulations under section 48 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 which contain detailed provisions relating to schemes of delegation;
- draft regulations under section 46 of the Act which define the Local Schools Budget and identify those items that an authority may deduct from the LSB in order to arrive at the amount to be delegated to its school; draft regulations under section 47 of the Act which prescribe the factors, criteria and requirements that LEAs need to take into account when deciding their budget allocation formulae;

a consultation paper on the delegation of funding for school meals; and a consultation paper on the funding of grant-maintained schools in 1999–2000.

Copies of each of these have been placed in the Library.

Under section 138 of the Act, the first regulations to be made under sections 46–48 have to be approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament. The draft regulations will be laid shortly.

We want to make the budgeting of the LEAs for education more transparent; to relate the budget to the role of LEAs in improving standards; and to secure improved delegation to schools. We want schools and local authorities to reap the benefits from the changes as soon as possible. The National Assembly will be able to review what has been done and make changes if it wishes using its secondary legislation powers.

European Development Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department is taking to secure for (a) Gwynedd and (b) other areas in Wales, full development area status in his current review of the assisted areas map. [59378]

Mr. Hain: Derogation 92(3)(a) is the highest level of Assisted Area status. To qualify, a NUTSII area must have per capita GDP of less than 75 per cent. of the EU average. The UK agreed a new set of NUTS boundaries with Eurostat on 29 June. The Government have written to the EC confirming that they wish the new NUTS boundaries to be used in the definition of areas to be assisted under derogation 92(3)(a). Recent ONS GDP figures indicate that the West Wales and the Valleys NUTSII area, which includes Gwynedd, could be eligible for derogation 92(3)(a).

Teachers (Funding)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by county, the names of schools that have received extra funding to employ Key Stage 1 teachers. [59579]

Mr. Hain: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

Economic Inactivity

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the current economic inactivity rates are for each (a) county and (b) constituency in Wales. [59580]

Mr. Hain: It is estimated from the Labour Force Survey that 26 per cent. of the working age population in Wales were economically inactive in the period July-September 1998. The corresponding rate for all people aged 16 or over was 42 per cent. The latest economic inactivity rates for each unitary authority in Wales are for 1996 and are shown in the following table. Inactivity rates are not available at a constituency level.

Long-term Illness

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the incidence is of limiting long-term illness in each of the 22 authorities in Wales [59578]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The latest available information on long-term illness is provided by the 1997 Welsh Household Interview Survey, a sample survey of people living in domestic properties throughout Wales. People living in institutions or communal establishments, such as residential homes for the elderly, are excluded, as are people living in second or holiday homes. The available information is given in the following table:

Flooding

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what help is being offered to those who have suffered from the recent floods. [59612]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: It is recognised that the recent floods caused much distress and that there are those who were not insured. To people receiving income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance, help for flood victims may be available from the Social Fund by way of community care grants, or interest-free budgeting loans. People not on income support may be eligible for a crisis loan. There has been recent guidance to all Social Fund staff on the payment of grants to disaster victims.

Education Funding

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the projected increase in education funding for each county in Wales for each of the next three years. [59582]

Mr. Hain: In July this year, we announced indicative increases in education spending of £110m in 1999–2000, £250m in 2000–01 and £370m in 2001–02. These include increases in local authority spending on education.

Final decisions on allocations for education and other services will be made taking account of the consultation on the comprehensive spending review and will be announced later in the Autumn.

Pwllheli Planning Appeal

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will arrange for the planning appeal public inquiry, scheduled to be heard at Pwllheli on 2 February 1999, to be conducted by an inspector who is proficient in both the Welsh and English languages. [59760]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Chief Planning Inspector has written to the right hon. Gentleman explaining that no bi-lingual Inspector is available to conduct this inquiry but that simultaneous translation facilities will be provided. I will put a copy of his letter in the Library. In error, the Chief Planning Inspector's letter gives the date of the inquiry as 2 February; in fact the date is 9 February.

The provision of Inspectors is a matter for the Planning Inspectorate and the arrangements proposed are consistent with the Inspectorate's approved Welsh Language Scheme.

Midwives (Salary)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which NHS trusts in Wales (a) have and (b) have not implemented the Government's recommendation to ensure that midwives working as the lead professional are awarded a minimum F-grade salary. [59986]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information is not available in the form requested. The Government accepted last year's nurses pay review body recommendation, which urged the Health Departments to ensure implementation of the 1995 agreement, whereby any changes in midwives' roles and responsibilities should be reflected in their grading and pay. A recent questionnaire sent to NHS Trusts seeking information on the grading and role of midwives is still being analysed. A summary of the responses will be submitted as supplementary evidence to the pay review body and will be placed in the Library of the House at the same time.

Water Budget Payment Units

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes in Wales had their water disconnected following the installation of water budget payment units by Hyder in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [59911]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: This information is not available to the company. Its present technology does not enable the interruption of supplies to customers to be monitored directly.

The Government's recent consultation paper "Water Charging in England and Wales—A New Approach" welcomed the High Court ruling that budget payment meters which cut off the flow of water were unlawful. A response to this consultation exercise is to be published by the Government shortly.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes in Wales have water budget units. [59912]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I am advised that Dwr Cymru presently has 24,243 watercard customers in its area of supply. Neither of the other two water supply companies operating in Wales, Severn Trent and Dee Valley Water, offers water budget units to its customers as a means of paying for water.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement; [60148]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [60146]

Mr. Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle), 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government Departments' and Agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector including Local Authorities and the NHS in Wales. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of Departments' plans which have been published in the libraries of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Libraries of the House and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60147]

Mr. Michael: My right hon. Friend the President of the Council presents quarterly reviews to Parliament of progress on tackling all issues, including progress on remedial work, relating to the Millennium date change problem across central Government and the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of Departments' plans, which have been placed in the Libraries of the House and on the Internet. The next review to Parliament will be presented shortly and will provide a report on progress to date in my Department.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60149]

Mr. Michael: My right hon. Friend the President of the Council presents quarterly reviews to Parliament of progress on tackling all issues relating to the Millennium date change problem across central Government and the wider public sector. The next review to Parliament will be presented shortly. In accordance with the response of my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to the PAC recommendations in October, my Department will complete risk assessments and have initial year 2000 business continuity plans in place by the end of January 1999.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the demand for the full-time education and training option under the new deal (a) nationally, (b) by region and (c) for each category of intake during 1998–99 and for each of the next three years. [59188]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The choices will be for the young people to make, but we expect nationally around a fifth to make up the education and training option. This may vary a little regionally.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average cost per 18 to 24 year old of options completed under the new deal for young people (a) nationally, (b) by Pathfinder area and (c) by new deal option. [59197]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The unit costs for each option, which apply to all units of delivery, are as follows:

Voluntary Sector (VS) Option; £2,750

Environment Task Force (ETF) Option; £2,750

Full Time Education and Training (FTET) Option; £2,300

Subsidised Employment Option; £2,070.

Contracts were negotiated around these costs and will be monitored accordingly as new deal clients flow into, and subsequently complete, the options. The actual costs incurred will be monitored and systems are being put in place to do so. Information will be available early next year. Significant numbers will not complete new deal options until the first quarter of next year.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people aged 18 to 25 years have enrolled on the New Deal; and what percentage of these are (a) male, (b) disabled and (c) from ethnic minorities. [59783]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The number of young people joining New Deal for 18–24 years olds between January and the end of September is 165,600. A breakdown of this figure is possible only for the 148,100 starting before the end of August. Of these (a) 72% are male, (b) 13% are disabled, and (c) 13% are from ethnic minorities.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by region those employers which had unfilled vacancies for new deal trainees and the number of vacancies involved in each case at the latest available date. [59185]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 236. Over 29,000 employers have signed up to New Deal leading to 54,000 New Deal job pledges. New Deal participants are also, of course, eligible to apply for other jobs. At present, further employer-related information is unavailable.

Lip Reading Classes

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what measures he is taking to ensure that all people who lose their hearing have the opportunity to attend lip reading classes; [59314]

(2) what advice he has given to local education authorities on (a) the provision of and (b) the charging for lip reading classes; [59315]

(3) what proposals he has to promote courses on lip reading through the Further Education Funding Council. [59316]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State acknowledges the importance of training in lip reading in helping to secure the communication needs of deaf people.

The availability of courses in further education colleges is a matter for local decision, although the Further Education Funding Council has a duty to secure adequacy and sufficiency of provision for which it is responsible; and, in doing so, to have regard to the needs of students with learning difficulties and/or disabilities.

Similarly, the range of adult education courses offered by local authorities is decided locally, and the Secretary of State has issued no guidance on how they might do so. All authorities are, however, required to publish annual statements containing details of the further educational provision that they make for disabled people, and the relevant facilities which are available.

Class Sizes

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the changes which have been made to Form 7 data collection for the calculation of class sizes in England since January. [59193]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Copies of the data collection forms for maintained primary and secondary schools for January 1998 and 1999 have been placed in the Library.

Head Teachers (Secondment)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority the percentage of head teachers on secondment for one term or longer for the most recent year for which the information is available. [59194]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally.

Rural Schools

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors are taken into account when deciding whether to allow the closure of a village or rural school; and what the timescale is for such a decision-making process. [59600]

Ms Estelle Morris: When considering proposals for the closure of a rural school, all factors bearing on the proposals will be taken into account, although the presumption will be against closure. Factors that will be considered will include the overall supply of school places in the area and the likely future demand for places; any points made by the Local Education Authority or by the school proposed for closure or by other schools; the standard of the school that is proposed for closure and the standards and accessibility of alternative schools; the views of parents and other interested parties; the overall effect of the closure on the local community; and the cost implications of the possible options. The aim is to reach a decision within five months of the date of publication of the proposals.

Access to Work

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 137, if a councillor who is disabled and can prove that his activities as a councillor are his main paid employment will be eligible for Access to Work support. [60300]

Ms Hodge: Access to Work provides help for disabled people in, or about to start, paid employment. It is designed to encourage employers to take on, or retain, disabled people by meeting some or all of the extra costs resulting from disability. The aim is to help disabled people in activities from which they earn their living. Activities as a councillor are not themselves regarded as paid employment, but disabled councillors may be eligible for Access to Work support where they are also in paid employment.

Education Action Zones

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each education action zone the financial contribution from business in the form of (a) cash and (b) services or donations in kind. [60268]

Ms Estelle Morris: Each of the first 25 Education Action Zones must raise £250,000 from the private sector in the first year, whether in cash or kind. They are well on the way to achieving this. I will publish a complete set of information as soon as it is available.

Welfare to Work

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what reason underlies the rule that a person who has been in prison has to have been unemployed for two years prior to his or her imprisonment in order to qualify for support under the Welfare to Work Scheme. [59380]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There is no such rule. Anyone leaving prison and claiming JSA will be able immediately to take advantage of a whole range of help including work-based training, trial periods with employers and help with jobsearch. If, after a year, they are still unemployed and claiming JSA, they can, at ES's discretion, begin on the New Deal advisory process when they will, in addition to the provision mentioned before, qualify for the £75 a week employer subsidy and the opportunity to study or train full-time on JSA. All this is regardless of their previous work history. If, however, they have experienced a number of spells of unemployment-related benefits in the past, interrupted only by short periods, they may qualify for the New Deal as soon as they claim JSA.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in developing and publishing a Special Educational Needs Action Programme. [59761]

Ms Estelle Morris: Consultation on the Green Paper, Excellence for all children: meeting special educational needs, generated many thoughtful ideas and comments. In the light of these, and the advice of the National Advisory Group on Special Educational Needs (SEN), we published Meeting Special Educational Needs: A programme of action on 5 November. The Action Programme sets out the practical steps we will take to support and promote developments in SEN over the next few years. Copies were sent to all MPs and are also available in the Library.

Education Funding (Bids)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those additional funds that have been made available to (a) local education authorities and (b) schools through a bidding process since May 1997 indicating for each aspect of funding the numbers of bids received and the number of recipients of funding. [59832]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The information requested is currently being collected and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

National Grid for Learning

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many hits each week were recorded on the National Grid for Learning website between April and October. [59191]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Between the weeks beginning 2 April and ending 4 November, 11,285,679 hits were recorded on the main servers for the prototype National Grid for Learning at BECTA, at an average rate of 364,054 hits per week. This excludes hits on numerous other servers to which the NGfl provides onward direction. A weekly breakdown is provided in the following table.

European Citizenship

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the teaching of European Citizenship in European Community projects in schools. [59808]

Ms Estelle Morris: Under the EU SOCRATES programme, UK schools are co-operating with schools in other European countries on a wide range of subjects of mutual interest. No current project under this programme involving UK schools has European citizenship as its subject.

Science Teachers

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many science graduates completed teacher training broken down by subject into (a) chemistry, (b) physics and (c) biology, (i) in total and (ii) as a percentage of the total graduates completing teacher training in each year between 1993 and 1997. [57079]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of graduates in Chemistry, Physics and Biology and other related sciences who completed a Postgraduate Certificate of Education (PGCE) in England and Wales between 1993 and 1996 and the number expressed as a percentage of all graduates completing a PGCE are given in the table:

Degree subject	1993		1994		1995		1996

General sciences	260	1.7	260	1.6	490	2.8	390	2.3

Figures for 1997 are not yet available. Graduates qualified in more than one subject are counted against each relevant subject listed above.

The £130 million package of measures announced by my department on 27 October includes measures intended to increase the number of science graduates recruited to initial teacher training courses.

Employment Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many Employment Service staff have responsibilities which do not include work on the new deal; [59184]

(2) how many and what proportion of Employment Service staff are currently working exclusively on the new deal. [59187]

Mr. Andrew Smith: New Deal is an integral part of the Employment Service's work. No figures are available which show separately staff working exclusively on new deal.

TREASURY

Paracetamol and Aspirin Poisoning

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many deaths have been recorded in England and Wales from poisoning by paracetamol in each of the past five years; [59634]

(2) how many deaths have been recorded in England and Wales from aspirin poisoning in each of the past five years; and in how many of these cases aspirin had been taken in (a) soluble and (b) dispersible form. [59635]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Donald Gorrie, dated 17 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions on deaths from poisoning by paracetamol and from aspirin.

The information requested is shown in the tables below.

Deaths by year of occurrence from paracetamol poisoning in England and Wales, 1993–97

Year	Deaths mentioning paracetamol
1993	316
1994	275
1995	324
1996	279
1997	335

Figures relate to the number of deaths in England and Wales where paracetamol was mentioned on the death certificate. They do not include deaths with a mention of a paracetamol-containing compound e.g. co-proxamol.

Deaths by year of occurrence from aspirin poisoning in England and Wales, 1993–97

Year	Number of deaths
1993	25
1994	28
1995	19
1996	32
1997	12

It is not possible to determine from the information collected at death registration whether aspirin was taken in soluble or dispersible form.

The deaths were identified as those with an underlying cause of death coded to drug dependence, non-dependent abuse of drugs, accidental poisoning, suicidal poisoning and poisoning of undetermined intent.

The figures for deaths where paracetamol or aspirin was mentioned on the death certificate include deaths attributed to the substance in combination with other drugs. Where two or more substances are listed together, the contribution, if any, of each to the death is unknown. Even where one substance is listed alone there may well be other factors with an important bearing on death.

Moreover, coroners do not always record all specific drugs associated with a death on the death certificate. Therefore, with the information available from death registration, it is only possible to give an approximation of the number of deaths associated with or directly due to any particular substance.

Cancer (Survival Rates)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the five-year survival rate for cancer is in (a) the UK and (b) other OECD countries. [59849]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jonathan Sayeed, dated 17 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary question on the five-year survival rate for cancer.

I refer you to my answer of 5 November to Dennis Skinner MP (Hansard number 233, column 682), which gave information on the survival of cancer patients.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rate of cot death in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998 to date. [60012]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Ronnie Fearn, dated 17 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on rates of cot deaths.

The infant mortality rate[1] for England and Wales due to sudden infant death is as follows:

1996 0.65

1998 Data are not yet available

[1] per 1,000 live births

This information is published in the ONS monitor DH3 98/2 Sudden infant deaths 1993–1997, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Abortions

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of abortions for women in Walthamstow were funded by the NHS in the last three years for which figures are available. [60031]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 17 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on NHS abortions in Walthamstow.

Information on the number of abortions performed on residents of each parliamentary constituency is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The ONS routinely publishes abortion statistics by regions and health authorities (HA). The following table shows the percentage of abortions funded by the NHS for residents of Redbridge and Waltham Forest HA.

Percentage of abortions funded by the NHS for residents of Redbridge and Waltham HA, 1995–97

Year	Percentage
1995	42
1996	34
1997[1]	42

[1] Provisional figure

Figures for each year from 1995 and 1996 are published in the ONS Annual Reference Volumes: Abortion statistics series AB nos. 20–23. Provisional figures for 1997 were published in the ONS Monitor Series AB 98/4 Legal abortions 1997: residents of regions and health authorities on 26 June 1998. These are available in the House of Commons library.

Landfill Tax

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on landfill tax in relation to salt extraction companies. [58629]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 100.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out his estimates of additional public expenditure for each Department on the basis of the same assumptions as underly the calculation that spending on health and education will rise by £40 billion by the end of the Parliament, (a) on the Government's proposed accounting conventions and (b) treating public expenditure and tax expenditures on the working families tax credit in the same way as expenditure on family credit is currently treated. [58599]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 9 November 1998]: Estimates of the cumulative increase in each department's Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for the years 1999–2000 to 2001–02 over and above expenditure planned for the current year, 1998–99, can be calculated from Table B17 in the Pre-Budget Report, which updates Table A4 in the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper. The figure of £40 billion for additional spending on education and health includes estimates of spending in these areas by the Scottish Office, Welsh Office and Northern Ireland departments, and by local authorities, as well as by the Department for Education and Employment and the Department of Health.

Expenditure on family credit in 1998–99 and 1999–2000 is included not in DEL but in Annually Managed Expenditure (AME). Payments of working families tax credit from 1999–2000 onwards will also score in AME, in line with the new European System of Accounts. The cumulative increase in AME for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 over 1998–99 can be calculated from Table B12 of the Pre-Budget Report.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government will press the IMF for (a) the publication of all Article IV reports and (b) greater transparency of the IMF's accounts. [56528]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: In his statement to the Interim Committee of the IMF on 4 October, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the case for publishing in a timely and systematic way all key surveillance and programme documents, including Article IV reports, should be considered. He also said that ways should be found to improve the IMF's own accountability, to ensure that it performs its responsibilities in an open and transparent way that enhances public confidence. As part of that effort, the Chancellor is encouraging the IMF to continue looking for ways to improve the format, readability and clarity of their financial data.

Pensions Mis-selling

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest progress in the review of personal pensions mis-selling. [60382]

Ms Hewitt: Further advances have been made towards completion of the first phase of the review.

On the regulators' advice, a further eight firms who have met their targets for phase 1 of the review have been removed from the Treasury's published list. The eight are Albany Life, Allied Dunbar, Canada Life, Gan, M&E Network, National Westminster, Royal London and Wesleyan Assurance.

Of the 21 firms whose results are set out in the table, only two have resolved less than 75 per cent. of their cases. Seven have now resolved over 90 per cent of their cases.

Substantial progress is now being made with phase 1 of the review. But firms should be clear that it is essential the remaining cases are resolved in line with the regulators' timetable. That means all firms completing phase 1 by the end of December.

The published figures measure firms' progress in assessing whether people are entitled to redress, and, if so, reaching agreement on offers of redress, but that is not the end of the process. It is also important that the redress is delivered as a matter of priority. The regulators will continue to take action against laggards to ensure that investors are properly protected.

Petroleum Revenue Tax

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he plans to make to petroleum revenue tax legislation for pipelines in the North Sea. [60383]

Dawn Primarolo: In the next Finance Bill, the Government intend to make a minor change to legislation introduced in the Finance Act 1994 which helped remove possible distortions in North Sea pipeline competition. This change is to ensure that, for pipelines subject to the 1994 rules, tariffs received for transporting oil and gas to the UK from fields in other countries are taxed in the same way as tariffs for transporting oil or gas from new UK fields. This change will allow these pipelines to compete more fairly for the transportation of non-UK oil or gas.

Excise Duties

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue the Government have obtained from the United Kingdom road haulage industry through (a) vehicle excise duty for heavy goods vehicles and (b) excise duty on diesel since 1 May 1997. [59345]

Ms Hewitt: The amount of revenue raised from VED on Heavy Goods Vehicles from May 1997 to September 1998 was £818 million.

It is not possible to separate the revenue raised from excise duty on diesel paid by the road haulage industry from the total revenue received.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the competitiveness of the United Kingdom road haulage industry of differences in (a) vehicle excise duty on heavy goods vehicles and (b) excise duty on diesel, between EC nations. [59344]

Ms Hewitt: Impact on competitiveness is one of the factors that the Chancellor takes into account when making decisions on Budget measures.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rates of (a) vehicle excise duty on heavy goods vehicles and (b) excise duty on diesel, for each EU country. [59352]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Essex, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 10 November 1998, Official Report, columns 152–53.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the cost of collection of vehicle excise duty as a result of the proposed changes to the duty set out in the pre-Budget statement. [59666]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The cost will depend on the precise options chosen as a result of consultation.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department contributed to the section on economic and monetary union in the European Communities booklet, "Europe in Ten Bints"; what assessment he has made of the contents of the document; and how many copies of that document have been distributed in the UK. [59789]

Ms Hewitt: HM Treasury did not contribute to the section on Economic and Monetary Union in the European Communities publication "Europe in Ten Bints". The document is largely factual. It sets out the institutions of the EU and their origins and identifies some of the challenges now faced by the Union. The document is distributed in the UK by the London office of the European Commission. The Commission estimate that around 4,000 copies have been distributed throughout the UK.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 339, concerning national deposits and share capital in the European Central Bank, if he will tabulate the percentage of the share capital subscribed by each participating state on 1 January 1999. [60112]

Ms Hewitt: In accordance with Article 29 of the ESCB Statute, the formula for the subscription of capital to the ECB is based on Member States' population and GDP. The table gives details of the weightings assigned to national central banks.

The national central banks of participating Member States will be required to pay up the full amount of their subscribed capital in the ECB. In accordance with Article 48 of the Statute of the ESCB, the ECB General Council decided in September that the national central banks of non-participating Member States should pay up 5 per cent. of their shares in the subscribed capital of the ECB. This payment will be made by offset against the proceeds of the liquidation of the EMI.

Exchange Trading Schemes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to expand the experiments in local exchange trading schemes under which unemployed participants in a local area work for each other. [59530]

Mr. Byers: The Government are investigating whether Local Exchange Trading Systems (LETS) can play an effective role in fostering community cohesion and encouraging unemployed people back into economic activity. The use of LETS is one of the issues being taken forward by the "Jobs" Policy Action Team, one of 18 teams set up as a follow up to the Social Exclusion Unit's report on deprived neighbourhoods "Bringing Britain together: a national strategy for neighbourhood renewal". This team is being headed by my right hon Friend, the Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities and will report to the Prime Minister in July 1999.

Monetary Policy Committee

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to measure the effectiveness of the Monetary Policy Committee (i) annually and (ii) over four-year periods; [59528]

(2) if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the Monetary Policy Committee to date. [59583]

Ms Hewitt: The task of the Monetary Policy Committee is to set short-term interest rates to meet the Government's inflation target. The success of the new monetary framework is demonstrated by the fact that inflation is at its target, long-term interest rates are currently at their lowest level for over 35 years and inflation expectations have fallen.

Airports (Borrowing)

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will allow airports owned by local authorities to borrow on normal commercial terms. [59659]

Mr. Byers: Subject to Parliamentary approval, public sector borrowing controls on financially sound local authority airports would be relaxed from 1 April 1999. This will allow qualifying local authority airports to raise development capital on the money markets to cater for growing demand.

Local authority airport companies will have to meet strict financial criteria before the controls on them are relaxed. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has launched a consultation exercise into the qualifying criteria.

Euro Preparations Unit

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the selection of non-civil servants to serve on the Euro Preparations Unit; on what terms the HSBC Midland secondee is serving; what is his area of expertise; how many other candidates were considered; and if additional non-civil servants will be brought in. [59826]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury encourages inward secondments to promote the exchange of ideas and experience. The secondee from HSBC Midland has been seconded for a period of 12 months, with the possibility of extension, and was selected from a field of candidates with extensive experience in providing advice to SMEs. As with other secondees, he remains the employee, and retains the employment terms, of his parent organisation.

European Central Bank

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assets the United Kingdom is obliged to hand over to the European Central Bank; and at what stage. [59823]

Ms Hewitt: In accordance with Article 48 of the Statute of the ESCB, the ECB General Council decided in September that the national central banks of non-participating Member States should pay up 5 per cent. of their shares in the subscribed capital of the ECB. Unless the UK joins the single currency, the UK will not be required to forward any foreign reserves to the ECB.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) his agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60064]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) his agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60066]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. This included the Bank of England. The information requested can be found in the copies of Departments' plans which are available in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library and on the Internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) his agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60067]

Ms Hewitt: Business contingency work is under way in all the Chancellor's Departments and agencies. Existing contingency plans are being reviewed to ensure they cover all the risks the Millennium may bring. This includes embedded chip systems.

Plans include:

manual workarounds;

ensuring key staff are available in the changeover period;

identifying the affect of possible increased demands on business in the period prior to 1 January 2000; reducing the pressure on normal business processes;

backing up key data;

The Chancellor's Departments comprise:

HM Treasury (and Debt Management Office)

Inland Revenue (and Valuation Office)

HM Customs and Excise

Office for National Statistics

Royal Mint

National Savings

National Investment and Loans Office

Government Actuary's Department

Registry of Friendly Societies.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (1) estimate he has made of the effect of the millennium bug on the rate of economic growth; [60168]

(2) if the growth forecasts contained in his Pre-Budget Report take account of the effects of the millennium bug; and if he will make a statement. [60169]

Ms Hewitt: The effect of the Millennium bug on the rate of economic growth is considered in the Pre-Budget Report, paragraph A56 and box A2 ("Impact of the 'Year 2000' problem").

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate what the growth of United Kingdom GDP would be in 1999, on the basis of the rates of growth of exports and imports assumed in the March 1998 Budget. [59625]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 16 November 1998]: Analysis of all the effects on the UK economy of the deterioration in the world economic outlook was given in the Pre-Budget Report.

Age Allowances (Pensioners)

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the current value of the age allowances for pensioners (a) aged 65 years and over and (b) aged 75 years and over in respect of those on a single income of (a) £4,045 to £5,220, (b) £5,221 to £9,320, (c) £9,321 to £15,600 and (d) £15,601 to £17,950 and on joint incomes of (i) £7,545 to £10,075, (ii) £10,076 to £14,175, (iii) £14,176 to £15,895 and (iv) £15,895 to £32,555; [60034]

(2) if he will list the value of the age allowance for single pensioners with joint incomes at five yearly intervals for the last 30 years. [60032]

Ms Hewitt: In 1998–99, for a single pensioner aged 65 to 74 years, the personal allowance is as shown in the table:

Range of income	Personal allowance
For incomes up to the aged income limit (16,200)	5,410
For incomes between 16,201 and 18,630	5,410 less half of the difference between total income and 16,200
For incomes above 18,630	4,195

In 1998–99, for a single pensioner aged 75 years and over, the personal allowance is:

Range of income	Personal allowance
For incomes up to the aged income limit (16,200)	5,600
For incomes between 16,201 and 19,010	5,600 less half of the difference between total income and 16,200
For incomes above 19,010	4,195

For a married pensioner, the value of the allowances available will depend on the ages of the husband and wife and the distribution of income between them.

The historical series are available in the 1997–98 edition of the Tax Benefit Reference Manual which is available in the Library.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the pay bands for each tier of employees at the Financial Services Authority. [60049]

Ms Hewitt: This is a matter for the FSA.

Electronic Commerce

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of a worldwide tax treaty on electronic commerce. [60259]

Ms Hewitt: The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) is the key forum in which discussions are taking place. A framework for the taxation of electronic commerce was presented to Ministers at the OECD conference on electronic commerce in Ottawa last month, and a future work programme endorsed.

United Kingdom Excessive Deficit

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the amount of the excessive deficit for the United Kingdom decided by the Council of the European Union under Article 104C(6) of the Maastricht Treaty and the Treaty of the European Union; what plans Her Majesty's Government have, pursuant to Council Declaration 11393/97 to comply with the Council recommendation to bring that situation to an end; within which time scale; and what assessment he has made of the impact on UK (a) taxation and (b) public expenditure. [60008]

Ms Hewitt: As a result of the Government's prudent approach to fiscal policy, the public finances have improved markedly. The Council Recommendation 11393/97 is concerned with the Council Decision of 26 September 1994 on the existence of an excessive deficit in the UK. This Decision was abrogated on 1 May 1998.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what statutory force attaches to the EU Council's recommendation of 28 October 1997 that the UK Government achieve a Government deficit that is close to balance when an allowance is made for the economy's cyclical position as projected in the convergence programme; and what extra measures will be required to fulfil this. [60109]

Ms Hewitt: The EU Council's recommendation of 28 October 1997 was non-binding.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he took to implement the EU Council recommendation of 28 October 1997 on an excessive Government deficit in the UK; and if he will publish the new convergence programme he submitted in September 1997. [60105]

Ms Hewitt: As a result of the Government's prudent approach to fiscal policy, the public finances have improved markedly. The decision that the UK had an excessive deficit was abrogated by the Council on 1 May 1998. The September 1997 Convergence Programme was sent to the European Legislation Committee of the House of Commons and the Select Committee on the European Communities of the House of Lords on 4 September 1997.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the EU Council's conclusions of 13 October 1997 on the UK Government deficit. [60108]

Ms Hewitt: The conclusions of the ECOFIN of 13 October 1997 on the UK deficit were concerned with the Council Decision of 26 September 1994 on the existence of an excessive deficit in the UK. This Decision was abrogated on 1 May 1998.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the council decision of 26 September 1974 on Britain's excess in deficit was abrogated; when he applied for this to be abrogated; and if he will make a statement on its impact. [60113]

Ms Hewitt: The Council's decision of 26 September 1994 that the UK had an excessive deficit was abrogated on 1 May 1998.

HEALTH

Aspirin and Paracetamol

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the increase in the retail price for aspirin and paracetamol following the new Department of Health guidelines on pack size; and if he will make a statement. [57872]

Ms Jowell: The Department has received a number of letters from hon. Members and from members of the public since the introduction of new pack sizes for most aspirin and paracetamol products which became a statutory requirement on 16 September 1998.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many cases in England and Wales in each of the past five years individuals have had to spend more than one night in hospital because of aspirin poisoning. [59637]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of finished consultant episodes in National Health Service trusts in England with a primary diagnosis of poisoning by aspirin is shown in the table.

Information relating to health services in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons soluble and effervescent products are exempt from the regulations restricting the number which may be sold in one package to 32; and for what reasons dispersible products are not exempt. [59639]

Ms Jowell: The new measures for aspirin and paracetamol are aimed at reducing toxicity in overdose by limiting pack size for solid (tablet and capsule) formulations available over the counter.

Effervescent and some soluble formulations (which contain at least 75 per cent. carbon dioxide-forming ingredients) are exempt from the new pack size restrictions because they are difficult to swallow in quantity. These tablets will foam, making it difficult to take more than a small number. Powders, granules and suppositories are also exempt for similar reasons.

Dispersible and some soluble preparations are not exempt because, although designed to be dissolved in water, they can easily be swallowed in solid form and so there is potential for abuse.

Loughborough General Hospital

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards the completion of a full business case to replace Loughborough's general hospital through a private finance initiative. [57742]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive is expecting to receive a revised full business case from Fosse Health NHS Trust for the scheme to replace Loughborough's General Hospital under the private finance initiative in the next month. It is understood that the best and final offer from the private partner was submitted on 3 November 1998 and the trust are currently considering the case in the light of this information.

Administrative Staff

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many administrative staff were employed by the NHS (a) in May 1997, (b) in May 1998 and (c) in September 1998. [58250]

Mr. Milburn: The number of clerical and administrative staff employed by the National Health Service in England as at 30 September 1997 was 131,860 whole-time equivalents. Figures relating to other times of the year are not collected centrally. Figures for September 1998 are currently being collected and will be published in due course.

Capitation Formula

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes he proposes to the NHS capitation formula. [58343]

Mr. Milburn: There were three changes to the target setting process for 1999–2000 health authority allocations:

- the speciality cost weights in the hospital and community health services age adjustment were updated;
- a new additional need adjustment for prescribing was introduced;
- a supplement to the formula was introduced for the extra costs of interpretation, advocacy and translation services for ethnic minority populations who experience difficulties with the English language.

No further changes will be made to the target setting process at least until 2001–02. This is because on 10 November 1998 we announced a wide ranging review of the formula.

Residential Homes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many unannounced inspections of (a) local authority and (b) private sector residential homes for the elderly took place in 1997; and how many and what percentage of the inspection reports were critical of the way in which the elderly residents were treated. [58504]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally. However, my hon. Friend may like to refer to the Social Services Inspectorate publication—Local Authority Social Services Department Registration and Inspection Units Key Data 1996–97—copies of which are available in the Library, for limited information on the number of inspections carried out.

Sensory Loss

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned into loss of (a) smell and (b) taste, as a result of (i) sinusitis and (ii) influenza [59149]

Ms Jowell: The Department's policy research programme and the central National Health Service research and development programmes are not currently supporting any such research.

The Medical Research Council (MRC), which is funded by the Office of Science and Technology, commissions most of the Government's research into bio-medical and clinical issues. The MRC is always open to new sound scientific proposals in competition with other applications. In deciding priorities and taking decisions, the MRC takes account of the Department's priorities, together with input from the health research community in general. The Department's policy research programme supports the formulation of health and social care policy and the NHS programmes support the needs of the health service. Records are not held centrally of all research carried out in the NHS.

Dentists (Retirement)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have retired before retirement age in each of the last five years; and how many retired on health grounds. [58746]

Mr. Milburn: The number of general dental practitioners retiring before retirement age in England and Wales and the number of these retiring on health grounds are shown in the table.

Year ending March	Early retirements	Of which on grounds of ill-health
1994	141	40
1995	200	106
1996	212	80

Ministerial Visit (West Byfleet)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng), visited the West Byfleet Health Centre; and if he gave prior notification to the local hon. Member. [58807]

Mr. Hutton: My hon. Friend the Member for Brent, South visited West Byfleet on 14 October 1998. Ministers are fully aware of the need to notify hon. Members of their intention to visit their constituencies. I understand that on this occasion prior notification was not given. I apologise for any embarrassment and inconvenience caused to the hon. Member.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of NHS computer systems which will be millennium-compliant on 1 April 1999. [58846]

Mr. Milburn: The precise information requested is not held centrally. National Health Service organisations are making good progress to ensure that their systems are compliant or that they have contingency arrangements in place by 30 September 1999.

Hospitals (Doncaster)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of operating theatre time in NHS hospitals in the Doncaster area, is devoted to the treatment of (a) waiting list patients, (b) emergencies, (c) other NHS patients, and (d) other non-NHS patients, for the most recent period for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [59308]

Mr. Milburn: The central collection of returns relating to theatre use has been discontinued. Since 1994, collection of this data within districts has been a matter for local discretion. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the Chairman of the Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Montagu Hospital National Health Service Trust, Mr. David Kitson.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what number of waiting list patients were treated by hospitals in the Doncaster area as (a) day patients and (b) in-patients for the years (a) 1977, (b) 1987 and (c) 1997, respectively; and if he will make a statement. [59309]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the number of patients treated by hospitals is available only from 1990–91. The table shows the available information for Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Montagu Hospital National Health Service Trust and Doncaster Healthcare Trust for 1996–97. 1997–98 data are not yet available.

NHS Trusts

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance he has issued to NHS trusts about setting goals for the representation of (a) women, (b) people from ethnic minorities and (c) people with disabilities in the workforce; and if he will make a statement; [59361]

(2) what guidance he has issued to NHS trusts on monitoring and evaluating information collected about the (a) gender, (b) ethnic origin and (c) disability of job applicants. [59360]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 12 November 1998]: We have recently issued the first ever human resource strategic framework for the National Health Service. One of the strategic aims of Working Together: Securing a Quality Workforce for the NHS is that the NHS should have a quality workforce, in the right numbers, with the right skills and diversity, organised in the right way to deliver the Government's service objectives for health and social care. The framework commits trusts to demonstrate year on year progress towards achieving a workforce that is fully representative of the community it serves, at all levels of the organisation. Further guidance on equal opportunities monitoring will be issued in 1999 as part of the work on implementing the human resources framework and integrating it with performance management systems within the NHS.

Mid Essex Hospital Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 1998, Official Report, columns 1180–81, what are the latest figures for the number of people in the Mid Essex Hospital NHS Trust area waiting to see a consultant for (a) 13 to 25 weeks and (b) 26 or more weeks. [59546]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 22 October 1998, Official Report, columns 1180–81. This provides the latest published figures for outpatient waiting times. Figures for the end of September 1998 will be available shortly.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 1998, Official Report, column 1180, how many people in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area had been waiting for treatment for 12 months or more at the latest date for which figures are available. [59905]

Mr. Milburn: At Mid Essex Hospital National Health Service Trust, a total of 1,155 people have been waiting for treatment for 12 months or more as at 30 September 1998.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the total number of people in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area awaiting treatment on (a) 31 March 1997 and (b) 30 September 1998. [59867]

Mr. Milburn: Mid Essex Hospital National Health Service Trust's total waiting list was 8,391 as at 31 March 1997, and was 11,615 as at 30 September 1998.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his officials have concluded their review of the impact of the introduction of the VAT Order SI 1997/2744; and if he will make a statement. [59895]

Mr. Milburn: Officials have concluded their review of the impact of the introduction of the Value Added Tax Order Statutory Instrument 1997/2744.

They are now working closely with Her Majesty's Treasury officials to finalise the administrative procedures to ameliorate the effect of the VAT Order on the supply of certain renal and cancer drugs and on the supply of pharmaceutical products by retail pharmacists to residents of nursing homes.

The VAT Order also affected certain incontinence supplies. A review of continence policy is currently underway which is intended to ensure that the most appropriate and effective continence services are being planned and delivered.

Nurse Training

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce (a) part-time and (b) term-time nurse training to assist mature students with family responsibilities. [59331]

Mr. Milburn: We encourage and support the provision of part-time, flexible training. We have announced plans to expand on the existing provision of part-time and flexible pre-registration nursing and midwifery diploma programmes by up to 200 places in 1998–99 and 1999–2000 and by up to 500 places in 2000–01.

Psychiatric Wards

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the number of temporary staff employed on psychiatric wards; and if he will make a statement. [59440]

Mr. Hutton: None. The Government are committed to securing the mental health staff needed to provide high quality services and are therefore increasing training levels for new health professionals and investing in significant additional resources on new initiatives to improve recruitment, retention and return to practice of trained staff.

Influenza Vaccinations

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued to local health authorities about the categories of patients who are entitled to receive a free influenza vaccination. [59532]

Ms Jowell: Influenza immunisation is recommended on the National Health Service for all those in whom the disease is more likely to be a serious illness, so immunisation is recommended for:

- those with chronic respiratory, heart or renal disease, diabetes and those who are immunosuppressed
- those living in long stay residential accommodation
- from this year, all those aged 75 and over.

The final decision on whether influenza immunisation is offered rests with the individual's doctor/medical practitioner.

The Chief Medical Officer (CMO) and Chief Nursing Officer (CNO) wrote to doctors and nurses advising them of this extension in policy in a joint letter in August 1998 (Personal Letter/CMO98/4 Personal Letter/CNO/98/6) and a Health Services Circular (HSC 1998/140) was sent to health authorities. The Department has issued a poster and updated its two leaflets about influenza: 'What should I do about flu' and 'Flu vaccination', available from surgeries and health centres. Copies are available in the Library.

Private Sector Surgery

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the surgical procedures carried out during the last quarter for which published data are available on NHS patients who had been waiting more than 12 months for surgery were carried out in the private sector at the cost of NHS trusts and health authorities. [59585]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mixed Wards

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 141, whether the NHS Executive has issued guidance to NHS trusts only in accordance with the Secretary of State's assurance in the House on 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 134, that he would put a stop to the creation of any new mixed wards in NHS psychiatric units. [59643]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service Executive has recently issued guidance to health authorities and trusts about the elimination of mixed sex hospital accommodation, including psychiatric units. The guidance re-emphasises the importance of providing safe facilities for patients in hospital who are mentally ill and which safeguard their privacy and dignity. Guidance to the NHS on the use of capital allocations will ensure capital is invested to eliminate mixed sex accommodation.

Physical Activity (Children)

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the Department for Education and Employment concerned with ensuring that all children and young people have the opportunity of at least one hour of physical activity per day. [59698]

Ms Jowell: The Department collaborates closely with the Department for Education and Employment to develop ways of increasing levels of physical activity among children and young people. As part of the healthy schools initiative, both Departments are working on plans to develop an active and safe travel to school challenge. This work complements the "Young and Active" report, which I launched in September, and which set out a framework for improving physical activity levels among children aged between 5 and 18.

Mental Health (Leeds)

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) the Audit Commission's comparison between Leeds and other major cities in respect of expenditure per head on mental health services and (b) the recent net closure of eight acute psychiatric beds in Leeds prior to the reprovision of community alternatives; and why there was not formal public consultation over the closure. [59763]

Mr. Hutton: Decisions about mental health care and the use of the increased resources made available by this Government are best taken at local level, because it is at local level that people's needs are best known and where services can be tailored to them. It is the responsibility of Leeds Health Authority to assess the health care needs of their population, to draw up strategies and commissioning plans in collaboration with local people, general practitioners and other organisations, and to secure a range of hospital and community health services to meet those needs.

The Leeds Community and Mental Health Trust is currently developing a modernisation programme that includes a range of capital developments to reprovide mental health services in Leeds. The introduction of these schemes will allow the closure of the existing facilities which are outdated and in much need of replacement. The health authority has discussed its plans with the community health council.

New-variant CJD

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the information collected under paragraphs 11(1) and 11(3) of Schedule 9 to the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988 allows his Department to trace other patients on the same operating list as the patient carrying the infective agent of new-variant CJD at Torbay; and if the hospital concerned has listed the employees involved in the operation in accordance with these paragraphs. [59978]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 16 November 1998]: No. The patient's diagnosis was unknown at the time and no such Control of Substances Hazardous to Health record was kept.

Sussex Ambulance Service NHS Trust

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons he did not re-appoint Mr. Martyn Long CBE DL for a second term as Chairman of the Sussex Ambulance Service NHS Trust. [60045]

Mr. Milburn: Mr. Long's application was considered alongside other possible candidates according to the Department's procedures for the appointment of National Health Service board members, details of which are available in the Library.

It is made clear to all those invited to serve on National Health Service boards that the appointment is for a set term of office, and there can be no presumption of re-appointment.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued on how pharmacists should be represented in primary care groups. [60191]

Mr. Milburn: Primary Care Groups will need to draw upon all the experience and expertise of their stakeholders to develop and implement local policies. Pharmacists are recognised as important stakeholders in the community.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, columns 87–88, concerning Primary Care groups, if he will set out the ways in which elected members of local authorities will have an enhanced opportunity to influence the development and implementation of health care arrangements. [60298]

Mr. Milburn: The local strategy for improving health and healthcare will be set through the Health Improvement Programme (HImP). The development of the HImP will be led by the health authority in partnership with the local National Health Service, relevant local authorities and the wider local community. This offers the opportunity for the local community and its leaders e. g., local Councillors, to influence the strategy. This approach will be underpinned, subject to Parliamentary approval, by new statutory duties of partnership between NHS bodies and local authorities to promote the health and wellbeing of their local populations.

EC Health Council

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the outcome of the EC Health Council meeting on 12 November. [60471]

Ms Jowell: I attended the meeting of the Health Council on 12 November in Brussels, on behalf of the United Kingdom.

The Council adopted its common position on the Commission's proposal for an injury prevention programme. The Council discussed the development of future public health policy and adopted conclusions which stressed the importance of better prioritisation and co-ordination of public health activities by the Community to complement action taken by the Member States. The Commission reported on progress in combating smoking within the Community and announced that it intended to propose measures on the tar and nicotine content of cigarettes and labelling of packets; it also intended to bring forward measures on smuggling, additives, and the prohibition of "light" and "mild" markings on cigarettes. Conclusions which stressed the need for a more focused approach were adopted on the European Union-United States Task Force. The Council agreed to continue to consider TSEs (Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies) at each meeting and asked the Commission to provide it with a detailed annual report on the issue. The Council noted a progress report on the draft Recommendation on limitation of exposure of the general public to electromagnetic fields. A response to the Commission's report on the revision of the homeopathic medicines Directives was also agreed. The Council welcomed the recommendations of the conference held in Copenhagen on 9–10 September 1998 on "The Microbial Threat". It also discussed co-operation between the European Union and the World Health Organisation. The International Therapeutic Solidarity Fund—a French Government initiative to provide anti-retroviral therapies to people with HIV/AIDS in developing countries—was also discussed. A discussion on the outcome of the conference on "Quality in Health Care" held by the Austrian Presidency on 24 July 1998 was held over lunch.

Training Support Programme

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources he will make available to the Training Support Programme (TSP, Specific Grant) for local authorities in the next three years. [60472]

Mr. Hutton: The training support programme budget for 1998–99 is £35.45 million. It is set to rise to £39.0 million for 1999–2000 and there are planning figures of £42.5 million and £44.5 million for the two subsequent years. This provides a sound basis on which local authorities can plan their local expenditure.

Joint Procedures (NHS and Personal Social Services)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 178, concerning National Priorities Guidance, what informal consultations were undertaken prior to its publication. [60297]

Mr. Hutton: The Government sought the personal advice and views of a range of key people from professional, National Health Service and social services organisations prior to the publication of Modernising Health and Social Services: National Priorities Guidance 1999/00–2001/02.

Continence Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the current level of continence care provision. [60272]

Mr. Hutton: On 2 September 1998 we announced the details of the review of continence policy which involves representatives from the health service, social services and voluntary organisations. This review will lead to updated guidance which we plan to issue in Spring 1999.

Betaferon

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation his Department has made of the recently published research into the beneficial effects of Betaferon; and what plans he has to issue revised guidance. [60271]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has considered the results from the recently published research on treatment of multiple sclerosis with Betaferon (Beta-Interferon-1b). The research adds to the growing body of data about this medicine, but there are still many unanswered questions about its appropriate use in both relapsing-remitting and secondary progressive multiple sclerosis. The Department will be commissioning new research to address this. When the results of the research are available, we will issue revised guidelines which will take into account this and all other soundly based research evidence.

Fireworks

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were treated for injuries caused by fireworks in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [60265]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The DTI's annual census of firework injuries is conducted over a four week period taking in the run-up to 5 November and a few days afterwards. In the last ten years the number of people treated in Accident and Emergency departments in Great Britain during this period was as follows:

Year	Number
1988	877
1989	800
1990	805
1991	723
1992	942
1993	1,058
1994	1,574
1995	1,530
1996	1,233
1997	908

No reliable estimates of injuries outside this period can be made because the numbers involved are too small to be extrapolated from data in the Home Accident Surveillance System.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59728]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has made provision for subsidised nursery places and an on-site holiday playscheme in London, and an on-site nursery and a holiday playscheme, funded jointly with the Benefits Agency, in Leeds. Childcare vouchers are available to staff in North and South Thames Regional Offices of the National Health Service Executive. The NHS Pensions Agency provides a subsidy towards the cost of a holiday playscheme for its staff. The Department also provides a range of family friendly policies including 16 weeks' paid maternity leave; extended career breaks (up to 5 years); 5 days' paternity leave; and other measures to help staff balance work and family life including jobshare, part-time working, homeworking and term-time only working.

The table shows the cost to parents of provision. Information on the use of facilities is not available in the form requested. The places available are set out in the table. The number of staff in post in the Department is 4,768.

A review of the Department's current childcare provision is underway.

DH: Childcare provision and cost to parents: 1996–97 and 1997–98

	Playscheme (cost to parent per child)	Subsidised nursery (cost to parent per child)	Childcare vouchers (value of vouchers)
London	24 place on-site holiday playscheme 5–12 years (£6 per day)	25 subsidised places (50% of costs of £105-£169)
Leeds	40 place off-site holiday playscheme 5–14 years shared with Benefits Agency (£6.50 per day until 1/98, then £8.00 per day)	30 place on-site nursery shared with Benefits Agency (£84.45 per week)
NHSPA	c.20 places taken up at off-site holiday playscheme (£5.50 per day)
North Thames Regional Office			c.22 x £25 vouchers, for those in post at 1/4/96, one per family per week 0–5 years
South Thames Regional Office			As above

Notes:
1. The Department' staff in London also had access to the Westminster holiday playscheme. Around 4 parents took up places in each scheme.
2. During 1996–97 and part of 1997–98, the Department's staff had use of the Childcare Solutions telephone helpline. This provided information and advice on childcare in local areas free of charge and was used by 70 staff.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 33, what assurances his Department has received from the Israeli Government that no new building permits will be issued for Jewish housing units in (a) Gaza and (b) the Occupied West Bank. [59559]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received no further assurances from the Israeli government that no new building permits will be issued for Jewish housing units in Gaza and the West Bank. But the Israeli Cabinet endorsed the Wye River Memorandum on 12 November and we expect the Israeli government to abide by the letter and the spirit of the agreement, which prohibits either side from taking any steps to change the status of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. We have made it clear to Israel that we regard the initiation and encouragement of settlement activity as a violation of international law and an obstacle to peace, and we recently informed them of our concern at the issuing of tenders for construction at Har Homa in East Jerusalem.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to Israel on the implementation of the Wye Accord. [60163]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has written twice to the Israeli Prime Minister since the Wye Memorandum was signed in Washington on 23 October to congratulate him on this achievement, and to stress the importance of swift implementation. Our Ambassador in Tel Aviv has also been in touch with key political contacts in Israel to express our concern at the delays in implementation. We trust that, following Cabinet approval of the Wye agreement on 11 November, full implementation will begin in accordance with the timeline established at Wye.

Foreign Policy Centre

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the annual budget of the Foreign Policy Centre; what proportion is charged to public funds; and if he will list the source of private funding. [57585]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Foreign Policy Centre is an independent foreign policy institute. The Centre's annual budget and contributions are matters for the Foreign Policy Centre. None of the Foreign Policy Centre's budget is charged to public funds.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the proposed annual salary of the Director Designate of the Foreign Policy Centre. [57584]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Foreign Policy Centre is an independent foreign policy institute. The Director Designate's salary is a matter for the Foreign Policy Centre.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the advantages of the policy input available from the Foreign Policy Centre relative to that from (a) his Department's (i) Policy Board, (ii) Policy Planning Unit, (iii) Research Department, (iv) High Commissioners, Ambassadors and overseas missions and (v) London-based desk offices, (b) his special advisers, (c) the intelligence services, (d) other Government departments, (e) the Royal Institute of International Affairs and (f) other academic institutions for the study of international affairs. [57590]

Mr. Robin Cook: It is established practice for Foreign Office officials and Ministers to have contact with a wide range of policy institutes and NGOs and to consider their views when developing policy. These contacts occur at all levels of the Foreign Office and are an important and valued part of the policy making process. Policy institutes and NGOs contribute to a wider public debate which can also influence policy. The nature of these contacts means it is not possible to assess the influence of one particular policy institute in isolation from other institutes.

Russia

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussion he has had with EU member countries about reducing illegal currency transfers from Russia to western banking institutions. [59276]

Ms Quin [holding answer 10 November 1998]: There have been frequent discussions of Russia's economic problems and how the EU might best assist Russia to overcome them at meetings of the General Affairs Council, most recently on 9 November. During these discussions co-operation with Russia in fighting organised crime, including financial crime, has been discussed.

Through its TACIS programme, the EU funds training for Russian banking staff to help them identify evidence of money laundering and take action to prevent it.

An existing EU money laundering directive requires member states to implement legal measures to prevent criminal funds from being laundered by their financial institutions.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what public access there is to European Council documents pertaining to the discussions after the Amsterdam IGC on interpreting the treaty negotiations relating to the opt-in to the Schengen Agreement by opt-out states. [59807]

Ms Quin: Members of the public may apply for access to any Council document under the provisions of Council Decision 93/731/EC of 20 December 1993. Applications are considered on a case-by-case basis.

The two draft Decisions identifying and incorporating the Schengen acquis have been made available to Parliament.

EU Youth Forum

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the meeting by a Minister from his Department with the European Youth Forum on 14 June; [59799]

(2) what representations (a) he and (b) his Ministers have received from the European Union Youth Forum as part of its EU-funded lobbying activities. [59992]

Ms Quin: My predecessor, the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson), met representatives from the European Youth Forum on 14 June 1998 in the margins of the Cardiff European Council. The EYF briefed him on the conclusions of a conference which they had held from 11 to 14 June in Cardiff, entitled 'Fighting for our Future'. A central theme of the conference was youth and employment.

People's Europe '98 Conference

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of speakers at People's Europe '98 (a) endorsed and (b) opposed closer European integration; and what measures he will take to ensure balance in future conferences. [60000]

Ms Quin: Decisions on speakers for the People's Europe '98 conference were the responsibility of the organisers. At the Government's suggestion the organisers sought to ensure that a wide range of speakers from across Europe were invited, representing diverse points of view.

Visa Applications

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for visit visas have been refused at the High Commission in Lagos; and what proportion of the total applications this represents, in each of the last four years, and in the current year to date. [60027]

Mr. Fatchett: The information requested by my hon. Friend is as follows:

British High Commission—Lagos

Year	Number of non-settlement visas issued	Number of refusals	Refusals as percentage of total applications processed
1998[1]	30,668	5,877	16.1
1997	27,101	8,681	24.2
1996	33,249	7,963	19.3
1995	23,787	8,165	25.6
1994	31,202	10,232	24.7

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60076]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60078]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published in the Library. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible for millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60077]

Mr. Fatchett: The year 2000 problems which have arisen in the FCO are non compliant hardware, software and operating systems in the following:

Office automation systems

Business-critical database applications

Telecommunications

Embedded systems.

All the above have been classed as high priority.

The Agency for which the FCO has responsibility had a problem with its telecommunication. This is being corrected.

Information on the FCO's progress in tackling these problems was given in the FCO's last quarterly update of its plan, which will be found in the Library. My right hon. Friend the President of the Council will announce the results of the next quarterly review shortly. The updated plan will be placed in the Library and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60079]

Mr. Fatchett: The FCO plans to have all its business-critical IT and embedded systems compliant before the millennium either by correction or by replacement.

The greatest risk has been identified as the limited time available to replace systems around the world. Contingency plans have been drafted to ensure workarounds can be implemented wherever replacements cannot be accomplished in time.

As requested by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council, the FCO will have completed risk assessments, and will have initial year 2000 business continuity plans in place, by the end of January 1999.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to his oral statement of 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 708, what evidence he received from (a) the CIA and (b) other sources, to support his statement that Saddam Hussein had imported specialist surgical equipment for cosmetic surgery on those around him; [60275]

(2) what evidence he received from (a) the CIA and (b) other sources to support the statement he made at his recent press conference that Saddam Hussein had imported surgical equipment for breast enlargement operations. [60276]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Iraqi Government have submitted Distribution Plans of goods to be supplied under the United Nations "Oil for Food" programme which include Silicone breast implants (sizes 4, 5, 6 and 7), a Liposuction machine (worth over 16,000 USD) and a teeth whitening laser worth (126,000 USD). These ignore the fact that the purpose of the "Oil for Food" programme is to provide essential humanitarian goods to those who need them in Iraq. The UN would not of course approve these items at the expense of more pressing needs. Saddam Hussein's perverse priorities are to provide luxury goods for his cronies rather than food and medicine for suffering children.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response has been sent to the Russian Foreign Minister about his objections to military action against Iraq. [60161]

Mr. Fatchett: We have made clear our own position on the use of military force in the Security Council and in public statements. We have discussed Iraq regularly with the Russians, among others.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the objectives of a possible air attack on Iraq. [60162]

Mr. Fatchett: The ultimate aim of our policy, including any use of military force against Iraq, has always been the full implementation of all relevant Security Council resolutions.

Burma

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to increase aid to the Karen refugees in Burma. [59551]

Mr. Fatchett: In recent years, the Government have channelled support for refugees on the Thai-Burma border primarily through the Burma Border Consortium. In 1998, the Department for International Development has provided over £250,000 for the Consortium. DfID is considering a request from the Consortium for further support in 1999.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to bring pressure to bear on the SPDC regime in Burma to implement a ceasefire and enter into political dialogue with the Karen people. [59552]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned at the political situation in Burma and the plight of the ethnic minorities. We consistently exert pressure on the regime to enter into substantive dialogue with the different parties concerned to reach a solution and an end to fighting. Our efforts include support for UN involvement and a recent strengthening of the EU Common Position.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what facilities exist on St. Helena for citizens to be able to have access to files relating to them. [59433]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 12 November 1998]: St. Helenians have no right of access to files relating to them such as criminal records, benefit payments and passport applications. Public Servants are subject to open appraisal but do not have right of access to their files.

If my hon. Friend has any specific concerns, I would invite him to raise this issue with this office directly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Seals

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of each type of seal found in United Kingdom waters, the total weight of fish consumed by these animals each year and the weight of each prey species this represents; and of these prey species, which, and in what numbers, weights or quantities, are exploited by (a) commercial fisherman and (b) anglers. [59032]

Mr. Morley: 1997 estimates (1996 for Northern Ireland) indicate UK populations of some 115,000 grey seals and 50,000 common seals.

Based on 1985 diet data it is estimated that in 1997 232,000 tonnes of fish was consumed by grey seals and 55,000 tonnes of fish by common seals. The predominant prey species were sandeels, cod and whiting. A significant proportion of the fish taken by seals are likely to have been juveniles which, given their high rates of natural mortality, may not in any case have reached a size at which they would be available to either commercial fishermen or anglers.

Mink

Angela Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of recent reports of the use of carbon dioxide gas for the gassing of mink in fur farms; and if he will ban the use of such gas as a method of killing mink. [59085]

Mr. Morley: A recent article (Veterinary Record, 26 September) concluded that under experimental conditions mink detect high concentrations of carbon dioxide gas and avoid them when given the opportunity to express a preference. It suggests that alternative methods of killing may be preferable on welfare grounds, but acknowledges that the degree of aversion to other methods of killing has not been studied. The matter needs to be considered at the European Community level, as the permitted methods of killing which include carbon dioxide gas, are specified in EU regulations. We shall ensure that this new report is considered by the European Commission: however, the Government are in any case committed to banning the farming of animals for their fur.

Genetically Modified Food

Ms Drown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Government have to commission research into the direct and indirect effects of releasing genetically modified organisms into the open. [59224]

Mr. Rooker: In addition to studies currently underway or about to be commissioned, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to her on 12 November 1998, Official Report, column 316. We recently announced that the Government will be carrying out farm-scale evaluations of the first commercial plantings of genetically modified crops for ecological effects along with commercial plantings of conventional crops.

European Fund for Fisheries Enforcement

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much the United Kingdom has been awarded in 1998 to date from the European Fund for Fisheries Enforcement; and if he will list (a) the projects that will receive assistance, indicating the amount of grant (i) applied for and (ii) received, and (b) those projects that were put forward but not accepted. [59557]

Mr. Morley: Information about Community assistance towards fisheries enforcement expenditure awarded to the United Kingdom in 1998 to date under the provisions of Commission Decision 98/439/EC is set out in the tables.

Decisions on the eligibility of planned expenditure, the rate of Community financial contribution, and the conditions to which contributions may be subject are determined by the Commission in accordance with the procedure laid down in Article 18 of Council Regulation (EEC) No. 3760/92.

Sea Fisheries Committees

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what money has been allocated to each of the United Kingdom's sea fisheries committees for 1998–99. [59558]

Mr. Morley: Sea Fisheries Committees are committees of local government. They are funded by their constituent local authorities. No funds are provided directly by central Government.

The Statutory Instruments establishing each committee specify the proportionate contribution that each constituent local authority has agreed to make towards its committee's costs.

Meat (Hygiene and Inspection)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will publish comparisons of the extent to which the United Kingdom and other EU countries use (a) veterinary surgeons and (b) meat inspectors in the public health inspection of the meat slaughter process; [58449]

(2) if he will publish comparisons of the different qualifications for (a) meat inspectors and (b) veterinarians involved in meat inspection in Britain and other EU countries. [58450]

Mr. Nick Brown: Harmonised EC meat hygiene rules, which apply equally in all EU Member States, lay down detailed and specific requirements for the supervision of licensed abattoirs by official veterinarians (ie fully qualified veterinary surgeons). The rules also specify the duties and responsibilities of such official veterinarians, including in respect of ante mortem and post mortem veterinary inspections. Council Directive 78/1026/EEC provides for the mutual recognition of the qualifications of veterinarians applying in different EU Member States.

The meat hygiene rules also provide for official veterinarians to be assisted in the performance of certain, specified, tasks by 'auxiliaries' whose qualifications must comply with the minimum qualifications laid down. In Great Britain the role of such 'auxiliaries' is performed by MHS Meat Hygiene Inspectors. My Department has no information on the qualifications of 'auxiliaries' employed on meat hygiene work in other EU Member States.

Information obtained by my Department recently about the implementation in other Member States of the veterinary supervision requirements laid down in EC meat hygiene rules shows that supervision levels and frequencies vary between States as one would expect. It does not support the claim that supervision levels in Great Britain premises are significantly higher then in other member States. I have arranged for this information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish comparisons of the proportion of farm gate prices for meat in the United Kingdom and other EU countries that results from meat inspection. [58451]

Mr. Nick Brown: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish comparisons of the quality and cost of meat hygiene standards across the EU. [58448]

Mr. Nick Brown: Information about the quality and costs of enforcing meat hygiene standards in Great Britain is set out in the Annual Report and Accounts of the Meat Hygiene Service.

It is the European Commission's responsibility to ensure that Member States comply with their Community obligations as laid down in harmonised EC rules. The Commission's Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) carries out regular programmes of inspection visits to all Member States. If necessary, the Commission will take infraction proceedings against those Member States whose arrangements are considered inadequate. Reports of FVO visits are published on the Commission's website on the Internet (http://europa.eu.int/comm/dg24/health/vi/reports) and a list of such reports will appear in MAFF's Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report and BSE Enforcement Bulletin, both of which are published monthly.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to review the impact of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 within one year of its implementation date. [58237]

Mr. Nick Brown: In common with all legislation, we will keep the impact of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 under review.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the differences between the methods of implementing the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 in different EU countries; [58239]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the cost to consumers of compliance with the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations in 1998 in each EU Member State; [58235]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the cost of compliance with the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 in each Member State of the EU. [58241]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 implement in Great Britain the provisions relating to charges for meat hygiene/welfare inspections of Council Directive 85/73/EEC (as amended) on the financing of veterinary inspections and controls.

The level, method of calculation and compliance costs of such charges in other EU countries are matters for the relevant competent authority in each Member State. It is the European Commission's responsibility to ensure that individual Member States comply with their Community obligations as laid down in Directive 85/73/EEC.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment his Department has made of the cost to British industry of the implementation of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998; [58240]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 on small and medium enterprises. [58232]

Mr. Nick Brown: A Regulatory Appraisal in respect of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 has been prepared by my Department and will be placed in the Library of the House. The Regulatory Appraisal includes an assessment of the likely compliance costs for business of the Regulations and the likely impact on small businesses.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations he has received about the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 since they were implemented. [58233]

Mr. Nick Brown: My Department has received a small number of representations about the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 since they came into force.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the European Commission reasoned opinion document on which the interpretation of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 is based. [58238]

Mr. Nick Brown: No. The Reasoned Opinion is the formal legal document in which the European Commission has set out its case against the UK Government in respect of our failure to implement fully the veterinary supervision requirements laid down in EC meat hygiene rules. Such formal communications between the European Commission and Member State Governments are confidential and not for publication.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the effect on prices received by livestock farmers of the implementation of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998. [58242]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) (Charges) Regulations 1998 relate to charges levied by the Meat Hygiene Service in Great Britain on licensed slaughterhouses, cutting plants and cold stores in respect of the hygiene/welfare inspections carried out in those premises. The prices received by livestock farmers for animals slaughtered in licensed slaughterhouses are a commercial matter for those involved.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60141]

Mr. Morley: The primary aim of the Ministry's millennium programme is to ensure that effective countermeasures are implemented to prevent any Year 2000 date-related problems from occurring. However, a formal risk management methodology has been introduced in core-MAFF and its Agencies which will identify the need for contingency plans where countermeasure action may not be fully effective.

Risk assessment will be completed and initial contingency plans will be in place by the end of January 1999; these will be fully developed by mid-1999, with key elements tested in the same timescale.

Non-departmental public bodies are being advised to progress contingency planning and their progress will be monitored.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement; [60140]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [60138]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government Departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of Departments' plans which have been published in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the Internet.

Rabbits and Rodents

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the annual economic loss sustained by the agricultural sector from the activities of (a) rabbits, (b) voles, (c) rats and (d) mice. [57923]

Mr. Morley: The damage caused by rabbits to agriculture is estimated at £40 million per annum. An assessment has not been made of the economic loss to agriculture caused by voles, rats and mice, but damage caused by small rodents can be considerable.

Teachers' Pay Settlements

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the pay settlements which have been reached for teaching staff in institutions of higher and further education in Scotland in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 and (d) 1998–99. [56955]

Mrs. Liddell: Pay settlements for teaching staff in higher education institutions are set out in the table.

Percentage

	UCEA institutions	CSCFC institutions
1995–96	2.7	2.7
1996–97	2.9	2.9
1997–98	2.9	2.5
1998–99	[1]—	3.1

[1] 2 per cent. from 1 April and a further 1.8 per cent. from 1 October

The University and College Employers' Association (UCEA) negotiates pay on behalf of the universities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, St. Andrews, Stirling and Strathclyde and Heriot-Watt University. The conference of Scottish Centrally Funded Colleges (CSCFC) negotiates pay for the remaining 11 Scottish higher education institutions.

Pay settlements in the further education sector in Scotland are the responsibility of individual college boards of management. Details of the terms and conditions of each college settlement are not held centrally.

Repossessions

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to enable the courts, in cases of repossession of houses, to intervene in order to determine what is in the best interests of the family resident in the house, and if they can continue to live there under an acceptable financial arrangement. [58811]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 17 November 1998]: There is nothing to stop a person with mortgage arrears offering to settle on terms acceptable to a creditor who is the holder of a standard security. However, should the creditor refuse the terms, the courts do not at present have any discretion about granting an order for ejection. I have no plans to change the law in this respect.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses or flats in Scotland have been repossessed by the mortgagee because of non-payment of mortgage in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [58812]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Data on the number of actual repossessions are not collected centrally. Figures in relation to the number of repossession orders granted by the courts have been collected by the courts since a revised system of collecting Civil Judicial Statistics was instituted on 1 January 1994. The figures from 1 January 1994 to 30 September 1998 are shown in the table. The figures for orders granted will however be higher than the number of repossessions completed.

Year	Repossession orders granted
1995	3,554
1996	4,339
1997	4,305
1998 (to 30 September)	3,763

Protected Seabirds

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the distance from St. Kilda that the protected seabird populations of gannets, fulmars, puffins, Leach's petrels, Storm petrels and Manx shearwaters feed. [59375]

Mr. Macdonald: I am advised by Scottish Natural Heritage that most birds from St. Kilda feed within 55km of the islands during the breeding season. They range throughout the Atlantic at other times of the year.

Woodland Areas

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he has set for increasing the proportion of woodland areas in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland by 2010. [60106]

Mr. Macdonald: We are committed to increasing the area of woodland in Britain, but we have not set any specific targets.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy regarding the sale of Forestry Commission woodlands. [59829]

Mr. Macdonald: As promised in our election manifesto, we have put an end to the large scale sales of Forestry Commission woodland. While the Commission will be able to buy and sell assets in order to manage its estate efficiently, any future woodland sales will be restricted to relatively small and isolated blocks of woodland which do not make a significant contribution to the Commission's objectives and are surplus to its requirements. Woodland which is important for public access will not be sold unless an access agreement is in place.

Student Maintenance Awards

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what proportion of those full-time new entrant students whose university or college tuition fees were paid for by the Student Awards agency for Scotland or its predecessor bodies received the maximum maintenance award in (a) 1968, (b) 1972, (c) 1977, (d) 1982, (e) 1987, (f) 1992 and (g) 1997; what would have been the figures for 1997 if all points of the residual

Income Scale for parental/spouse contributions had been increased by £10,000; and what would be the cost to public funds of such an increase. [60010]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The available information is set out in the tables.

For academic years prior to 1997–98 it is not possible to distinguish between new entrants and continuing students. The information provided in Table 1 is based on all award holders in the year in question. The figures for 1992–93 and later include award holders on full time Higher National Certificate courses, whereas those for earlier years do not. Data for 1968–69 are not readily available.

Table 2 sets out the available information on new entrant award holders in academic year 1997–98. It is based on provisional data which are subject to change.

It is not possible to calculate the effect of an increase in the residual income scale for parental/spouse contributions by £10,000 as no information is held on the income distribution of those families claiming fees only awards. An increase in the residual income scale would mean that some of these students would become entitled to an award.

Students receiving the maximum maintenance award

Year	Number of award holders	Percentage of award holders
1972–73	12,280	27
1977–78	14,940	28
1982–83	19,857	35
1987–88	21,204	36
1992–93	36,561	41
1996–97	47,417	43

New entrants in academic year 1997–98 receiving maximum maintenance awards

Number of new entrant award holders	Number receiving full maintenance awards
42,135	18,896 (45%)

Liquor Sales (Petrol Stations)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to alter the licensing laws to prevent or discourage petrol stations from selling liquor. [60354]

Mr. McLeish: There are no plans to amend the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976 under which a licensing board may, subject to certain statutory criteria, grant petrol stations an off-sales licence.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60218]

Mr. Dewar: The Taskforce 2000 study is based on the most recent quarterly returns from Departments about their Year 2000 readiness. These have been available on the internet since early September. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of The Scottish Office's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Libraries of the House and published on the internet.

I am pleased that the report assesses Year 2000 readiness in The Scottish Office as a low risk. However we cannot afford to be complacent about the task of ensuring that there will be no material disruption to public and other vital services as a result of the millennium date change.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many unemployed people have been successful in obtaining jobs through the regional selective assistance programme, in each of the areas to which RSA applies. [59871]

Mr. Dewar: RSA is a scheme to increase or safeguard employment in the Assisted Areas throughout Great Britain. No figures are kept on how many of these jobs are filled directly from the unemployment register.

Under the pilot "RSA Priority" initiative, launched on 22 May 1998 in 5 particularly deprived areas of Scotland, 4 companies have to date been offered the opportunity to receive additional grant if they employ residents of these designated areas. The projects are at too early a stage to obtain any information on the individuals who will fill the new jobs to be created.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Union Flag

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if the schedule of dates to fly the Union Flag has been made available to the Courthouse, Armagh City; if the Union Flag was flown at the Courthouse on Remembrance Sunday, and if he will make a statement. [59384]

Mr. Hoon: A schedule of dates to fly the Union Flag was made available to staff at the Courthouse, Armagh City. However, due to an oversight the flag was not flown on Remembrance Sunday (8 November). Arrangements have been put in place to avoid any recurrence of this unfortunate mistake.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60213]

Mr. Hoon: I regard the Year 2000 problem as an issue of the utmost seriousness and I take a close interest in the Department's programme. I welcome any independent assessment of progress. Although the Taskforce 2000 report contains some inaccuracies in its summary of the Department's current position, I am pleased to note its recognition of the overall competence with which the complex project is being managed.

The Department has recently submitted its latest quarterly return to the Central IT Unit and the results of that review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the return will be placed in the Library and published on the Internet.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council if she will ensure that independent audits are undertaken of the plans and progress of each Government department and agency in dealing with the Year 2000 date change. [60208]

Mrs. Beckett: We have already encouraged Ministers to arrange for some form of quality assurance of their Departments' and agencies' Year 2000 programmes to be carried out. It is for individual Ministers to consider what approach to auditing best suits the needs of their Departments and agencies and what bodies they should use to undertake the audits.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council how many civil servants are employed in the Year 2000 team in the Cabinet Office. [60310]

Mrs. Beckett: Ten.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council if she will publish the Government's contingency plans for dealing with the consequences of system failure caused by the millennium bug. [60203]

Mrs. Beckett: I have asked all departments and agencies to have initial contingency plans in place by January 1999. I will consult colleagues about how much of the detail of the plans could sensibly be put into the public domain at that time.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council what assessment she has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of her Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60216]

Mrs. Beckett: Work on ensuring the Millennium compliance of the Privy Council Office's systems is being taken forward as part of the Cabinet Office's Year 2000 Programme. The Cabinet Office has a comprehensive Year 2000 programme in place and is making good progress in tackling the problem. The Taskforce 2000 report therefore rightly noted that the Cabinet Office's programme posed little cause for concern.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council on what date the Government's Year 2000 contingency unit was established; what its objectives are; and to which Minister it reports. [60204]

Mrs. Beckett: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the Year 2000 Team within the Cabinet Office. The Prime Minister announced the establishment of the Year 2000 Team in answer to a Parliamentary Question on 30 March 1998, Official Report, columns 374–75.

The objective of the team is to support the work of Ministers in driving forward action in the public and private sector, including the national infrastructure, to prevent damage from the failure of electronic systems related to the Year 2000 date change.

The Year 2000 Team reports to me in my role as the Cabinet Minister responsible for the co-ordination of Government policy in response to the Millennium Bug.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what steps he has taken to improve energy efficiency in (a) heating and (b) lighting; and what plans he has to achieve further improvements in each of the next three years. [60152]

Sir Sydney Chapman: In the last three years we have spent more than £18,000 on energy conservation measures. The House has already achieved energy savings in excess of 15 per cent. and we expect to increase that saving to at least 20 per cent. when the project to modernise the main boilers in the Palace of Westminster is completed in August 2001.

TREASURY

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a break-down of the accounting and other adjustments line in Table B12 of the Pre-Budget Report. [59097]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The table provides a breakdown of the accounting and other adjustments shown in table B12 of the Pre-Budget Report, with accompanying brief explanatory notes.

Similar questions were answered on 22 July 1998, Official Report, columns 585–86, following the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper. There have been a few changes to the presentation of the adjustments since then, reflecting the adoption of ESA95 in the national accounts which are explained in the Pre-Budget Report, paragraphs B26-B36.

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
6. Adjustments for Public Corporations	2.9	3.3	3.7	4.0	4.4

9. Other accounting adjustments	0.3	0.1	–0.1	–0.1	–0.2
Total	9.2	7.8	9.9	13.9	15.1

Notes:

1. Adds the value of general government non-trading capital consumption, which is included in Total Managed Expenditure (TME).
2. Adds back VAT refunded to central government departments and local government. Departmental Expenditure Limits and Annually Managed Expenditure programme expenditure are measured net of these refunds, while Total Managed Expenditure is recorded including the VAT paid. Adds VAT refunded to NHS trusts, BBC and ITN in respect of contracted out services for non-business purposes, and adds VAT refunds to DIY housebuilders.
3. Deducts traditional own resources (ie payments of Customs duties and agricultural and sugar levies) and VAT contributions to the European Community, which are included in the net payments to EC institutions line in AME, but excluded from TME.
4. Adds income tax credits which score as public expenditure under national accounting conventions. Includes Mortgage Interest Relief, Life Assurance Premium Relief, and (from 1999–00) Working Families' Tax Credit and Disabled Persons' Tax Credit.
5. Includes the Valuation Office and Financial Services Authority.
6. Accounting adjustments to move to a national accounts basis for scoring public corporations' current and capital spending; adds capital expenditure and debt interest payments outside the public sector and removes capital grants from general government.
7. Removes intra-public sector debt interest and dividend payments and receipts which are included elsewhere in Departmental Expenditure Limits and Annually Managed Expenditure.
8. Deducts those financial transactions which are scored in Departmental Expenditure Limits and Annually Managed Expenditure.
9. Other adjustments include the deduction of grants paid to local authorities by non-departmental public bodies classified to the central government sector and the deduction of Bus Fuel Duty Rebate.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the policy of his Department on varying the cash plans of spending departments if inflation turns out to be significantly different from expected over the timescale covered by the Comprehensive Spending Review. [59421]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report published in June made it clear that cash plans of spending departments will be reviewed only if inflation varies substantially from forecast. In responding to the Treasury Committee report on the EFSR the Government said that they will not consider reviewing the cash figures other than in the event of inflation varying by more than 1.5 per cent. cumulatively from the projections in the Comprehensive Spending Review. There is, of course, no presumption that any review would lead to any changes in Departmental cash plans.

Income Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he will use to assess the economic case for introducing the ten pence starting rate of income tax; and if he will make a statement. [59435]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 November 1998]: As the Chancellor made clear in his statement on the Pre-Budget Report on 3 November 1998, Official Report, columns 681–88, the Government will introduce a 10 pence starting rate of income tax when it is economically right to do so. The new rate will be incorporated in the income tax system in the way that best meets the Government's objectives of improving work incentives and promoting a fair and efficient tax system.

Tobacco and Alcohol Smuggling

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the use of tax stamps to combat the smuggling of tobacco and alcohol. [60178]

Dawn Primarolo: The use of tax stamps was considered as part of the Alcohol and Tobacco Fraud Review carried out by Customs in partnership with the trade. A report of the Review was published in July this year.

Pensions (Taxation)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to (a) tax pensions lump sums and (b) remove the higher rate tax benefit on private and occupational pensions. [59887]

Ms Hewitt: None.

Bit Tax (Internet Access)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of a bit tax on Internet access. [60260]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government see little merit in the idea of a bit tax on Internet use. Rather we support international efforts to ensure the proper and effective application of existing taxes to economic activity which is undertaken via the Internet.

Shipping Taxes

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 26 October 1998, Official Report, column 42, if he will publish the costs to public funds of introducing a tonnage-based tax on British shipping at rates comparable to those levied by other member states of the European Community, together with his estimate of the future trend in the yield from shipping taxes if the current tax regime is retained. [60097]

Dawn Primarolo: It would be disproportionately costly to produce a reliable estimate of the cost of introducing a tonnage tax for UK shipping. We do not produce separate forecasts of the tax yield from shipping companies.

Tax Credits

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received from (a) hon. Members and Peers and (b) members of the public regarding the proposed abolition of the ability of non-taxpayers to reclaim tax credits paid on investment income; and when he expects to announce his decision on whether non-taxpayers can continue to reclaim the tax credit from 6 April 1999. [60159]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have received a number of representations on this subject and we will make an announcement as soon as we are in a position to do so.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact on non-income tax payers of the abolition of tax credits on dividends from April 1999. [60358]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 26 October 1998, Official Report, column 37.

VAT

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy towards the charging of VAT on building land; and if he will make a statement. [60166]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The sale of building land is exempt from VAT unless the person selling it has made an election to tax the supply at 17.5 per cent. VAT.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the Arthur Anderson report on VAT on property; and if he will make a statement. [60167]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The report by Arthur Anderson was released by the European Commission last month and it is still being analysed by Customs and Excise. It is too early to make any assessment of its content.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's proposed Public Service Agreements. [58928]

Mr. Byers: As was made clear at the time of the announcement of the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review the Government place great importance on the public service agreements. The agreements will set out clear objectives, performance and efficiency targets for public services. They will be published next month.

Single European Currency

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response there has been from businesses to the Euro Preparation Unit's offer of free fact sheets to help small and medium businesses prepare for the launch of the euro. [60307]

Ms Hewitt: The Euro Preparation Unit's (EPU) business communication campaign on the euro, has proved highly effective in reaching its target audience of small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs). The result of the EPU's direct mailing to 1.6 million SMEs was a response rate of over 10 per cent. This is around three times the industry norm. To date there have been requests for over 300,000 "business preparations for the euro" factsheet packs from businesses and key intermediary bodies.

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the tax consequences of EMU. [60622]

Ms Hewitt: In July the Government announced a consultation on the technical tax changes needed to prepare for the introduction of the single currency in other Member States. The consultation was based on some initial proposals which had been developed through earlier dialogue with market participants.

In the light of comments received on the consultation, draft regulations have now been drawn up and are being published today. Copies have been placed in the Library. The Government are thus ensuring that business has every opportunity to ensure that the changes that will be enacted will meet its needs.

Pensions Regulation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to modify the regulatory environment for pensions to encourage the private sector to make provision for low-cost, funded, second tier pensions; which of his Ministers is responsible for reviewing pensions regulation; and if he will make a statement. [59362]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 12 November 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

We are conducting a review into all aspects of pensions, including second tier pensions. One of the challenges for the review is to get the regulation of pensions right, so that people are confident their pensions are secure. We intend to publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visits

Q17. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to make an official visit to East Anglia. [58909]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans, but I hope to do so in the future.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Helen Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the forthcoming vacancy on the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [60726]

The Prime Minister: I am pleased to announce that Professor Alice Brown has accepted my invitation to serve as a member of the Committee on Standards in Public Life in succession to Professor Anthony King who stood down from the Committee at the end of October.

I should like to take this opportunity to thank Professor King for his valuable contribution to the work of the Committee over the past four years.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 18 November. [59870]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House today, I will have further such meetings later.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery (Seaside Towns)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the total value of National Lottery awards given to projects in seaside towns in each of the last three years and what proportion of the total this represents. [58781]

Mr. Banks: It is not possible to provide a breakdown of National Lottery awards in seaside towns in each of the last three years without incurring disproportionate costs. The Department's website www.lottery.culture.gov.uk. contains details of all awards made to date.

Royal Parks

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what consultation there has been with (a) local residents and (b) other members of the public by the Royal Parks Agency about its plan to extend parking charges to weekends and bank holidays in (i) Hyde Park and (ii) Regent's Park; [58863]

(2) if he will list the organisations which the Royal Parks Agency consulted this year about its plan to extend parking charges to weekends and bank holidays in Hyde Park and Regent's Park; [58864]

(3) if he will publish the submissions from the organisations consulted by the Royal Parks Agency about its plan to extend parking charges to weekends and bank holidays in Hyde Park and Regent's Park; [58862]

(4) to which other Royal Parks in London the Royal Parks Agency has plans to extend parking charges at weekends and bank holidays; [58865]

(5) how much extra revenue he estimates will be raised by the Royal Parks Agency by extending parking charges to weekends and bank holidays in (a) Hyde Park and (b) Regent's Park; and if he will make a statement on how this money is planned to be spent; [58867]

(6) what assessment the Royal Parks Agency has made of parking levels in (i) Hyde Park and (ii) Regent's Park at weekends and bank holidays; and if he will publish the figures upon which it based its assessment; [58866]

(7) if he will list the dates of all correspondence between his Department and the Royal Parks Agency about the extension of parking charges to weekends and bank holidays in (i) Hyde Park and (ii) Regent's Park; and if he will place copies of the correspondence in the Library. [58965]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 9 November 1998]: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Viviene Robertson to Mr. Richard Ottoway, dated 18 November 1998:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, David Welch, the Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport has asked me to reply to your parliamentary questions about extending car parking charges in the Royal Parks to weekends and Bank Holidays.

40 Other Royal Parks in London to which it is planned to extend parking charges at weekends and Bank Holidays

The Agency is looking at the possibility of introducing car parking charges, including at weekends and Bank Holidays, in Richmond, Bushey and Greenwich Parks as part of a wider traffic management programme. It is in line with the recommendations of the Royal Parks Review Group and the Government's policy on traffic and parking in London. We will consult local authorities, local MPs and other interested parties on our proposals and take account of their views.

41 The dates of all correspondence between the Department for Culture Media and Sport and the Royal Parks Agency about the extension of parking charges at weekends and Bank Holidays in Hyde Park and Regent's Park

The Royal Parks Agency originally sought ministerial approval to extend the car parking charges in Hyde Park and Regent's Park on 11 March 1998. The Department responded on 31 May. After consulting interested parties, the Agency submitted a revised proposal on 10 June; the Department approved the proposal and gave permission on 14 July for amending regulations to be drawn up. On 17 September the Agency sought approval to lay the amending regulations before Parliament. On 20 October we wrote again to the Department to propose that the regulations should come into force on 1 February 1999. The Department agreed on 29 October.

I have arranged for copies of this correspondence to be placed in the Library.

42 Consultation the Agency has had with local residents and other members of the public

The Agency consulted local MPs, local interest groups, including the Friends of Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens and the Friends of Regent's Park, and the neighbouring local authorities as representatives of the public. The original proposals were revised as a result of their responses.

43 The extra revenue it is estimated will be raised by extending parking charges to weekends and Bank Holidays in Hyde Park and Regent's Park and how this money is planned to be spent

I cannot say how much additional revenue the new arrangements will raise but we anticipate it could be in the region of £100,000-£200,000. But it will depend on the weather and the take up and turnover of parking spaces. The 4 hour limit that applies during the week will not apply at weekends and Bank Holidays.

All income derived from car parking is retained by the Agency and goes towards the upkeep and maintenance of the Parks.

44 Publication of the submissions from the organisations consulted by the Royal Parks Agency about the plan to extend parking charges to weekends and Bank Holidays in Hyde Park and Regent's Park

The organisations consulted by the Royal Parks about the proposal to extend car parking charges to weekends and Bank Holidays were not advised at the time of consultation that their responses might be made public. It would be impracticable to seek permission from each of them to publish their submissions, but I have attached a list of those whom we consulted.

45 The assessment the Royal Parks Agency has made of parking levels in Hyde Park and Regent's Park at weekends and Bank Holidays, and the figures upon which the assessment is based

Our annual visitor surveys shows that less than 10% of visitors travel to Hyde Park and Regent's Park by car. It is our experience that car parking spaces are fully occupied, indeed over-subscribed at weekends, particularly when the weather is fine.

46 The organisations which the Royal Parks Agency consulted about its plan to extend parking charges to weekends and Bank Holidays in Hyde Park and Regent's Park

A list of the organisations consulted by the Royal Parks Agency is attached.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what duty the Royal Parks Agency has to consult local authorities when planning temporary road closures in the Royal Parks; [59778]

(2) if he will make it his practice to publish details of leases granted by the Royal Parks Agency to private companies of property in the Royal Parks. [59777]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for replies to be given.

Letter from David Welch to Dr. Jenny Tonge, dated 18 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking what duty the Royal Parks Agency has to consult local authorities about temporary road closures in the parks.

The Agency has no specific duty to consult local authorities over temporary road closures in the Royal Parks. However, the Royal Parks Agency consider themselves to be under an obligation, as good neighbours, to inform local authorities at an early stage of any closures that may be planned.

Letter from David Welch to Dr. Jenny Tonge, dated 18 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking him to publish details of leases granted by the Royal Parks Agency to private companies of property in the parks.

Details of these leases are commercial transactions and to publish this information would breach the companies' confidentiality, and compromise the Agency's ability to let property on commercial terms in future.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59740]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 November 1998]: For both (a) and (b):

Statutory List of Buildings of Special Architectural or Historic Interest;

Schedule of Ancient Monuments.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what childcare provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this childcare; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59717]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 November 1998]: As part of an overall Equal Opportunities Policy the provision of childcare facilities within my Department is two-fold: (i) one nursery place for a child aged between 2 and 5 years at the Stepping Stones Nursery, based at Napier Hall, Pimlico. Parents currently contribute 50 per cent. of the cost of the nursery place at a rate of £79.00 per week.

(ii) DCMS staff can also use places at the Westminster Holiday Playscheme which caters for children between 5 and 12 years old and which operates during all the main school holidays at various locations in Whitehall and Victoria. Parents currently contribute 50 per cent. of the cost of the playscheme at a rate of £8.40 per day.

Four parents used the childcare facilities in each of the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98. The proportion of total staff was 1.1 per cent.

My Department is committed to developing its family friendly policies further. Childcare is only one element. Measures already in place to help staff to balance work and family life include: part time working, jobshare, flexi-time, homeworking, paid maternity, paternity and adoption leave, career breaks and special leave for domestic purposes.

Youth Football Development Programme

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which Football League clubs have applied for lottery money from the Sports Council of England for youth development schemes; [59939]

(2) how many applications have been received by the Sports Council of England from Football League clubs for funding for youth development schemes; [59938]

(3) which Football League clubs have unsuccessfully applied for lottery money from the Sports Council of England to fund youth development schemes; [59942]

(4) which Football League clubs have successfully applied for lottery money from the Sports Council of England to fund youth development schemes; [59941]

(5) which Football League clubs have received lottery money from the Sports Council of England to fund youth development schemes. [59940]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 November 1998]: Sixty-nine Football League clubs are eligible for Lottery money under the Youth Football Development Programme, which is jointly funded by the FA Premier League and the Lottery Sports Fund. So far thirty one clubs have been awarded Lottery funding from the English Sports Council; fourteen clubs' applications are under assessment by the ESC; and three applications have been returned with a request for further information No clubs have been turned down for funding under this scheme. The table sets out the awards that have been made to date.

BBC

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what are the requirements placed on the BBC to advertise senior executive appointments externally. [59937]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 November 1998]: Under the terms of the Royal Charter and the Government's Agreement with the BBC, the BBC Governors are responsible for appointing the Director General and other senior members of staff. It is for the Governors to determine whether or not to advertise such posts externally.

Royal Observatory, Greenwich

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans there are for exhibitions in the buildings of the former Royal Observatory, Greenwich, during and after the millennium celebrations. [60103]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Royal Observatory, Greenwich, has been a Museum, run as part of the National Maritime Museum, for the past forty years and there has been no recent change in status in this regard. Decisions on exhibitions at the Observatory are a matter for the National Maritime Museum Trustees and, given that the Observatory was extensively refurbished and updated in 1993, there are no plans for new displays during the Millennium year. The Museum will however be mounting a major exhibition on The Story of Time (exploring the changes and developments in the concepts of time throughout the ages across a number of different cultures) in the Queen's House, Greenwich.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement; [60128]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [60126]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 17 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government Departments' and Agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector including the BBC. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of Departments' plans which have been published in the Libraries of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Libraries of the House and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60129]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 17 November 1998]: My Department is in the process of drawing up contingency plans in the event of problems arising from the millennium bug. My Permanent Secretary is in touch with all our sponsored bodies, both agencies and other public bodies, about this matter.

An assessment of all the embedded systems in DCMS' buildings has been undertaken. Only one system has been found to be non-complaint and that has been replaced with an updated Year 2000 compliant system.

All DCMS sponsored bodies have given assurances that this matter is incorporated in their Year 2000 compliance work.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60127]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 17 November 1998]: My Department has completed over 75 per cent. of its Year 2000 compliance work. To date, no significant problems have been found. An assessment of all the embedded systems in DCMS' buildings has been undertaken. Only one system has been found to be non-compliant and that has been replaced with an updated Year 2000 compliant system.

Problems arising in DCMS' sponsored bodies compliance work are not collated centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost. However, quarterly progress statements supplied by our sponsored bodies can be found on DCMS' website (www.culture.gov.uk).

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60221]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have noted the Taskforce 2000 report. My Department expects to be fully Year 2000 compliant by March 1999. The compliance programme has also been audited by my Department's internal auditors.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of DCMS' latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library and published on the Internet.

CABINET OFFICE

Better Government

11. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what consultations he is undertaking on the proposed better government White Paper. [58923]

12. Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office for what reasons the White Paper on better government has been delayed. [58924]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: As I explained to the House on 21 October 1998, Official Report, columns 1267–68, the Government will publish a White Paper in the spring, setting out proposals for modernising government and joining up public services, to secure effective decision-making and services that work and respond to the people who need them. The Prime Minister has asked me to chair a Cabinet Committee to drive this agenda forward and the timetable remains firmly on course. I am keen to take into account a wide range of views and ideas in preparing the White Paper.

13. Ms Ward: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the progress of the better government for older people pilot projects. [58925]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Better Government for Older People programme is a flagship project for joined-up Government. The 28 local pilots are developing an ambitious range of projects to improve the quality of public services for older people. We are also setting up a Learning Network to make sure many more authorities across the UK are able to share learning and experience with the pilots.

As the number of older people in our society continues to rise, we will need increasingly to value and celebrate them for the experience they bring and the positive contribution they can make. This programme is a step in that direction and will make a real difference to the lives of older people as we enter the new Millennium.

Government Information Service

14. Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the role of the Government Information Service. [58926]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The role of the Government Information and Communication Service is to communicate information about the policies and actions of the Government of the day. It does so through the media and through paid publicity campaigns, conducted in an economic and appropriate way, having regard to the need to be able to justify the costs as expenditure of public funds.

Policy Co-ordination

15. Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what recent discussions he has had with hon. Members on the mechanisms for the co-ordination of Government policy. [58929]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: My role is to assist the Prime Minister and Ministerial colleagues in the implementation and co-ordination of Government policy and its effective presentation. The Government are interested in obtaining a wide range of views, and those of hon. Members are an important part of this process.

New Technology

16. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to use new technology to improve communication between Government and citizens. [58930]

Mr. Kilfoyle: A new strategic framework for electronic government services will be set out in the proposed White Paper on Better Government.

Ministerial Visits

17. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to visit Wales in the course of his duties. [58931]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have no plans to visit Wales in the near future.

Genetically Modified Organisms

18. Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment he has made of the delivery across departments of Government policy relating to genetically modified organisms. [58932]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government recognise the potential benefits offered by developments in biotechnology, but also the environmental and human safety issues which these raise.

The new Ministerial Group on Biotechnology and Genetic Modification, which the Prime Minister has asked me to chair, will review our policies in this field and how they are delivered.

People's Panel

19. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what use he will make of the first results from the people's panel in the development of public services. [58933]

Mr. Kilfoyle: We intend to use the results from the People's Panel to inform our decision-making on improving public services. The Panel is an important part of our drive to modernise Government and make public services more responsive to users.

Deregulation

20. Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what further changes he proposes to make in the deregulation process following the publication of the better regulation guide. [58935]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Following the publication of the Better Regulation Guide, the Government are establishing systems to monitor new regulatory proposals, as well as training and arrangements for regulatory reporting, in order to promote the better regulation process.

The Guide does not affect availability or use of the Deregulation order making process and we will continue to put forward draft orders for consideration by the House of Commons Deregulation Committee and the Delegated Powers and Deregulation Committee of the House of Lords. The Government are also looking at the scope for reform of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

Public Servants

21. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what arrangements he is making in connection with public servants whose contracts have expired to avoid real or apparent conflicts of interest arising from their subsequent employment by the private sector. [58936]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Civil servants are bound by the business appointment rules, which govern the acceptance of offers of employment on leaving Crown service. The terms and conditions of service of other public servants are a matter for the relevant appointing authorities.

Drugs Misuse

22. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to inform hon. Members of the problems created by drug misuse in the United Kingdom. [58937]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator will present to me in the spring his first Annual Report and Plan of Action against Drug Misuse. This will include a progress report on the strategy Tackling Drugs To Build a Better Britain which was launched in April. His findings and priorities for action will be made available in the Library.

23. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on progress in the Government's anti-drug strategy following the appointment of the anti-drugs co-ordinator. [58938]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government's anti-drugs strategy Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain published in April this year established a framework for action over the next 10 years. The long term targets are to reduce drug misuse by young people, to reduce drug-related crime, to increase participation in drug treatment and to reduce the availability of drugs. Specific short and medium term targets will be in place by March 1999. Locally, Drug Action Teams are now drawing up action plans for 1999–2000. The UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator will assess progress and report annually to Government starting in March 1999.

In September 1998, following the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review, the Government announced £217 million additional funding over the next 3 years for anti-drugs activities.

25. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps he is taking to ensure greater action against drugs by public authorities acting at community level. [58940]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Drug Action Teams are responsible for co-ordinating action against drugs at local level. They are drawing up local action plans to meet the objectives in the anti-drugs strategy Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain which are required to be with the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator by 31 December. The Government will provide £15 million over the next three years to support Drug Action Teams in their Co-ordination function, an increase of £1.5 million per annum.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what additional measures have been put in place to assist pro-active drug enforcement measures at points of entry; and if he will make a statement. [58854]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Customs together with other relevant enforcement agencies are currently reviewing their drugs enforcement policies and operational priorities in the light of the aims and objectives outlined in the Government's anti-drugs strategy Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain launched in April 1998. The UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator will be taking account of departments' forward plans in presenting his Annual Report and Plan of Action against drugs to Government.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what level of funding is to be made available in 1998–99 on prevention and treatment services for drug misuse; and how much is planned to be spent on these services in each of the next three years; [58868]

(2) what proportion of the extra resources for the drug misuse budget are designated for (a) drug rehabilitation programmes, (b) education programmes, (c) treatment in long-stay centres and (d) prisons programmes. [58869]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government's Comprehensive Spending Review on drugs found that in 1997–98, of the £1.4 billion total estimated expenditure on anti-drugs activities, 12 per cent. was spent on prevention (including education) and 13 per cent. was spent on treatment and rehabilitation. Similar levels of expenditure are expected in 1998–99. Additional funding available for three years from 1999–2000 is outlined in the table.

Additional funding	1999–2000	2000–2001	2001–2002
PSS (purchase of community care services)	3	5	12.5
NHS: Health Authorities drug misuse special allocation	12	18	20
Comprehensive provision for treatment of problem drug users in prison and effective links between prisons and community	20	20	20
Voluntary Drug Testing in prison	2	5	5
Piloting of Drug Treatment and Testing Orders followed by comprehensive implementation subject to evaluation	1	20	40
Education and Prevention	1	1	1

Note:
£10.5 million of the total £217 million and not shown in the table is for research and support for local co-ordination for Drug Action Teams

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what strategies have been put in place since 15 October 1997 to support local projects involving (a) police, (b) local government, (c) schools and (d) businesses aimed at curbing the activities of dealers in illegal drugs; [58857]

(2) what additional measures have been put in place since the appointment of the Government's Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator to combat the (a) importation, (b) trade in and (c) use of illegal drugs; and if he will make a statement. [58858]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government's anti-drugs strategy "Tackling Drugs Together to Build a Better Britain" published in April this year established a framework for action over the next 10 years. The priorities in 1998–99 relate to developing the Key Performance Indicators which will measure progress in future years against the objectives outlined in the strategy. Drug Action Teams are undertaking work which will form the basis for action in 1999–2000 and following years to implement the strategy at a local level.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proportion of the extra resources for the drug misuse budget is made up of assets seized from drug dealers following conviction for drugs trafficking. [58851]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: In the White Paper "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain", we announced that a proportion of assets seized from drug traffickers will be channelled back into anti-drugs programmes. Officials in the Cabinet Office, the Treasury, the Home Office and other relevant departments are presently considering how this can best be achieved. The Government expect to make an announcement later this year about the amount available for the financial year 1999–2000, and the criteria on which it is to be distributed.

The additional resources of £217 million made available under the Comprehensive Spending Review do not include assets recovered from drug traffickers.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many programmes to educate young people in the dangers of illegal drugs have been initiated since 15 October 1997. [58856]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government have continued to support a range of existing drug education programmes through, for example, the Department of Health's contract with the Health Education Authority, the Department for Education and Employment's Standards Fund and the Home Office Drugs Prevention initiative.

The Government published their 10 year anti-drugs strategy in April following a review of all action to tackle drug misuse by the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator. Education is an essential part, and all future anti-drugs activity and expenditure by the Government are being developed in accordance with this strategy. A total of £19.5 million per year will help to support the development of effective programmes across the country.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what additional measures have been put in place to bring about a reduction in the international supply of illegal drugs; and if he will make a statement. [58852]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Reducing the availability of illegal drugs on our streets is one of the key objectives of the Government's strategy for tackling drugs misuse.

International effort aims to reduce the flow of illegal drugs to the UK by reducing production of illegal drugs, improving the effectiveness of efforts to control the trade in illegal drugs and the chemical precursors used in their manufacture, and targeting drugs profits through effective international action against money laundering.

Resources are targeted at the key producer and transit countries for drugs reaching the UK: in particular the Caribbean, Latin America, South West and Central Asia, and South Eastern Europe.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the increase in drug misuse in rural areas. [59765]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government take seriously any report that indicates drug misuse problems in rural communities. Accordingly, the Home Office Drugs Prevention Initiative has commissioned further research to inform drug prevention action in rural areas.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) if his Department will allocate funds specifically for tackling drug misuse in rural areas; [59766]

(2) what consideration will be given to the particular circumstances of rural communities in the implementation of the cross-departmental review of illegal drugs. [59764]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The UK Anti-Drugs strategy launched in April seeks to address the needs of both rural and urban communities. In September, I announced substantial additional funding of £217 million over the next three years, following the Drugs Comprehensive Spending Review to deal specifically with drug misuse issues. Drug Action Teams are responsible for tackling drug misuse locally and must determine local needs and spending priorities.

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what further support is planned for the work of the drug action teams following the provision of extra resources within the Comprehensive Spending Review. [58982]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Of the £217 million additional funding for anti-drugs activities provided as a result of the Comprehensive Spending Review, £1.5 million over three years is to support the local coordination function of Drug Action Teams. The total central government support for local co-ordination by Drug Action Teams will be £15 million during the financial years 1999 to 2002. The Government are considering the views of Drug Action Teams on the allocation of this funding. Decisions will be announced later this month.

Government Publications (Disabled People)

24. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what step he is taking to ensure disabled access to Government publications. [58939]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Central Office of Information (COI) provides a number of services to government departments to assist them in ensuring that their information material is accessible to people with disabilities. The COI's Informability Unit offers advice and consultancy on accessible information issues and also procurement of accessible formats. The Unit has published The Informability Manual, which is widely used throughout government departments and the private sector as a good-practice guide to making information accessible.

The COI also produces two magazine services, one on audio cassette (Sound Advice), the other on British Sign Language and subtitling on video (Public Scene). These magazines are available to government departments and agencies to publicise details of current publications and campaigns to sensory impaired audiences. Both services are supplied free to organisations which relate to people with disabilities or literacy problems and act as disseminators of the information to their particular audiences.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60217]

Mr. Kilfoyle: For the purpose of this answer, the Prime Minister's Office is part of the Cabinet Office.

The Taskforce 2000 report has rightly noted that no insurmountable problems are expected for the Cabinet Office and its agencies on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. Detailed comments on Taskforce 2000's observations are as follows:

Some non-critical systems have been rescheduled in the Cabinet Office central department but remain on target for completion by the second quarter of 1999. These systems are being replaced as part of the planned implementation of, and within the planned expenditure for, the Department's IT strategy.

The Buying Agency's schedule is to have in place compliant versions of all business critical systems by 31 March 1999 and to stay within planned expenditure. Non critical systems are expected to be tested by the end of September 1999. Business continuity plans and end-to-end business process testing will be in place by January 1999.

The Property Advisers to the Civil Estate's programme to make compliant business critical areas is well advanced. The slower programme to ensure compliance for non-critical areas, such as vacant surplus property, is also fully on schedule and will be completed by September 1999. This is consistent with the Agency's own advice to Government Departments issued in June 1997.

The role of the Civil Service College is to help develop managerial and professional skills and promote best practice throughout Government in both management and key professional areas. It does not offer technical IT training courses. Nevertheless, it does and will continue to include Year 2000 issues in Systems Management and Project Management courses where appropriate. The Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (the relevant Cabinet Office Agency) offers a wide range of advice and guidance on Year 2000 issues to the public sector.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the Cabinet Office's latest quarterly return will be placed in the library of the House and published on the Internet.

HOME DEPARTMENT

House-to-house Collections

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has given to local authorities and the police regarding the operation of the House to House Collections Act 1939, with particular reference to soliciting householders for goods which they believe are for UK-based charity shops but which are exported for commercial gain. [59889]

Mr. Boateng: Officials met representatives from the Charity Shops Group recently to discuss some of the problems identified in this area. Consideration is being given to whether there is a need for guidance to be given to the relevant authorities.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that Part III of the Charities Act 1992 is being enforced to control house to house collections. [59888]

Mr. Boateng: Part III of the Charities Act 1992 has not yet been brought into force. I hope soon to be in a position to announce proposals for taking this matter forward.

Belmarsh Prison

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason category A prisoners in Belmarsh prison are required to leave defence papers in their cell during a search. [60014]

Mr. George Howarth: Section 17.73 of the Prison Service Security Manual, a copy of which is in the Library, stipulates that, during a cell search, staff must examine legal correspondence thoroughly, in the absence of the prisoner, so far as is necessary to ensure that it is bona fide correspondence between the prisoner and a legal adviser and does not conceal anything else. This applies to all prisoners in all closed prisons.

When searching cells, it is essential that prison officers search all items in the prisoner's possession. If legal documents are not searched there is a risk of other documents and small items, such as blades or drugs, being concealed.

This policy has been tested in the Court of Appeal and I am satisfied that it is within the law.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers, claiming Kosovan origin are currently detained at (a) Campsfield House and (b) other immigration detention centres. [60013]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Regrettably, information on the number of detained asylum seekers who claim to be Kosovan can be obtained only by examining individual case records and is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

As there is no distinct nationality of Kosovan, those claiming to be Kosovan are usually to be found among nationals of Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY). Some claiming to be Kosovan are in fact Albanian.

The number of each of these nationalities held in the five main centres on 17 November 1998 was:

	FRY	Albania
Campsfield House	8	15
Tinsley House	6	8
Harmondsworth	4	4
Haslar	4	9
Rochester	23	23
Total	45	59

These data include those detained under Immigration Act powers, whether or not they have claimed asylum at any time.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Kosovans (a) have applied for asylum, (b) have had an initial decision on their application, (c) are appealing against asylum decisions and (d) have been granted asylum or exceptional leave to remain in each of the last 24 months; and what formal or informal procedures are used to identify Kosovans. [60344]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is on asylum applications and decisions for nationals of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and is given in the table. Although Kosovans are not separately identifiable, the vast majority of applicants from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia claim to be ethnic Albanians from Kosovo. I regret that there is no information available regarding nationals of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia appealing against asylum decisions.

The determination of whether an applicant is an ethnic Albanian from Kosovo in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, as claimed, is based on the information and evidence available in the individual case, including any documentation submitted and the outcome of any interview conducted. There is evidence that some of those claiming to be Kosovan are in fact from Albania.

Cannabis

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long the programme of testing and evaluation he requires before cannabis can be made available on prescription will take; and what procedures will have to be gone through. [60104]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government's view is that cannabis should not be available on prescription unless or until the safety, quality and efficacy of a medicinal form have been scientifically established and a marketing authorisation issued by the Medicines Control Agency. In order to satisfy those requirements, I understand from the Medicines Control Agency that a product based on cannabis would have to go through carefully designed clinical trials, a procedure which all prospective new medicines have to complete. How long such procedures would take would depend on precisely how the trials were undertaken and the results which began to emerge during them.

Fines

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what, in each of the last five years, was the average level of fine issued in respect of each category of crime for which fines are used; and if he will make a statement. [60343]

Mr. Boateng: The information is given in the table.

The fine remains the most commonly used disposal of the courts and, as the figures in the table show, there has been an 11 per cent. increase in the level of fines over the five year period between 1993 and 1997.

Young Offenders

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time was from arrest to sentencing for young offenders in the latest period for which figures are available; by what date he expects to meet his target to halve the time from arrest to sentencing for persistent young offenders; what the definition is of persistent offending; and if he will make a statement. [60345]

Mr. Boateng: Information about the average time for arrest to sentence for young offenders has not been collected nationally in the past. New arrangements to do so were trialled earlier this year and put in place nationally in October. In addition, we have undertaken two special exercises to monitor the time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders, reflecting our commitment to halve the average time from arrest to sentence for this group. In 1996, the average time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders was 142 days. In 1997, it was 141 days overall and 138 days between May and December 1997.

A persistent young offender is defined as a young person who has been sentenced on three or more separate occasions by any criminal court in the United Kingdom for one or more recordable offences, and within three years of the last sentencing occasion is subsequently arrested or has information laid against him for a further recordable offence.

The Government are taking a range of actions to help local agencies achieve quickly the target of a national average of 71 days from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders. We have asked all youth courts to set up fast tracking schemes for persistent young offenders. In the last 12 months, the number of fast track schemes has grown from 12 to 160 in operation or planned in England and Wales. The scheme for all young offenders in North Hampshire has shown what can be achieved by cutting the average time taken to deal with young offenders from charge to sentence from 133 days to 89 days.

From October, we have set demanding performance targets for all stages of proceedings up to and after trial and for all youth justice agencies. The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 includes provisions to help courts to manage cases more quickly and effectively. Several measures, based on recommendations in the Narey review, are currently being piloted, with national implementation planned for October next year. The Act will also enable statutory time limits to be set in cases involving young offenders and persistent young offenders.

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the proposals for a new disposal for young offenders, contained in Chapter 9 of the White Paper "No More Excuses" will be taken forward. [60672]

Mr. Straw: The White Paper "No More Excuses" set out radical proposals for reform of the youth court, to enable those appearing before the youth court for the first time to be referred, by way of sentence, to a youth offender panel. Following the principles of restorative justice, the panel would draw up a contract with the young offender to include reparation to the victim of the offence, or to the wider community, and measures to deal with drug or alcohol abuse, poor parenting, or other issues relevant to the offending behaviour. The length of the referral would be determined by the court on the basis of the seriousness of the crime, up to a maximum of 12 months. The Government invited comments on these proposals, and received replies from 97 individuals and organisations. The majority of the respondents were in favour of the proposals.

As suggested in the White Paper, it is intended that the new disposal will be automatic for those appearing for the first time and pleading guilty, save for those occasions where either an absolute discharge or a custodial sentence is considered appropriate. In the light of consultation, it is also proposed to make the disposal available, on a discretionary basis, where the defendant pleads guilty to some offences but not guilty to others; and to give the courts discretion to extend existing referral orders when dealing with other offences committed before or during the referral period. The White Paper suggested that membership of the youth offender panel be drawn from the magistracy and the police. In the light of consultation, it is proposed that panel members be recruited from members of the community with an experience of young people and crime. This would include magistrates and the police, but on a lay basis.

Subject to these and other minor amendments to the original White Paper proposals, legislation making provision for this new disposal will be introduced at the earliest opportunity.

Police Budgets

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have budgets set for 1999–2000 which are (i) a real terms rise in funding, (ii) fixed in real terms and (iii) a real terms fall in funding; and if he will make a statement. [60339]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not yet available. The provisional police funding settlement for 1999–2000 will be announced in the next few weeks. Police authorities will set their budgets following approval by the House, in late January or early February, of my right hon. Friend's determination of the amount of grant he proposes to pay to each police authority, and the Metropolitan Police, next year.

Police Manpower

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers (a) were recruited, (b) retired, (c) were dismissed and (d) resigned, (i) in total and (ii) as a percentage, per police force in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. Police Surveillance

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has (i) to issue a code of practice as required in accordance with section 101 of Part III of the Police Act 1997 and (ii) to make an order under section 96 of the Police Act 1997 specifying the requirements for notifying a commissioner of authorisations, renewals and cancellations of authorisations. [60673]

Mr. Straw: Part III of the Police Act 1997 provides for a statutorily based system of authorisation for intrusive surveillance operations carried out by the police, the National Criminal Intelligence Service, the National Crime Squad and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. As required by section 101 of the Act, before the provisions can be implemented, Parliament must approve an order bringing into force a code of practice for those carrying out functions under the Act. A public consultation exercise on the draft code of practice was carried out last year. Copies of the draft code were sent to over 500 individuals and organisations and 120 additional copies were provided in response to subsequent requests. By the end of the consultation period, 60 responses had been received. I have considered these representations very carefully, seeking to achieve a balance between the operational needs of law enforcement agencies in tackling serious crime and, at the same time, ensuring that adequate safeguards are in place to protect members of the public from unnecessary invasion of their privacy. As a result, I have made a number of changes to the text of the code. In particular:

there is specific reference to the confidential and sensitive nature of information relating to healthcare, counselling and legally privileged material;

emphasis is given to the importance of considering the effects of collateral intrusion on those who are not the targets of the authorisation;

further guidance is provided on when the urgency provisions should be used;

there is reference to the procedures for ensuring effective control on the handling, storage, processing and destruction of the surveillance product, especially sensitive and confidential material;

the code now includes an undertaking given by the law enforcement agencies covered by these provisions in relation to spiritual counselling; and the requirements for notifications of authorisations, renewals and cancellations have been further refined.

With the appointment of the Chief Surveillance Commissioner and Commissioners, we are now in a position to implement the provisions of Part III of the Act. I have, therefore, today laid before Parliament a revised draft code of practice. I intend to bring this document into effect, together with the notification requirements required under section 96 of the Police Act 1997, as soon as practicable. I will seek approval of these Orders by resolution of both Houses of Parliament shortly.

Prisoners (Education)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of inmates of Her Majesty's prisons have achieved, as their highest level of educational qualification (a) NVQ 5 or equivalent, (b) NVQ 4 or equivalent, (c) NVQ 3 or equivalent, (d) NVQ 2 or equivalent, (e) NVQ 1 or equivalent and (f) none of these. [50156]

Mr. George Howarth: Results of the Basic Skills Agency screening tests carried out on prisoners between January and the end of September 1998 are set out in Table 1. Table 2 provides a breakdown of the numbers of National Vocational Qualifications (NVQs) and equivalent qualifications achieved by prisoners for the same period.

It is not possible to say to what proportion of the prison population these data relate, whether these achievements are their highest level of educational qualification, or what proportion of the prison population have none of these qualifications. In order to provide this information, it would be necessary to examine individual prisoners' records.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60214]

Mr. Straw: My Department has carefully considered the Taskforce 2000 analysis. The majority of the concerns expressed can be traced to misinterpretation of published quarterly progress reports.

In particular, the analysis referred to changes to the Department's Year 2000 programme. The definition of what was a business critical system had been tightened to focus effort on those vital to the provision of key services. Agencies were reported on separately. Both changes were made in the spirit of openness, and with a view to improving programme management and visibility of key processes.

The increase in costs relates to the emergence of a clearer picture of the Year 2000 programme. The increase is not outside the range of what might be expected, given the nature of the task.

Taskforce 2000 was also concerned that end dates for some critical systems extended into 1999. The majority of these systems are expected to be Year 2000 compliant by March 1999. As a matter of prudence, the business processes concerned will be covered by contingency plans to ensure continuance of service.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the Home Office's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library and published on the Internet.

Open Government

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to promote the greater use of the code on open government. [58927]

Mr. Straw: All Government Department, agencies and public bodies under the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration are committed to providing information in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. I will publish the annual monitoring report on the operation of the Code of Practice next spring. Those bodies covered by the Code have been encouraged to make full use of the discretion available under the Code of Practice to disclose as much information as possible in the period before a Freedom of Information Act comes into force.

Countryside Alliance

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the Data Protection Registrar has made in her investigation of the sale by the Countryside Alliance of its membership mailing list to the Conservative Party; and if he will make a statement. [59607]

Mr. George Howarth: The Data Protection Registrar acts independently of government in the exercise of her functions under the Data Protection Act 1984. I understand that her investigation is continuing and that she will be writing to my hon. Friend to let him know how matters stand.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Prisoners (Early Release)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what have been the (a) maximum, (b) minimum and (c) average periods of time taken to process applications for the early release of a prisoner under the early release provisions; and what period of time is taken by the appointed members of the commission on each application; [59082]

(2) how many applications for early release have been received from persons convicted of terrorist-type crimes; and of these how many have been received from each terrorist or paramilitary group which has members in prison; [59084]

(3) how many applications for early release from prison under the Good Friday Agreement have been refused. [59070]

Mr. Ingram: Statutory responsibility for these matters lies with the Sentence Review Commissioners. I have asked the joint Chairmen, Sir John Blelloch and Mr. Brian Currin, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Currin to Mr. William Ross, dated 17 November 1998:

You recently asked three questions of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for information concerning applications made under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998. In her answer the Secretary of State advised that, as statutory responsibility for this matter lay with the Sentence Review Commissioners, I would respond.

I can advise that, up until 12 November, the maximum, minimum and average times taken to process an application from its initial receipt to the Substantive Determination stage is as follows:

Maximum time: 78 days

Minimum time: 31 days

Average time: 64 days

The range of time taken to process applications is a reflection both of the differing complexity of cases and the fact that, following receipt of 450 applications in August, the Commissioners decided to prioritise cases based on the prospective date of release for each prisoner.

You asked for information on what period of time is taken by the appointed members of the Commission on each application. Unfortunately information is not recorded in a format which would enable us to provide an answer to your question. The Commissioners are involved in a number of distinct areas in the processing of each application; for instance, each application is allocated to a Single Commissioner who is responsible for ancillary decisions and ensuring that all relevant information is available for the application to be forwarded to a panel of Commissioners for consideration. A panel consists of three Commissioners and is responsible for considering the application and response papers and giving a "Preliminary Indication" of their decision. If there is no challenge to the Preliminary Indication then the Commissioners will confirm it in the form of a Substantive Determination. In the event of a challenge by either the applicant or respondent, the Commissioners set aside the Preliminary Indication and convene a hearing prior to making a Substantive Determination.

We have received 461 applications from prisoners who have been convicted of scheduled offences. Of these, 203 are perceived to be affiliated to PIRA, 82 to UDA, 61 to UVF, 7 to LVF, 22 to INLA and 86 applications from prisoners who have no clear affiliation to any of the terrorist organisations listed above.

In response to your question as to how many applications have been refused, I can advise that, up until 12 November, there has been no Substantive Determination advising that the applicant had been unsuccessful. There have, however, been 61 applications returned because the applicants did not meet the eligibility criteria as laid down in the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998.

A copy of this letter will be placed in the library of the House of Commons.

Union Flag

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the schedule of dates to fly the Union Flag has been made available to the Roads Service Maintenance Depot, 17 Ballynahonemore Road, Armagh City; if the Union Flag was flown at the Depot on Remembrance Sunday; and if she will make a statement. [59383]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 17 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to respond to your recently tabled PQ about the flying of the Union Flag at the Roads Service maintenance depot at 17 Ballynahonemore Road, Armagh.

The Roads Service maintenance depot at 17 Ballynahonemore Road, Armagh, has been provided with a schedule of dates on which the Union Flag should be flown. However due to an oversight the flag was not flown on Remembrance Sunday, 8 November 1998 at this location.

I apologise for any offence this may have caused.

Schools (Project Funding)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial allocation will be made to (a) maintained and (b) controlled schools sector in terms of capital and revenue projects in each of the next three years. [59540]

Mr. McFall: The Capital and recurrent allocations for the schools sector for the 1999–2000 financial year cannot be decided until the Comprehensive Spending Review is completed. At that stage the delegated recurrent budgets for schools in the controlled and maintained sectors would be a matter for the Education and Library Boards. Capital funding for major works projects will be allocated by DENI to the highest priority needs.

Objective 1 Status

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the negotiations within the European Union regarding Objective 1 status for Northern Ireland. [59539]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Under the draft Structural Funds Regulations which have been published by the European Commission, the qualifying economic criterion for Objective 1 is a GDP of under 75 per cent. of EU average. If this criterion is rigidly applied, as currently seems likely to be the case, Northern Ireland would not qualify for a continuation of its Objective 1 status. However, there are good reasons for Northern Ireland to continue to receive substantial EU funding and every effort will be made in the ongoing negotiations to secure the best possible deal, commensurate with its special circumstances, to help in adapting the region's economy to peace both economically and socially.

Roads (South Down)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to introduce new roads infrastructure schemes in South Down. [59538]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 17 November 1998:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to respond to your recently tabled PQ about new road infrastructure proposals in South Down.

In addition to a significant programme of road maintenance and minor road works schemes, Roads Service proposes to provide a by-pass of Ballynahinch. The scheme is included in the 6–15 year major road works programme and will be implemented at a pace dictated by future funding levels and the priority awarded to such schemes by the new Northern Ireland Assembly.

I hope you find this helpful.

Planning Applications

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish details of each outstanding major industrial and commercial planning application, indicating the date on which each application for planning permission was lodged with the Planning Service in Northern Ireland. [59858]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart, I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Armed Robberies

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many armed robberies there have been in the City of Belfast in each week in October and November to the latest available date; to which terrorist/paramilitary groups these thefts were attributed; and what estimate she has made of the amounts stolen. [59568]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The RUC have advised that there have been no armed robberies, during the period in question, which can be attributed to either Loyalist or Republican paramilitary groups.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of her Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60222]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Taskforce 2000 report provided a comprehensive assessment of the state of preparedness of our Northern Ireland departments as it existed at the end of the summer period. We welcome any independent analysis of our published returns as a double check on analysis carried out in-house.

The conclusions of the Taskforce 2000 report match closely to our own in-house analysis. The Departments concerned are well aware of the problem areas identified and were already acting on these prior to the publication of the Taskforce 2000 report.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the NIO latest quarterly return will be placed in the Libraries of the House and on the Internet.

Decommissioning Commission

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by what means and with what regularity General John de Chastelain's Decommissioning Commission reports to the British and Irish Governments; and when she expects to call for a formal written report. [60242]

Mr. Ingram: As provided for in the Belfast Agreement, the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning reports regularly and frequently to both Governments, through contacts at both Ministerial and official level. I have no plans, at this time, to call for a formal written report.

Security Structures (Demolition)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will identify those permanent security structures which are currently under consideration for demolition. [60241]

Mr. Ingram: The Government are committed to returning Northern Ireland to normal policing and security arrangements as soon as it is safe to do so. This is clearly set out in the Good Friday Agreement. However we can only move as fast as the security situation allows. The Chief Constable keeps the situation under constant review. Security structures will only be removed where this is consistent with the level of threat.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of her Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60223]

Mr. Foulkes: We value independent assessment of our plans. The Taskforce report notes that the overall programme has slipped by three months from our last return. However, we are confident that all business critical systems will be compliant and business continuity plans in place by the year 2000. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of DFID's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the Internet.

Nepal

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to visit the Nepal Leprosy Fellowship on her visit to Nepal later this month. [59851]

Mr. Foulkes: The Secretary of State did not visit the Nepal Leprosy Fellowship during her visit to Nepal. The purpose of the visit was to help build a new development relationship with Nepal with poverty elimination at its core. It included discussions with government, donors and civil society organisations on how better health services could be provided for poor people.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultation he undertook and what evidence his Department evaluated before setting an age limit of 20 years, before which a disability must have occurred, in applications for severe disablement allowance. [58580]

Mr. Timms: We consulted widely following the publication in March of the Government's Green Paper "New ambitions for our country: A new contract for welfare" and received over 1,050 responses from numerous organisations including organisations of and for disabled people. One of the concerns they raised was the low level of Severe Disablement Allowance compared to the long-term rate of Incapacity Benefit.

The proposals for reform of Severe Disablement Allowance, set out in the Consultation Paper "Support for Disabled People", increase the level of benefit payable to people who become disabled early in life and claim benefit before the age of 20 to the long-term rate of Incapacity Benefit (£78.30 a week at 1998–99 rates). By the age of 20, those who wish to try work should have been able to discover whether or not employment is a realistic option. Those aged 20 or over, who become disabled or long-term sick later in life, will have had the opportunity to work and pay contributions to qualify for Incapacity Benefit in the normal way.

We are consulting on these proposals and we will consider all comments and alternative proposals made as part of the consultation process. The consultation period ends on 8 January 1999.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will announce the result of his Department's review of housing benefit. [59059]

Angela Eagle: We have announced a project to simplify the Housing Benefit rules and regulations and to improve delivery of the benefit. We are working in conjunction with Local Authority Associations and further announcements will be made in due course. In addition, we have also announced a small-scale pilot which will examine the issues surrounding the underoccupation of social housing.

Lone Parents

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under the New Deal for Lone Parents, how many lone parents, broken down by constituency, (a) received initial invitation letters, (b) booked initial interviews with personal advisers, (c) attended initial interviews, (d) agreed to participate in the programme following an initial interview, (e) were referred to Employment Service programmes or other training, (f) obtained jobs following participation and (g) have increased their hours of work following participation; and where a job has been obtained, or hours of work have been increased, how many lone parents (i) are in work where the hours are (A) less than 16 hours per week, (B) between 16 and 29 hours per week and (C) 30 hours per week or more, (ii) have moved off income support as a result, (iii) have a child under five years and three months of age, (iv) in cases where the youngest child is over five years and three months put themselves forward before receiving an invitation letter and (v) were given help with making an application for family credit. [58711]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The information requested broken down by constituency is not available. It is possible to provide a partial reply broken down by Employment Service regions. The information is set out in the table.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of raising the upper capital threshold for pensioner claimants of income support to (a) £10,000, (b) £15,000 and (c) £20,000. [58969]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The estimated costs are (a) £5 million, (b) £20 million, (c) £20 million.

Notes:

1. These figures are rounded to the nearest £5 million and are based upon the Department's Policy Simulation Model of income-related benefits. This model draws data from the 1995–6 Family Resources Survey, uprated to 1999–2000 levels, and calibrates results to forecast benefit caseloads. This calibration is consistent with the Department's Comprehensive Spending Review forecasts.

2. For capital costings, estimates are further adjusted using May 1997 administrative data results in order to bring them into line with known reported capital on administrative data. In the absence of any other information, the same adjustments have been applied to estimated existing gainers and floaters-on. The caseloads involved in these costings are very small and the figures are thus subject to sampling error. Whilst we would expect variant (c) to cost more than variant (b) this difference is lost in the rounding that is essential when dealing with such small sample numbers. Estimates from household surveys based on reported capital holdings are subject to low levels of response and high levels of imputation. Consequently they should be interpreted not as precise point estimates, but rather as indicative of broad magnitudes.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, for the purposes of calculating SERPS entitlements, payments of the working families tax credit will be treated in the same way as family credit payments. [58971]

Mr. Denham: All matters relating to Pensions are being considered as part of the Pensions Review.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1998, to the hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel), Official Report, columns 603–05, how many pensioners are currently receiving payments of (a) basic pension, (b) SERPS and (c) either basic pension or SERPS, where the Department cannot be certain that the correct amount is in payment. [59101]

Mr. Timms: It is estimated that potentially some 30,000 basic pensions could be underpaid and some 163,000 SERPS could be underpaid. It is not possible to estimate how many people will be receiving underpayments of both basic pension and SERPS. In addition, it is possible that some of the estimated 6,000 emergency awards paid without the availability of the NIRS contributions record could be overpaid.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the (a) gross and (b) net cost for 1999–2000, of increasing the basic retirement pension and linked benefits received by people over pension age to £75 for a single person in April 1999, (i) with and

(ii) without a similar percentage increase for couples; and what increase in contribution rates would be needed to cover the gross and net costs respectively. [59757]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Benefit costs of increasing Retirement Pension (RP) in 1999–2000

£ billion

	(i)	(ii)
Gross cost	4.0	3.5
Means-tested benefit offset	1.0	*
Net costs	3.0	*

Notes:

1. Gross costs have been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department.
2. Means-tested benefit offsets are based on the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey uprated to 1999–2000 benefit and earnings levels.
3. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion.
4. '*' A means-tested benefit offset is not available for this part. Offsets are calculated using the Family Resources Survey which does not differentiate between married women who receive a Category A pension and those who receive a Category BL pension.
5. Where both members of a couple are in receipt of a full Category A pension they have each been awarded a basic state pension of £75 per week. For cases in receipt of less than full-rate Category A, their award of Category A is pro rated according to the percentage of the full pension received. However, it is not possible to identify the Category A element of a pension received by Category ABL cases. Thus the cost of increasing Category A pension for these cases has not been taken into account in part (ii).
6. Components may not sum to totals due to rounding.

National Insurance Contributions (NICs) rates necessary to cover the gross costs percentage

	Current rates	(i)	(ii)
Employee NICs rate	10	10.8	10.8
Employer NICs rate	12.2	12.8	12.7

Notes:

1. Changes in contribution rates have been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department.
2. The estimates assume that the Lower Earnings Limit is raised to the level of the Category A pension, with consequent changes in the Upper Earnings Limit, Upper Profits Limit, Class 2 and Class 3 contribution rates. The extra cost of these changes has been added to the cost of increasing RP rates, when calculating the necessary changes in contribution rates.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he next expects to meet pensioners' organisations to discuss the uprating of pensions and associated issues; and if he will make a statement. [59524]

Mr. Denham: As part of the pensions review, Ministers have met representatives of pensioners' organisations regularly to discuss a broad range of issues, including uprating. We expect meetings with pensioners organisations to continue both before and after the publication of the Green Paper.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the pensions review to report its findings. [59469]

Mr. Denham: As set out in the Green Paper "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare" (Cm 3805), we intend to publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year.

Annual Benefit Uprating

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the minimum interval required for operational purposes between the announcement and implementation of the annual benefit uprating. [59758]

Angela Eagle: The Benefits Agency has a well established uprating plan that is currently based on the uprating announcement being made by late November/ early December.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the percentage of compliance with orders for child maintenance was in the period before the Child Support Act 1991 came into effect. [59647]

Angela Eagle: Before the launch of the Child Support Agency in April 1993, child maintenance was dealt with by the Department's liable relative officers where the parent with care was on benefit, or by the courts if neither parent was on benefit. A study of compliance with maintenance orders and agreements, carried out in 1990, showed that two in five Departmental cases with a maintenance order or agreement had one or more periods where the non-resident parent did not pay maintenance. In approximately 40 per cent. of cases with arrears, the arrears were not recovered in full. The study also found that one in three cases with maintenance orders in Magistrates courts were recorded as having had arrears at some time.

Benefits Offices (Vale of White Horse)

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he (a) decided on and (b) announced the proposal to close the local benefits offices in the Vale of White Horse District Council area. [60176]

Angela Eagle: The Benefits Agency's Abingdon office closed on 25 October 1996 along with the Wantage caller outlet which was housed in the local Council Offices.

The decision to close the offices was made by the previous Government in September 1996 and announced to Members of Parliament and other interested parties by the then Under-Secretary of State for Social Security on 2 October 1996.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Benefit Integrity Project cases have been reviewed; and how many people have appealed against the adjudicator's decision (a) successfully and (b) unsuccessfully. [60303]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow dated 17 November 1998:

I am replying to your recent question asking what the total number of Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) cases reviewed is; and how many people have appealed against the adjudicator's decision (a) successfully and (b) unsuccessfully.

As at 30 September 1998, a total of 265,659 cases, including 42,892 renewal cases have been selected for action under BIP.

At the same date a total of 137,871 cases have been examined. Of the total cases dealt with 3,132 have resulted in an increase in benefit, 105,353 have remained unchanged, 18,120 have resulted in a reduction in benefit, and 11,266 have resulted in benefit being stopped.

The total included 29,548 renewal cases, of which 940 have resulted in an increase in benefit, 14,686 have remained unchanged, 8,415 have resulted in a reduction in benefit, and 5,507 have resulted in benefit being stopped.

The number of people who have asked for a review following the BIP decision and the outcome of those reviews is shown in the table at Annex 1.

The number of people who have appealed against the adjudicator's decision and the outcome of those appeals is shown in the table at Annex 2.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

New Deal

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact on people suffering from mental health problems of a requirement to attend an interview with a personal adviser. [60395]

Angela Eagle: In the command paper, "A New Contract for Welfare: The Gateway to Work", presented to Parliament on 28 October, we recognised that for some people an immediate interview about work may not be appropriate. This would clearly be true of someone suffering from a severe mental illness. For them, the priority will be to pay the benefit to which they are entitled and to make sure all their welfare needs are properly identified. All cases will be handled with sensitivity and in a way that takes account of individual circumstances.

Benefit Take-up

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to modify proposals for a single gateway adviser to deal with the elderly, with particular reference to unclaimed benefits. [59468]

Mr. Denham: We have recently completed research into why some pensioners do not claim their entitlements. And we have also just completed nine pilots to test ways of identifying pensioners with potential entitlement to Income Support and ways of encouraging them to claim. We are currently evaluating the results of both the research and the pilots and will then consider the best way forward.

Housing Benefit (Wales)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the future of housing benefit in Wales. [60544]

Angela Eagle: We have announced a project to simplify the Housing Benefit rules and regulations and to improve delivery of the benefit. We are working closely with local government associations and with other Government Departments with the aim of ensuring that we make Housing Benefit a simple and understandable benefit which is administered efficiently and securely. Any changes in the rules of entitlement will apply throughout Great Britain.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60224]

Mr. Timms: We have noted the conclusions of Taskforce 2000, published on 11 November, in respect of this Department. We are content with what amounts to a commendation of our efforts to date. However, given the significant risks posed by this issue, no-one can afford to be complacent. We are maintaining our approach and commitment to avert any material disruption arising from the year 2000 date change.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of this Department's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library and published on the Internet.

Welfare Reform

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the co-ordination of Government policy on welfare reform. [58934]

Mr. Denham: The Prime Minister chairs a Ministerial Group to co-ordinate welfare reform across government.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many requests for appeals have been refused by the Independent Tribunal Service in each of their offices in England and Wales in Child Support Agency cases; what percentage of total requests this is; and how many breached the 28 day time limit. [60309]

Angela Eagle: The Independent Tribunal Service (ITS) does not receive requests for appeals. The President, His Honour Judge Harris, will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

DEFENCE

Navy Personnel

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Royal Navy (a) officers and (b) ratings have been (i) dismissed from the service and (ii) court-martialled in each of the last five years; [56061]

(2) how many Royal Navy personnel have left service on health grounds in each of the last five years. [58284]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of RAF aircraft, by type, are available for service immediately. [56037]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the treatment of animals in research projects carried out by his Department. [55367]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Savidge) on 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 40.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on (a) defence-related capital projects and (b) maintaining the military presence in the Falklands in each year since the end of the Falklands War. [57856]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My Department does not hold centrally the entire cost of maintaining the military presence in the Falklands since the Falklands Campaign. However, our records show the following expenditure:

£ million

Years	(a) Garrison capital costs	(b) Garrison total costs (including capital costs)
1983–84	192	391
1984–85	219	403
1985–86	221	396
1986–87	110	236
1987–88	42	118
1988–89	3	59
1989–90	2	60
1990–91	figures no longer held	66
1991–92	figures no longer held	51
1992–93	figures no longer held	58
1993–94	figures no longer held	67
1994–95	1	66
1995–96	3	66
1996–97	6	81
1997–98	3	76

Notes:

1. All figures £ million in-year cash.
2. Garrison capital costs between 1983–88 include the construction costs of Mount Pleasant Airfield.
3. Garrison costs after 1990–91 omit a number of elements, e.g. freight, food and spares, which were previously included in the Garrison costs but which are no longer attributed to the Commander British Forces Falkland Islands' Budget, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures from 1991–92 onwards include pay, which was not included in the figures compiled previously, and again pay for the period could be provided only at disproportionate cost.
4. The figures given do not include residual costs of the Falklands Campaign.
5. Garrison costs from 1991–92 include the costs of the Commander British Forces Falkland Islands' budget only. These do not include the costs of the RAF airbridge to the Falkland Islands, or the cost of naval deployments to the South Atlantic. These figures fall to other budgets and cannot be identified separately. It is not known whether these costs were included in figures before 1991–92.

Menwith Hill

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreements are in place to ensure continued US Government funding of the buildings and equipment at Menwith Hill Station. [57318]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 3 November 1998]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armed Services Uniforms

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of armed services uniforms are currently supplied by companies operating (a) offshore and (b) in Britain. [58784]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 9 November 1998]: The information is not available in the form requested. It is possible, however, to give information on the total value of current contracts that have been placed centrally for clothing worn by members of the armed services. The total value of such contracts as at 6 November 1998 is £164.5m. Of these, contracts to the value of £120.63m have been placed with UK firms.

The value of contract with UK firms where the work is carried out overseas, including by overseas sub-contractors, is £43.17m.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many doctors have left employment with his Department before retirement age in each of the last five years, by service; and how many have left on health grounds; [58743]

(2) how many nurses have left employment with each service before retirement age in each of the last five years; and how many have left on health grounds. [59207]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces (Youth Recruitment)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of 17 to 21-year-olds from the Doncaster borough are currently serving in Her Majesty's armed forces. [59306]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Property Sales

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) Territorial Army centres and (b) other property whose sale will contribute towards his Department's target of £700 million from sales of property; and what estimate he has made of the receipts from each of these categories. [59353]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Details of the future Territorial Army Centres are contained in Modern Forces for a Modern World: A Territorial Army for a Modern World, copies of which were placed in the Library of the House yesterday.

The Library already holds a list of some 220 Ministry of Defence sites that are with the Defence Estate Organisation for disposal. The receipts from these sites will contribute to my Department's target of £700 million from sales of property.

In July, when we announced the Strategic Defence Review, we estimated that the sale of TA sites would contribute some £30 million to the £700 million target. This estimate will be refined now it has been confirmed which property will be surplus to requirements.

Armed Services (Millennium Bug)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the armed services will be charging (a) local authorities, (b) health authorities and (c) other organisations which request them to be on standby over the millennium to deal with consequences of the millennium bug. [59587]

Mr. Doug Henderson: HM Treasury rules for Government Accounting require my Department to raise charges when carrying out activities other than our central defence tasks. Accordingly, if military assistance were to be provided to health organisations or other organisations charges would be raised. These charges would vary according to the circumstances, and may be waived altogether in cases involving immediate danger to human life.

Territorial Army

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will postpone his plans to cut the TA until 2000. [60263]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We announced our plans for the future of the Territorial Army in the House on 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 749–52.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will defer consideration of any reduction in the Territorial Army until January 2000 or until all millennium bug problems have been eradicated. [59619]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 16 November 1998]: There is no identified requirement for military assistance, including use of the Reserves, in the event of any problems arising on the millennium, that justified deferring the announcement in the House of the necessary modernisation of the Territorial Army on 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 749–52.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the organisations and people consulted prior to the development of contingency plans for the deployment of the Territorial Army in Cambridgeshire in the event of civil disturbance arising from the millennium bug; [59617]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the contingency plans for the deployment of the Territorial Army in Cambridgeshire in the event of civil disturbance arising from the millennium bug. [59618]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 16 November 1998]: No contingency plans have been drawn up for the deployment of the Territorial Army in Cambridgeshire in the event of civil disturbances arising from the millennium bug. But long-standing arrangements exist under which military assistance can be requested by the civil authorities in the United Kingdom in the event of a civil emergency.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the role of the TA in dealing with the effects of the millennium bug. [60264]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Morgan) on 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 171.

Water Cannon (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which years since 1968 water cannon have been used by the armed forces in Northern Ireland; and how many times water cannon were used by the armed forces in Northern Ireland. [60335]

Mr. George Robertson: Records relating to the use of water cannons in Northern Ireland are not available. However, we believe that water cannons were withdrawn from use in the Province in the early 1970s.

Atomic Weapons Establishments

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the facilities and buildings currently (a) under construction, (b) undergoing refurbishment and (c) in the design stage, indicating their purpose and their estimated total cost at (i) AWE Aldermaston and (ii) AWE Burghfield; [60020]

(2) how much money was spent at AWE in each of the last five years and how much is projected to be spent in the next five years on new building programmes and refurbishment of existing facilities to meet (a) current safety standards and (b) the requirements of the Trident warhead programme; and what proportion of this expenditure is being met by Hunting BRAE. [60019]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Trident

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department will spend on the construction of the refit facilities at Devonport. [60022]

Mr. George Robertson: The estimated cost of the project management, design, construction and commissioning of the refitting facilities for Trident and other nuclear submarines, at Devonport, is £417 million, as reported in the National Audit Office Report on the Sales of the Royal Dockyards, dated 3 June 1998. A copy of this report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of the $107 million listed in the financial addendum to the US/UK Memorandum of Understanding concerning the Joint US/UK Trident D-5 Missile Production Program is included in the authorised US fiscal year 1999 UK Trident procurement in the USA. [60024]

Mr. George Robertson: Of the $107 million, $100.6 million was included in our US fiscal year 1999 budget authorisation. The remaining $6.4 million was included in our US fiscal year 1998 authorisation.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much is paid annually to the US Government to guarantee the servicing of the UK Trident missile stock; and if this money is part of the estimated Trident running costs. [60023]

Mr. George Robertson: US and UK Trident missiles are held as mingled stock; there are no UK missiles as such. We contribute to the overall cost of the US Navy's Strategic Weapons Facility Atlantic at Kings Bay, Georgia, where missiles are stored, assembled and serviced. These contributions are based on the UK's share of the overall missile inventory and will vary from year to year, our planned contribution in financial year 1998–99 amounts to some £7.5 million. These costs include both acquisition and operating costs.

Gulf War

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1998, Official Report, columns 348–49, for what reasons his Department is undertaking a review of events concerning 32 Field Hospital; when this review started; when it is expected to end; and who is carrying out this review. [60330]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Pursuant to my answer of 2 November 1998, Official Report, columns 348–49, my Department is undertaking a review of events concerning 32 Field Hospital, a UK unit which took part in the Gulf conflict, and the release of nerve agent arising from the US demolition of Iraqi munitions at the Khamisiyah depot in March 1991, in order to answer two Parliamentary Questions tabled in another place by the Countess of Mar on 30 October 1997. Officials in my Department's Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit commenced this review in October 1997. A report of the review is currently being written up and is expected to be completed shortly. I expect to place a copy of the report in the House of Commons Library in due course.

CR Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment has made of whether short-term exposure to CR gas can harm human health in the long term. [60328]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 28 November 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Question about the long term effects of short term exposure to CR gas on human health.

Biomedical studies conducted at DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) at Porton Down, and elsewhere, show CR to be a potent sensory irritant with a relatively low toxicity. It has no organ-specific toxicity. CR does not appear to accumulate following short term exposure and it is apparently devoid of long term or chronic toxic effects.

I hope this is helpful.

Rubber Bullets (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the armed forces (a) first and (b) last used rubber bullets in Northern Ireland; in which years since 1968 they used rubber bullets in Northern Ireland; how many rubber bullets they used in Northern Ireland in each of those years; and how many rubber bullets they have used in Northern Ireland since 1968. [60334]

Mr. George Robertson: The Armed Forces and the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) first used rubber bullets in 1970 and last used them in 1975. The number of bullets used in Northern Ireland in each of those years is set out in the table:

Year	Number
1970	238
1971	16,752
1972	23,363
1973	12,724
1974	2,612
1975	145
Total	55,834

The records relating to rubber bullets used in Northern Ireland were maintained manually and to retrieve and split the information between the Armed Forces and the RUC would, even if possible, involve disproportionate costs.

In 1973 plastic baton rounds were introduced and eventually replaced rubber bullets completely in 1976.

Public Relations

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money was spent in the last financial year on public relations by the (a) AWEs, (b) Royal Ordnance plc, (c) British Army, (d) Royal Navy, (e) RAF and (f) Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [60021]

Mr. Spellar: Public relations expenditure by the organisations listed during the last financial year was:

Organisations	£
(a) Atomic Weapons Establishments (AWE)	250,000
(c) Army	618,000
(d) Royal Navy	1,160,000
(e) Royal Air Force	911,000
(f) DERA	232,000

Figures for the Army, Royal Navy and Royal Air Force include staff and programme costs for London Headquarters staff only. Expenditure on public relations activities outside my Department's headquarters is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public relations expenditure by (b) Royal Ordnance is a matter for Royal Ordnance plc.

Porton Down

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 October 1998, Official Report, columns 1110–11, on the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (Porton Down) Technical Papers, how many papers in the DERA reports series of technical papers are currently unclassified; when the DERA reports series of papers (a) started and (b) finished; and how many papers have so far been produced in the DERA reports series of papers. [60333]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 18 November 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Question about the DERA Reports series of technical papers, issued by DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD).

The series was started in April 1997 and is ongoing. To date 149 reports have been produced of which 49 are unclassified.

I hope this is helpful.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60117]

Mr. Spellar: Considerable progress is being made with a programme to ensure that MOD and Defence Agencies' critical computer systems and equipment with embedded chips are rectified before the millennium and other critical dates. In addition, contingency plans for critical systems are being developed where necessary. In terms of wider contingency planning for the millennium problem, long-standing arrangements exist under which local authorities can request military assistance, for example in the case of a civil emergency or natural disaster.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest assessment of the risks to UK Defence readiness in 1999–2000 from the (a) millennium computer problem and (b) embedded chip problem; and if he will make a statement. [59951]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The assessment of the risk to UK Defence readiness is performed by relating Defence capabilities to the computer systems and embedded chips which support them. A programme is in place to correct as a priority those critical systems the failure of which could adversely affect Defence capabilities. Where we see risks that programme slippage may occur, contingency plans are being produced. The overall programme is designed to ensure that Defence readiness will not be compromised.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60114]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the cost of resolving (a) the millennium computer problem and (b) the embedded chip problem, for the United Kingdom's armed forces; how much of this total has been spent to date; and if he will make a statement; [59950]

(3) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies to which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60116]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments' and agencies' progress in tackling the bug. This review also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. In the Ministry of Defence, it covered all Defence agencies, including the Meteorological Office, the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and the Hydrographic Agency. The information the hon. Member requests is available in the Departments' plans, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates, to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the Internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60115]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The Ministry of Defence has had a Year 2000 programme in place since early 1996. The programme is complex, with over 20,000 computer based systems to be evaluated. Priority is being given to finding solutions to those systems that pose a high risk to defence capability, and to obtaining assurances of millennium compliance from our suppliers. Progress by the MOD and other Government Departments was reported by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to the House on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109. A further progress report will be announced in the House in the near future.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60219]

Mr. Spellar: Taskforce 2000 have correctly recognised the scale of the problem facing the Ministry of Defence and the capability of our programme managers. To counter the millennium problem we have put in place a comprehensive assessment and rectification programme, including external audit of our processes, and considerable progress has been made. We are monitoring expenditure closely and believe that our cost estimate for the programme remains realistic. The principal objective of our programme is to identify and manage any risks to Defence capability arising from the millennium problem.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly and copies of the department's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the internet.

Human Rights

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which aspects of the Government's human rights policy are his Department's responsibility. [59868]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the right hon. Member to the answers given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Dept, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), on 24 April 1998, Official Report, columns 721–22, and by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Office, my hon. Friend the Member for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien), on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 647. The Ministry of Defence works in partnership with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the other Government Departments who have lead responsibilities for different aspects of the Government's human rights policy. This country is an advocate of democracy and human rights the world over and the Recent Strategic Defence review indicates how my Department will continue to play its part in supporting the Government in this.

Pilots (Retention)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to retain pilots in the Royal Air Force; what is the current average length of service of pilots in the RAF; and how many are members of the Royal Auxiliary Air Force. [59400]

Mr. Doug Henderson: A number of measures to improve pilot retention have been introduced or are under consideration by the Royal Air Force. Some pilots are being invited to serve beyond their normal retirement date and others who left the Royal Air Force at optional retirement points are being invited to re-join. Trials are being conducted to assess the utility of employing former regular RAF pilots as volunteer reservists on a variety of aircraft types. The RAF has also begun a wide-ranging study to ensure that the future officer career structure is aimed at developing and retaining the best people.

The current average length of service of qualified regular RAF pilots is 12.9 years.

On 1 November 1998, 29 trained pilots were serving in the Royal Auxiliary Air Force.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the amount which further education colleges receive for the education of college students funded under the Further Education Funding Council's regulations relative to the amount which they receive for those funded by the New Deal. [59178]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 11 November 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not made a detailed assessment.

Organisations wishing to deliver education and training provision in the Full-Time Education and Training (FTET) option of the New Deal for 18–24 year olds bid for contracts with the Employment Service, on the basis of competitive tendering. FE Colleges, along with other training providers, made a judgment on the level of funding they needed to deliver provision against the requirements in the New Deal specification.

Contracts have been signed for 3 years, and will be reviewed during this period.

Student Transport

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on new arrangements for transport assistance for students aged 16 years or over. [59586]

Mr. Mudie: We plan to introduce new arrangements for Further Education student support which will be fairer and better targeted from September 1999. These arrangements will be responsive to the needs of individual students, including assistance with transport, and will contribute towards our objectives of widening access and participation. We expect to make an announcement shortly.

"Partners in Europe"

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 90, how many requests he received from teachers to update material available on the European Union prior to the production of "Partners in Europe". [59879]

Mr. Mudie: The Department for Education and Employment had received requests to revise out of date materials for some time before the UK's 1998 Presidency of the EU. These requests were fed to the Department through various consultative bodies such as the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges and the Qualification and Curriculum Authority, and in informal meetings with teachers and their representatives.

Child Care

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what child care provision is made available by his Department for the use of staff; what is the cost to parents of this child care; how many parents used the facilities in the financial years (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what proportion of total staff used these facilities in the financial years (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98. [59726]

Mr. Mudie: The Department is committed to promoting equality of opportunity for its staff and supports a range of child care and family friendly policies which help staff to balance family and working life. We are considering how our child care and family provision could be further developed.

The Department currently supports holiday playscheme facilities on all of the Department's four headquarters sites. It also provides nursery facilities on its Runcorn and Sheffield sites. Facilities are often shared with other government organisations, in particular with the Employment Service HQ in Sheffield and with the Office for National Statistics in Runcorn.

Because on site facilities require a high level of investment, parents using Departmental child care schemes are normally required to make a contribution towards the cost, comparable to private sector schemes.

The current weekly DfEE nursery cost to parents are: Runcorn £63; Sheffield £57.

The current weekly playscheme costs to parents are: Darlington £32.50; London £40; Runcorn £40; Sheffield £32.50.

The number of parents and proportion of staff using these facilities are as set in the table.

	Number of parents	Proportion of total staff (%)
1996–97	290	5.8
1997–98	283	6.3

Disabled Students

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his assessment of the effect of the introduction of tuition fees and the abolition of the maintenance grant on the numbers of mature disabled students entering further and higher education; and if he will make a statement. [59644]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 16 November 1998]: Numbers of disabled applicants to higher education have held up well. The overall number of disabled applicants to higher education in universities and colleges this year has fallen by less than 1 per cent. from 1997's very high figure and is higher than the figure for 1996. The number of mature disabled applicants in 1998 has fallen by around 5 per cent. compared with 1997, which saw a late surge in applicants. This is relatively smaller than the fall in the corresponding number of mature applicants as a whole, which is attributable largely to demographic reasons and to the increase in the number of potential applicants who already have HE qualifications. To encourage disabled students we have abolished the means test for Disabled Students' Allowances and increased the amounts available through each such Allowance.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the proportion of his Department's computer systems which will be millennium compliant on 1 April 1999. [58847]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 16 November 1998]: According to current plans 91 per cent. of the Department's business critical computer systems will have been fully tested, corrected and put back into use by 1 April 1999. The remainder will be corrected and in service by 30 September 1999. The target date for the completion of work on non-business critical computer systems is 31 October 1999.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible arising from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60073]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 17 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided to him on 18 December 1997, Official Report, column 253. That answer outlined the plans in the Department, including its partner organisations in the wider education and employment sector, to ensure that services do not suffer material disruption as a result of the millennium date change issue. He will wish to note that good progress has subsequently been made in implementing these plans, with all milestones having been achieved.

He will also wish to note that no further problems or issues have either arisen or been identified since the earlier answer was provided last year.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60072]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60074]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 17 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments and agencies progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published in the Library of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the internet.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60075]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The Department has a large number of business processes. Each is being identified and assessed as part of the Year 2000 programme. Outline contingency plans for key services will be completed by January 1999. DfEE's Year 2000 Programme Board has also recently considered a Millennium Operating Regime which will form part of the overall contingency planning arrangements. This approach focuses particular attention on those risks which could impact directly on the services provided to members of the public. In my Department, these are provided by the Employment Service.

The Department has also completed an initial assessment of the state of preparedness of our many partner organisations in the wider eduction and employment sector. The risks in this wider sector are currently being identified and assessed. Some of our partner organisations have already developed contingency plans to minimise the threat of disruption. Where appropriate, other partner organisations will be encouraged to do likewise.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60215]

Mr. Mudie: A key element of the approach adopted by my Department to the Year 2000 date change is to subject its plans and processes to external audit. I welcome the assessment by Task Force 2000 which endorses the views of earlier audits and confirms that my Department is making good progress.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the Department for Education and Employments' latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the internet.

National Textile Training Organisation

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received regarding the establishment of a unified national textile training organisation. [60183]

Mr. Mudie: I have received one representation from the Transport and General Workers Union. The National Textile Training Organisation has submitted a bid for recognition as a National Training Organisation. As my hon. Friend is aware, the Recognition Process involves a rigorous analysis of an organisation's capacity to meet the criteria. The National Textile Training Organisation has yet to persuade officials that their bid is strong enough for submission to the Recognition Panel but discussions are continuing.

University for Industry

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the University for Industry will offer (a) courses and (b) places for trade union members. [60085]

Mr. Mudie: The University for Industry will be launched nationally in the year 2000. It will not be a direct learning provider but will rather act as a broker of learning opportunities. The full details of the range of provision with which it will connect learners are being developed, but initial priorities will include: information and communication technology; basic skills, management skills; and the specific industrial sectors of automotive components, the multimedia, environmental technology and the distributive and retail trades.

The University for Industry's activities will be directed at the widest possible range of individuals and organisations. Trade Unions should benefit from the greater and more flexible access to learning available for their members and will have a very important role to play in the University for Industry's success. A number of discussions have already been held between the TUC, officials of the University for Industry Division of the DfEE and the member of the Ufl transition team to explore how this might be taken forward.

School Meals

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which local education authorities have (a) devolved provision of school meals to individual schools, (b) contracted with private sector providers for the supply of school meals and (c) have done neither (a) nor (b). [59192]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 17 November 1998]: This information is not held centrally. Some local education authorities, for example Islington and Lambeth, are known to have already delegated school meals funding to schools, and others allow individual schools to request funding. Authorities were required under the Local Government Act 1988 to put school catering contracts out to tender, and as a result of doing so, some have contracted with private sector providers.

Access to Work

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 137, concerning access to work, what assessment he has made of the potential entitlement of disabled members of the Scottish Parliament, Welsh Assembly and London Assembly to support under the Access to Work scheme. [60299]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Access to Work provides help for disabled people in or about to start paid employment. It is designed to encourage employers to take on or retain disabled people by meeting some or all of the extra costs resulting from disability. The aim is to help disabled people in activities from which they earn their living. Disabled members of the Scottish Parliament, Welsh Assembly and London Assembly may be eligible for Access to Work support if their activities constitute paid employment.

I recently announced a new £30 million fund to help, over 3 years, disabled people who want to work. £12 million of this will boost the Action to Work programme, providing help with work costs for an extra 4,000 disabled people.

Human Rights

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which aspects of the Government's human rights policy are his Department's responsibility. [59869]

Ms Hodge: This Government are committed to promoting human rights at home and abroad. The Human Rights Act 1998 will increase the enforceability of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). My Department has particular responsibility for Article 2 of the first Protocol of the ECHR, which concerns the right to education, and for human rights at work as covered by the International Labour Organisation.

National Child Care Strategy

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish a summary of responses to the Green Paper on the National Childcare Strategy, Meeting the Childcare Challenge. [60662]

Ms Hodge: A summary of responses to the Green Paper 'Meeting the Childcare Challenge' is being published today. Copies have been placed in the Library and are available in the Vote and Printed Paper offices. We are grateful to everyone who took the time and trouble to respond to the Green Paper, which we issued in May.

We received over 600 responses to the consultation from a wide range of interests. Our proposals for meeting the needs of children and families clearly struck a chord with many people. Making a success of the Strategy depends on the commitment of a wide range of partners, so I was delighted with the overwhelming support we received.

Competitive Bidding

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many bids were (a) received and (b) successful in each local education authority for each competitive bidding process launched and managed by his Department since May 1997; [59195]

(2) how many of his Department's initiatives announced to date for the years 1998–99 and 1999–2000 include competitive bidding by (a) local education authorities, (b) education action zones and (c) others. [59196]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Details of the number of competitive bids submitted by local education authorities since May 1997, along with the number that were successful are given in tables that have been placed in the Library of the House. For 1998–99 there were 20 initiatives involving competitive bidding from local education authorities, which could include bids from education action zones. For 1999–2000 the equivalent figure is 14. Information on the number of competitive bids from other bodies is not held centrally.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Edgar Fernandes Case

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans ministers in his Department have to (a) visit Turkey and (b) discuss the case of Edgar Fernandes with the Turkish authorities. [59541]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 29 October 1998, Official Report, column 271, which set out the discussions my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State had with officials during her visit to Turkey in September. I will be visiting Turkey as part of a Trade Mission from 18–19 November. I have been briefed on this case. There are no plans for any other Ministers to visit Turkey at this time.

Youth for Europe

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the interpretation of the objectives of the Youth for Europe programme (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) in the rest of the European Union. [60005]

Ms Quin: The objectives of the Youth for Europe III programme, as set out in Decision No. 818/95/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 March 1995, apply throughout the EU. We fully support them. The programme is due to end on 31 December 1999 and negotiations on a follow up programme are at an advanced stage.

EU Documents

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) the policy on and (b) the extent of the practice of the destruction of European Union documents. [60001]

Ms Quin: The policy on archiving historical documents is laid down in Council Regulation (EEC/EURATOM) No. 354/83 of 1 February 1983. Criteria for what constitutes an historical document are laid down by each institution. All official, numbered Council and Commission documents are kept indefinitely. Descriptions of the policy and of its implementation are included in "Archives in the European Union (1994)" and "Guide to the archives of the Member States' Foreign Ministries and European institutions (1996)", both published by the Office for Official Publications of the European Communities.

Cardiff Summit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent from public funds on the provision of gifts distributed to journalists at the Cardiff summit. [59999]

Ms Quin: None. All promotional items/gifts for the press were provided by companies and organisations based in Wales.

Palestine

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy to assist the nations concerned to meet the 4 May deadline for the international recognition of the state of Palestine. [59893]

Mr. Fatchett: The Government's policy on this issue is clear. We, in line with EU partners, support the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, not excluding the option of a state. Palestinian statehood is an issue for final status negotiations. We hope both sides will concentrate their efforts on implementation of the Wye River Memorandum, which calls for the immediate resumption of final status talks aimed at completion before 4 May. We will do our utmost, both bilaterally and within the EU, to help both sides implement this agreement and assist the negotiations between the parties on final status issues.

Iran

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Baha'is in Iran. [60174]

Mr. Fatchett: We have taken the opportunity provided by meetings with Senior Iranian officials to express our serious disquiet about the treatment of the Baha'i community. Persecution of individuals on religious grounds is totally unacceptable. The May United Nations Commission on Human Rights resolution reaffirmed international concern about their situation. In early October, through our contracts with the UK Baha'i community, we became aware that death sentences on two Iranian Baha'is, Mr. Dhabihi-Muqaddam and Mr. Najafabadi, had recently been confirmed. On 4 October, we and our partners in the EU troika (Austrian Presidency and Germany) pressed the Iranian authorities not to carry out these two death sentences. We were told that the sentences were still subject to appeal and that executions were not imminent.

We are also aware, through our contracts with the Baha'i community in the UK, of a further wave of arrests of Baha'is across Iran around the end of September. These seem to have been directed primarily at teachers engaged in distance learning within the Baha'i community. Most of those concerned appear to have been released shortly after arrest but had to surrender property ownership deeds as a form of bail.

We will continue to monitor the situation carefully with our EU partners. We will take further action as necessary. In particular, we will continue to press the Iranians for more transparency about judicial process in these and other human rights cases.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of Diego Garcia as a base for a possible attack on Iraq. [60160]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The US authorities sought our agreement, in advance, for the use of facilities in Diego Garcia for US aircraft in connection with the Gulf crisis. It was given.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy that UNSCOM has to certify that Iraq has destroyed its weapons of mass destruction before UN sanctions on Iraq can be lifted. [60278]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: United Nations Security Council Resolution (SCR) 687 of April 1991 obliges Iraq to accept the destruction of its weapons of mass destruction and to undertake not to develop such weapons in the future. The United Nations Special Commission (UNSCOM) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) are the organisations tasked by the Security Council with overseeing these processes. Paragraph 22 of SCR 687 provides for the embargo on Iraqi exports to remain in force until the Security Council is satisfied that the requirements of SCR 687 have been fulfilled.

Burma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had about human rights violations in Burma. [59606]

Mr. Fatchett: The question of Burma's human rights record over the last six months was discussed at the General Affairs Council on 26 October, which agreed a strengthening of the EU Common Position. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary also raised Burma when he discussed human rights issues with the new German Foreign Minister Joseph Fischer on 29 October.

The UK co-sponsored the [illegible] General Assembly resolution tabled on Burma last week. I also recently convened a meeting in Kent for senior policy-makers of several countries to build international consensus on Burma.

Arms Transfers

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the information the Government have submitted to the United Nations since 1 May 1997 for entry on the UN Register of Conventional Arms Transfers. [60277]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Copies of the UK's 1997 and 1998 returns to the UN Register of Conventional Arms were placed in Library at the time of their submission to the UN.

Arms Sales

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the extent of the information he is willing to make available to the House on arms exports from the UK, with particular reference to (a) the degree of detailed description of arms, (b) information about numbers of individual weapons and weapons systems exported, (c) information on the countries of destination and (d) information on dates of export; and if he will make a statement. [60311]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave on 14 July 1998, Official Report, column 149.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he plans to introduce to assist small and medium manufacturing firms in the West Midlands to improve productivity and to innovate. [58844]

Mrs. Roche: The Government's plans to enhance the competitiveness of firms of all sizes throughout the country will be set out in the forthcoming Competitiveness White Paper.

Inward Investment (West Midlands)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to encourage inward investment projects in (a) Staffordshire and (b) the West Midlands [59543]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The Department's Invest in Britain Bureau (IBB) is giving grant support totalling £1.3 million to West Midlands Development Agency (WMDA) for the promotion of inward investment into the whole of the West Midlands working with their local partners who support their activities and ensure that sites and premises attractive to inward investors are available.

Millennium Experience

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to produce an official history of the Millennium Experience; and if he will make a statement. [60033]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company are considering a number of publications on the Millennium Experience project, including an official history.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those sponsors who have signed irrevocable contracts with the New Millennium Experience Company for (a) zones of the Dome and (b) national programme stands. [59671]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 16 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), 27 October 1998, Official Report, columns 129–30.

All the individual sponsorship packages which have been announced by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) are subject to the full commitment of the sponsor companies at Board level. The terms of the binding contracts on the detailed obligations of each part are at various stages of resolution and final signatures are imminent on several of them. Meanwhile all physical and other time critical work on the Millennium Experience is progressing on the basis of the Board commitments on both sides.

Hairdressing Trainees

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the position of trainees in the hairdressing industry and the application of the minimum wage. [60189]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have received a number of representations from hairdressing organisations about the application of the national minimum wage.

Intellectual Property Rights

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms his Department has for helping British inventors protect intellectual property rights which may have been infringed abroad. [60173]

Dr. Howells: Intellectual property rights are, in the main, private rights and it is for the owners to assert them both in the UK and abroad. However, officials in my Department work closely with UK industry to resolve general problems over enforcement of rights abroad. This includes work with industry organisations such as the Anti-Counterfeiting Group which provides useful advice and can act as a facilitator for collective action. Similarly, individual sector groups such as trade associations might also provide practical guidance and support.

If there is evidence that UK rights holders are having general difficulty enforcing rights abroad then a mechanism for addressing this is provided by TRIPS (the WTO Agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights) which amongst other things obliges member states to provide effective remedial action for aggrieved rights holders. Where criminal sanctions are also involved then these must act as a deterrent. A Council for TRIPS monitors the operation of the agreement and Governments' compliance with it and failure to abide by the agreement can give rise to the WTO dispute settlement procedure.

"Britain in Europe"

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contacts he had with the sponsors of the booklet Britain in Europe in order to facilitate its publication. [60002]

Mr. Mandelson: I have had no such contact.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 22 October 1998, Official Report, column 1174, if he will set out the procedures under which regional selective assistance is recovered. [59595]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The procedures are set out in Government Accounting, published by the Stationery Office.

The Department supplements this with the issue of Accounting Memoranda which give more detailed instructions and provide advice and information on internal accounting matters including standard forms. This material is not published.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60119]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Tackling the millennium bug is a major activity, presenting the normal problems of managing multiple concurrent tasks with the added dimension of limited time and dependence on suppliers and other external bodies. The programmes of work within the Department, its agencies and sponsored public bodies have been designed to take account of these factors as far as possible and no significant additional problems have been encountered. Priority areas for remedial work are those systems necessary to support critical activities within the organisations concerned.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60226]

Mrs. Roche: The DTI welcomes informed comment on its work in tackling the Year 2000 problem. The assessment referred to raised a number of points in respect of this department:

> Cost increase: It became clear during this year that more work would be required than expected when the original cost estimate was made in 1996. The likely increase was mentioned in our June return.
> Increased number of embedded systems: Audit work in this area will not be complete until the end of December. We have found more embedded items in some systems than originally thought.
> Progress on critical IT systems: As mentioned above, it has become clear that more work than originally anticipated will be needed, especially in relation to our main IT infrastructure. Nevertheless we remain on target to meet our declared aim of ensuring that critical IT systems are compliant by April 1999.

The report also comments on a lack of information in returns from some of the Department's Next Steps Agencies and sponsored organisations. The organisations concerned are making energetic progress on their programmes. Future returns will seek to provide a further understanding of their work.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of DTI's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the internet.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the internal audit of his Department's progress and plans for tackling the millennium bug to be completed; and if he will place a copy of it in the Library. [60206]

Mrs. Roche: Reports from this work are expected to be completed by the end of next month. It is not normal practice to publish these internal management reports but the DTI will, of course, continue to provide quarterly reports on its progress, including the results of this audit work when they are available. Those progress reports will continue to be placed in the Library and published on the internet.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons his Department's September quarterly returns on progress in dealing with the impact of the millennium bug on business-critical systems shows a lower percentage coverage than in the June quarterly return. [60207]

Mrs. Roche: Both the June and September returns showed that DTI had completed the inventory work for business critical systems. Our response to a separate question which asked about inventory and audit work, a wider category of activity, reported that 5 per cent. would not be completed until the fourth quarter of 1998.

At the time of compiling the June return we predicted that audit work would be complete by the end of June. However, by the time the September report was compiled it was clear that additional audit work would be needed, particularly in relation to our main IT infrastructure.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance including the embedded chip problem after 31 December 1999. [60121]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 17 November 1998]: The DTI has high level plans for dealing with emergencies and more detailed planning is under way. Initial year 2000 contingency plans will be in place by the end of January 1999, in accordance with central guidance. These will be reviewed and refined if necessary as we approach 31 December 1999. The department has a robust programme to address millennium compliance problems connected with building operations and is also drawing up plans to ensure that its key activities can be maintained even if some embedded systems do fail.

Similarly, the Department's Next Steps Agencies, and the significant public sector bodies sponsored by the Department, already have plans which address some of the potential problems. These will be reviewed and refined as necessary during 1999.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the risks posed by gasometers, gas storage bullets and other gas storage methods at unmanned facilities in relation to the millennium bug; [60262]

(2) what assessment he has made of the preparedness of the gas industry in relation to the millennium bug; [60261]

(3) what steps he has taken to ensure that gas supplies will not be interrupted by the millennium bug; and what assessment he has made of the likelihood of interruption. [60280]

Mrs. Roche: The Department maintains regular contact with the Health and Safety Executive on potential safety hazards associated with the gas supply, and is working closely with OFGAS and Action 2000 to monitor the steps being taken by the gas industry to identify and rectify potential year 2000 problems. The industry has projects in place covering manned and unmanned facilities. Information about the steps being taken is available on the Transco Internet site.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likelihood of interruptions to electricity supplies as a result of the millennium bug. [60279]

Mrs. Roche: The electricity industry is making extensive preparations to ensure that it will be business as usual over the period of the century date change. Each company is carrying out its own thorough assessment of its systems—in particular its critical systems—to identify and remedy any problems which might affect the security of supply before the end of 1999.

The Government, through Action 2000, have established a National Infrastructure Forum which brings together the main providers and users of the key infrastructural services. As a key part of the Forum's work, Action 2000 are leading an Independent Assessment Project to assess the state of preparedness of key services, including the electricity industry.

The electricity Regulator, OFFER, will be carrying out an independent audit of the preparations in each company. OFFER will also be co-operating with the Electricity Association in its end-to-end risk assessment for the industry. The first results of these assessments should be available in January.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Industry has written to the Chief Executives of the main electricity companies to make it clear that the Government expect their full co-operation in this process. He has raised the issue with the companies over the last several months and will continue to promote progress between now and the millennium.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that telecommunications services will not be interrupted by the millennium bug; and what assessment he has made of the likelihood of interruption. [60282]

Mrs. Roche: Oftel has responsibility for safeguarding the integrity of the core telecommunications network and has established a year 2000 project to monitor and assess the telecommunications industry's preparations. Oftel has taken steps to ensure that telecoms services are not disrupted over the millennium. All the main network operators are cooperating with Oftel, are taking the issue seriously, and have outlined their plans to meet this challenge. Oftel is keeping the preparations of the network operators under review.

Action 2000 is working closely with Oftel to ensure rigorous assessment programmes are in place, and has requested that Oftel add independent assessment of the key dial tone providers to a peer review of the telecom operators already being undertaken. It is difficult to make a precise assessment of the likelihood of interruption. Oftel expects that the principal sectors of the industry will be Year 2000 compliant during the first half of 1999.

Energy Council

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Energy Council meeting on 13 November. [60653]

Mr. Battle: The Council had a full agenda of matters of interest to the United Kingdom.

I am particularly pleased to report that the Council agreed to revise the Oil Stocks Directive which requires all member States to hold contingency oil stocks. The revised Directive, which will come into force on 1 January 2000, introduces important amendments including a strengthening of support for bilateral agreements, clearer definitions and simplified reporting times. As a result of the revision, the United Kingdom, as an exporter of oil, will be eligible for a reduction in its stocking obligation. This change could lead to savings of around £10 million per annum for the British oil industry.

The Council also adopted the basic decision on the Energy Framework Programme. This multi-annual programme brings together Community spending programmes in the field of energy. In addition to the basic Decision, the Council adopted four of the specific instruments—ETAP (shared studies and analyses), SYNERGY (international co-operation), CARNOT (clean and efficient use of solid fuels), SURE (safe transport of nuclear materials and safeguards). The Council reached an informal political agreement on the remaining programmes, ALTERNER (renewable energy) and SAVE (energy conservation), pending the opinion of the European Parliament. Views on the appropriate budget varied between Member States but after negotiation a total financial reference amount of 170 mecu (£119 million) over five years was agreed, to be reviewed after three years.

Another important element of the Council concerned a number of energy and environment issues.

In response to the call made at the Cardiff European Council, the Council agreed a Report on the integration of environmental objectives into energy policy. This Report, along with those being prepared by the Transport and Agriculture Councils, will be submitted to the Vienna Council in December.

The Energy Council held an open debate on renewable energy. I stressed the need to consider the best way to support renewable energy within the internal energy market which included cross-border trade. I reported on our positive practical programme of support for renewables to achieve our 10 per cent. target. I called for national support schemes to have the key elements of competition, flexibility and transparency such as those contained in the UK's Non Fossil Fuel Obligation. Also there was the need to develop clear and transparent guidelines for the connection, operation and commercial terms for small plants. To ensure this work is taken forward, I called for the establishment of a task force bringing together the Commission and Member States to co-ordinate efforts, exchange experiences and share problems in order to keep up the momentum of promoting renewable energy sources at European level.

The Council adopted a Resolution on Energy Efficiency which complements the work on renewables. It recognises that more energy saving measures (such as minimum standards, best practice and voluntary agreements) are needed, inter alia, to enable the Community and Member States to meet their Kyoto Protocol commitments. The resolution proposes indicative energy efficiency targets and calls on the Commission to produce an action plan.

The Council received information from the Commission on the development of the single market in electricity and Trans-European energy Networks. It received a report on the Energy Charter Treaty and, in this connection, agreed a political statement on transit.

Postage Stamps

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the (a) names and (b) locations of companies with contracts to print British postage stamps; and if he will make a statement on the procedure by which these contracts are allocated. [60492]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I understand from the Post Office that contracts to print British postage stamps are held by De La Rue Security Print—Buckinghamshire, Walsall Security Print—West Midlands, House of Questa—London and John Enschede Security Print—The Netherlands.

The procedure by which these contracts are allocated is through competitive tendering in accordance with public procurement policy and international obligations under the World Trade Organisation Government Procurement Agreement where applicable.

EU Structural Funds

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the areas in (a) Scotland and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom covered by (i) Article 92(3)(a) and (ii) Article 92(3)(c) of the Treaty establishing the European Community; what was the UK position at the European General Affairs Council on 9 November on the proposed links between the above articles and the new Objective 1 and Objective 2 respectively; what areas in Scotland would be affected by such links and how; and if he will make a statement. [60508]

Mrs. Roche: Northern Ireland is the only part of the United Kingdom covered under Article 92(3)(a). Detailed coverage of the areas covered under Article 92(3)(c) is set out in Statutory Instrument Number 1877, Industrial Development—the Assisted Areas Order 1993, as amended by Statutory Instrument Number 1894, Assisted Areas (Amendment) Order 1993. Copies of both are in the Library of the House.

The Government's position at the European General Affairs Council on 9 November was unchanged from our previous position. We believe that state aids and structural funds are designed for different purposes, and therefore consistency should not be imposed at either Objective 1 or Objective 2 level.

The review of the Assisted Areas and of the Structural Funds are both continuing. It is, therefore, impossible to predict with any certainty what the impact is likely to be for any part of the United Kingdom.

EU Late Payment

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the total sum outstanding to British companies as a result of late payment of invoices by the EU under the TACIS programme for work undertaken in the CIS. [56855]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 28 October 1998]: The European Commission does not keep a record of outstanding payments but the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Gateshead, East and Washington (Ms Quin), raised the issue with the Commission in Brussels on 16 November, following up earlier action by senior officials at the Department for International Development.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking with regard to the late payment to British companies by the EU under the TACIS programme for work undertaken in the CIS. [60388]

Mrs. Roche: I am concerned about the late payment to British companies by the European Commission under the Tacis programme. The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West (Ms Quin), raised the issue with the Commission in Brussels on 16 November, following up earlier action by senior officials at the Department for International Development.

European Funding (Coastal Resorts)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which coastal resorts receive assistance from (a) the European Regional Development Fund and (b) the European Social Fund. [59840]

Mrs. Roche: The list sets out the UK coastal areas eligible for European Regional Development Funding.

In addition, coastal areas are eligible for a number of EU Community Initiative programmes. In particular, the PESCA Community Initiative, which provides assistance to regions facing difficulties as a result of the decline of the fishing industry, is available in a wide range of coastal areas, including Fleetwood, Lytham St. Anne's and Whitehaven.

All areas in the UK, including coastal resorts, are eligible for European Social Funding.

Business Start-ups

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the proportion of start-up businesses in the West Midlands metropolitan district; and what measures he plans to increase the number of business start-ups. [60483]

Mrs. Roche: Although VAT registrations are not synonymous with business start-ups, the following data are often used. The VAT figures for 1994 to 1996 (the latest available) show business formation rate in the metropolitan districts to exceed those of the West Midlands region and the UK. The decline in the formation rate in the metropolitan area brought it close to the rate for the UK in 1996.

	Business Formations
VAT registrations 1994–96	Stock at year start	VAT registrations	Formation rate (per cent.)

Figures from Barclays Bank show business start-ups in the West Midlands region were estimated at 45,000 start-ups in 1996 and 48,000 in 1997, a seven per cent. increase.The creation of new small businesses is dependent primarily on a climate of stable, sustained economic growth. The Government have taken decisive action to establish a new framework for monetary policy to ensure economic stability. The Government are also committed to helping businesses overcome financial, regulatory and other barriers to establishment and growth. Practical help is provided by the Business Link Network in England which assists businesses of all sizes and at all stages. Further specific measures will be announced in the Department's forthcoming White Paper.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many units of Part 3 accommodation have been completed in each of the last five years in each local authority area. [59203]

Mr. Raynsford: The available data are given in the publication "Local Housing Statistics" which shows estimates of new housebuilding for the elderly and for the chronically sick and disabled. This publication gives figures for each local authority area in England, as reported to the Department by the local authority concerned.

"Local Housing Statistics" issue number 110 shows figures for 1993; number 114 covers 1994; number 118 covers 1995; number 122 covers 1996–97; and number 126 covers 1997–98.

Copies of this publication are in the Library.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the total cost of local government reorganisation in each of the last five years (a) in each county area and (b) to his Department. [58741]

Ms Armstrong: Resources in the form of Supplementary Credit Approvals (SCAs) are made available to reorganising authorities under the local government reorganisation costs scheme. The SCAs issued to each authority under the schemes for 1994–95, 1995–96, 1996–97 and the maximum amounts issued under the 1998–99 scheme are set out in the table.

The basis of the schemes for SCAs, which commenced in 1994–95 and will continue to 2000–2001, is that they are intended to assist authorities in the short term with the funding of their set up costs, until savings and receipts are realised. The borrowing covered by these approvals must be repaid over a period of ten years, under the terms of the scheme. Therefore, a true assessment of the cost, if any, of local government reorganisation will not be possible for a number of years. The Government's expectation was that, in the longer term, the benefits would offset the costs, although it is acknowledged that much depends on the approach of the individual authority for which they are accountable to their electorate.

We believe that SCAs will have covered the vast bulk of initial costs identified by authorities, under the bidding terms of the scheme, as unavoidable and arising directly from reorganisation.

Sellafield

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from the Minister for Energy in the Republic of Ireland concerning the commissioning of the mixed oxide plant at Sellafield; and what response he has made. [59211]

Mr. Meale: Mr. Jacob has written to my Department raising concerns about the Environment Agency's proposed decisions on the Sellafield discharge authorisations and the operation of the Mixed-Oxide Plant at Sellafield. Requests have been made to Ministers to call in the applications for their own determination. In reply, we are assuring Mr. Jacob that his concerns and, indeed, all representations on the applications, are being carefully considered. My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will announce their decisions as soon as they are able to do so.

London Taxis ("Knowledge" Test)

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow the Public Carriage Office to charge individuals undertaking the knowledge of London test. [59487]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The matter is under consideration.

Biological Diversity Convention

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the Government's objectives are in the negotiation of the Biosafety Protocol to the Convention on Biological Diversity. [59651]

Mr. Meale: The Government's objective in the negotiation of the Biosafety Protocol to the Convention on Biological Diversity is to secure a broad protocol covering the transboundary movements of all living modified organisms (LMOs) resulting from modern biotechnology which may have an adverse effect on the conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity or human health. Importing countries should have adequate information and capacity to be able to make informed decisions about how to control transboundary movements of such organisms. For this reason, the Government are pressing in the negotiations for effective advance informed agreement procedures, in line with the precautionary principle, extensive information exchange, provisions on risk assessment, and capacity building. There should be clear labelling of LMOs, consistent with our domestic and European Community policy on labelling of genetically modified organisms. The Government will work towards an instrument that will attract a maximum number of countries to ratify it. In this way, the Biosafety Protocol and the UNEP International Technical Guidelines for Safety in Biotechnology, should provide a sound international framework for safety in biotechnology.

Reed Beds

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation he has made of the use of reed beds in filtering manufacturing effluent; and what steps he is taking to promote such use. [59652]

Mr. Meale: None. The assessment of the suitability of using reed beds as a means of filtering manufacturing effluent is essentially for the industry or body concerned. Monitoring of effluent treated in this way is a matter for the sewerage undertaker or the Environment Agency depending upon where it is eventually discharged.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the disposal of (a) nuclear waste and (b) toxic waste from Windscale/Sellafield, and on recent reports that such materials were tipped into the Irish Sea off Holyhead. [59697]

Mr. Meale: I am aware of recent reports suggesting that toxic and radioactive waste from Windscale were dumped in the Irish Sea off Holyhead in the 1950s and early 1960s. Similar reports appeared in the press last year but extensive searches by Government Departments of archive records relating to sea dumping of radioactive waste did not identify any evidence to support them. However, as part of that research, the Ministry of Defence confirmed that radioactive miss-distance indicators were disposed of in Holyhead Deep in 1974. Details of those disposals were announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, last year.

An independent assessment of the disposals, conducted by the National Radiological Protection Board, confirmed that they were of no radiological significance. A copy of the NRPB report on the disposals was placed in the Library of the House in November 1997. The Ministry of Defence is still undertaking record searches for other previously unreported sea dumpings of radioactive waste and will be announcing the results of that research in due course.

Some reports have claimed that the waste in question arose from the Windscale Pile 1 fire which occurred in 1957. I understand that the material resulting from the fire was, in fact, retained on site and either processed, stored or disposed of there. The Government are not aware of any of the material being sent for disposal at sea, although it is possible that very small quantities of fuel and isotopes could have been dispatched to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority site at Harwell for analysis, and the residues disposed of by authorised sea disposal routes.

Water Companies

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the current return on capital employed in the privatised water industries. [59786]

Mr. Meale: In 1997–98, the Director General of Water Services has reported that the overall return before tax on the regulatory capital value of the water undertakers, both the privatised water and sewerage companies and the private sector water supply companies, was 10.1 per cent. Explanation of the basis of this figure and information on the returns of each individual company are published by the Director General of Water Services in his annual "Report on the financial performance and capital investment of the water companies in England and Wales", copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what were the average profits of privatised water companies over the past 10 years. [59577]

Mr. Meale: The table shows the aggregate profits before tax of the water undertakers, both the privatised water and sewerage companies and the private sector water supply companies, in each of the years since privatisation. Information on the profits of each individual company is published by the Director General of Water Services in his annual "Report on the financial performance and capital investment of the water companies in England and Wales", copies of which are in the Library.

National Bus Company Pension Scheme

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects his Department's investigation into the National Bus Company pension schemes to be concluded. [60098]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department is not carrying out any investigation into the National Bus Company pension schemes. However, the Department's lawyers have recently opened discussions with lawyers for the NBC pensions trustees on achieving a just out-of-court settlement to the trustees' claim for return of the pension surplus paid over following NBC's privatisation.

High priority is being given to achieving as soon as possible a conclusion to these discussions which is satisfactory to all concerned.

Isle of Wight

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the local government boundaries commission's proposals for the Isle of Wight in relation to the unitary council elections of 2001. [60040]

Mr. Raynsford: We have consulted on a draft Order to give effect to the Local Government Commission for England's proposals for the Isle of Wight. Having considered the representations received, our current intention remains to make the Order to take effect from the usual election day in 2001.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when the Highways Agency will hand over responsibility for trunk roads to county councils; [59891]

(2) how soon standard spending assessments will be adjusted to take account of additional responsibility placed on county councils of maintaining, repairing and improving trunk roads. [59892]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The transfer of non-core trunk roads to local highway authorities is expected to take some years to complete. It is intended that standard spending assessments will be adjusted to coincide with actual transfers. We published on 11 November a paper setting out how it is planned to take forward the detrunking proposals and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Social Housing (Birmingham)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the capital investment was in publicly owned and other social housing at 1994–95 prices in the Birmingham Metropolitan District in (a) 1979–80, (b) 1984–85, (c) 1989–90 and (d) each of the subsequent years; and what is the amount planned for 1999–2000. [60252]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department has not been able to produce all the figures requested in the time available. I will write shortly to my hon. Friend setting out those figures which are available for the years given and place a copy of the information in the Library.

BSG Property Services

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in relation to BSG Property Services Limited of Everton, Bedfordshire, and the effects of Schedule 1 to the Housing Act 1996; and if he will make a statement. [60186]

Mr. Raynsford: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member, and place a copy of my response in the Library.

Coastal Resorts

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which coastal resorts have received funding from the Single Regeneration Budget. [59839]

Mr. Meale: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 188, to the very similar question from my hon. Friend the Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Campbell).

Housing Management CCT

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow local authorities an exemption from housing management CCT, providing best value arrangements are in place. [60177]

Mr. Raynsford: None. Exemptions from CCT, including housing management, have been given to selected authorities piloting best value. For all other authorities, changes were made to CCT regulations and guidance in December 1997 to reduce the prescriptive element of CCT and to enable authorities to adopt best value practices consistent with current legislation.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which standard spending assessments take sparsity of population into account when calculating revenue support grants. [60248]

Ms Armstrong: The sparsity allowance is included in the following SSA formulae; Education—Primary, Secondary, post-16 and Under 5; Police; and Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services at district and county levels.

Climate Change

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the current reviews and consultations which are being undertaken by his Department on climate change and sustainable development. [59993]

Mr. Meale: A consultation on policy options for meeting the UK's climate change targets began on 26 October 1998 and will end on 12 February 1999. This consultation will eventually lead to the development of a new UK climate change programme in good time for ratification of the Kyoto Protocol. The Government's consultation on the revision of the 1994 UK sustainable development strategy was held between 4 February and 29 May 1998. A series of consultation documents on Tourism, Business, Construction, Biodiversity and Forestry were also published as supplements to the main consultation paper "Opportunities for Change". The Government are aiming to publish a revised sustainable development strategy in early 1999.

Fire and Rescue Services

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the applicability of the proposed new models of local authority leadership to fire and rescue authorities; and if he will make a statement. [60193]

Mr. Raynsford: As stated in the White Paper "Modern Local Government—In Touch with the People" (Cm 4014), we will consult widely before putting any new models in place. Such consultation will include consideration of the applicability of any model to single service authorities, including metropolitan fire and civil defence authorities and combined fire authorities.

Landfill Tax

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of the Economic Secretary to the Treasury of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 100, when his Department proposes to issue exemptions from landfill tax; and if he will make a statement. [59927]

Mr. Meale: Exemptions to the landfill tax were considered in the last budget. A recommendation was made for the introduction of an exemption for the restoration of landfill sites and the backfilling of quarries with effect from 1 October 1999. DETR is committed to this recommendation which is currently being developed in discussion with other Government Departments. No further exemptions are being considered at this time.

Water Supplies (Millennium Bug)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure that water supplies will not be interrupted by the millennium bug; and what assessment he has made of the likelihood of interruption. [60281]

Mr. Meale: The Director General of Water Services has been asked to take the lead in monitoring the water industry's progress in ensuring that potential millennium problems are minimised. A Water Regulators Group, which includes representatives from the Drinking Water Inspectorate, Environment Agency, Health and Safety Executive, Action 2000 and my Department, has been set up under the chairmanship of OFWAT. OFWAT have commissioned consultants to investigate the work each water company is doing and to visit a number of companies. Their report was published on 22 October. It is clear that water companies are making progress but there is still some work to be done and OFWAT will ensure that water companies keep up the momentum.

Water Charging

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will announce the results of the consultation exercise held earlier this year on water charging in England and Wales. [60595]

Mr. Meacher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are today publishing our response to the consultation exercise we undertook earlier this year on water charging in England and Wales, "Water Charging in England and Wales: Government Decisions following Consultation".

The driving principles behind the Government's policy are to deliver a system which provides for fair and affordable water charges, particularly for vulnerable customers, while ensuring the sustainable use of water supplies and protection of the aquatic environment. Increased customer choice is an essential ingredient.

When we consulted earlier this year, we put forward a number of policy options. The response to consultation confirms our proposals in a number of areas:

i. Those who currently pay on an unmeasured basis and use water only for essential domestic purposes should be able to continue to pay on this basis in their current home.

ii. We propose to remove the threat of disconnection for non-payment for homes, schools and hospitals.

iii. We propose that domestic customers who currently pay on an unmeasured basis should be able to have a meter fitted, free of charge. Those who request a meter should have the option of reverting to an unmeasured charge within 12 months where that suits their needs.

iv. We propose targeted protection for vulnerable groups with high essential water use who have to pay a measured charge and would be unduly disadvantaged by doing so.

v. We propose to remove the deadline of 31 March 2000 for the use of rateable value as a basis of water charging.

We believe that these policies will fulfil our commitments to increased customer choice, with protection for the most vulnerable groups.

Many people will continue to pay on an unmeasured charge in the future but measured charges can, in the right circumstances, encourage individual customers to use water efficiently. Our policies will ensure that those who would prefer to pay by meter will be able to do so without paying an initial installation cost. We remain firmly of the view that people using water only for essential domestic purposes in their current homes who are currently paying on an unmeasured basis should not be obliged to have their charges set by volume. Our proposals will ensure that people will have to switch to paying on a measured basis in their current homes only if they choose to do so, unless they are using water for non-essential purposes.

We believe that water is essential for life and health, and that no-one should be deprived of it simply because of an inability to pay. Our proposals will mean an end to domestic disconnections, and will ensure that no school or hospital is ever disconnected for non-payment of water bills. We will also ensure that vulnerable groups, in particular large families on low-incomes and those with medical conditions requiring higher than usual water use, are protected from high water charges in the event that they live in a metered property.

Copies of the Government's document "Water Charging in England and Wales: Government Decisions following Consultation" have been placed in the Library of the House.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the information concerning the commercial release of genetically modified crops in 1999 and 2000 will be held on a public register; and what this information will include. [60249]

Mr. Meale: Information concerning the commercial release of genetically modified crops in 1999 and 2000 will not be held on a public register. However, we anticipate that all commercial planting in 1999–2000 will be in the form of the farm-scale releases announced in the statement by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment to the House of Lords Select Committee on 21 October. Details of these releases will be published.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans there are for the disposal of the genetically modified crops grown as a result of the full-scale farm trials announced on 21 October. [60250]

Mr. Meale: For the farm-scale releases which are conducted under part C approval (marketing consent) of Directive 90/220/EEC, the crops may be used in accordance with the scope set out in the original marketing notification. For those conducted under part B approval (research purposes) the release consent will specify the method of disposal.

Countryside Access

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to publish his responses to the Government's consultation process on access to the countryside before the Christmas adjournment. [60170]

Mr. Meacher: We are considering carefully responses to our consultation paper, Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales. We intend to publish my Department's analysis of responses and to announce our conclusions as soon as possible. I cannot say, at this stage, whether this will be before the Christmas adjournment.

Rail Ticket Prices

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to ensure that rail ticket prices do not rise by more than the price of inflation. [60364]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The price of key fares—including Savers, standard singles and returns where there are no Savers and weekly seasons—is capped under the franchise agreements which govern the provision of services. From 1 January 1999, these fares may not rise by more than one percentage point below inflation. In the London area, a wider range of products is regulated, and there is an adjustment to the fares cap which provides for additional increases and decreases according to service performance. Fares which are not capped are determined commercially by train operating companies. In the last three years, average fares, both capped and uncapped, have risen by less than the value of inflation.

Aviation Fuel

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the quantity of aviation fuel sold in 1997 at United Kingdom airports. [60454]

Ms Glenda Jackson: 8.45 million tonnes of aviation fuel were uplifted in the United Kingdom in 1997. This includes fuel used by domestic and international airlines, the aircraft industry, the armed services, and for private and business flying.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the allocation of carbon emission rights on an equal per capita basis; and to what extent these were taken into account in the British negotiating position during the COP4 climate change convention in Buenos Aires. [60491]

Mr. Meale: My right hon. Friend received a number of representations concerning the allocation of carbon emission rights on an equal per capita basis, which were taken account of in establishing the UK position for the Buenos Aires Conference. Discussion of this issue took place at the Conference in the context of both emissions trading and future emission targets for all Parties.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has commissioned concerning the development of domestic tradable quotas as a means of reducing carbon dioxide emissions. [60490]

Mr. Meale: A domestic carbon trading scheme was one of the options considered by Lord Marshall in his report on economic instruments and the business use of energy, which was published on 3 November. The Government are currently considering his conclusions and recommendations and will evaluate the need for further research in that context.

Packaging Waste Regulations

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce changes to the Packaging Waste Regulations. [60171]

Mr. Meale: A consultation document on the review of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997, was issued on 30 July this year and the consultation period ended on 30 September. We are currently considering the responses and expect to make an announcement on the way-forward in December. Any statutory changes to the Regulations will be subject to Parliamentary approval.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the operation of the Packaging Waste Regulations 1997 on the independent waste paper processing industry. [60488]

Mr. Meacher: A consultation document on the review of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997, was issued on 30 July this year and the consultation period ended on 30 September.

There were a number of responses to the Consultation Paper from independent waste paper processors, including the Independent Waste Paper Processors Association, which represents one hundred and three members. Their concerns have been noted and will be taken into consideration when a final decision on the Review is reached. The Government intend to make an announcement on the way forward soon.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the compliance costs are under the packaging waste regulations for (a) typical major food retailers and (b) packaging manufacturers. [60338]

Mr. Meale: It is difficult at this stage to estimate the costs faced by a typical business or by different parts of the packaging chain. For the purposes of the Regulations, obligated businesses must identify which sector they are in, but they may perform more than one activity with respect to packaging. There are however, a number of implicit costs associated with compliance, including: initial registration; annual collection and supply of data, calculation of recovery and recycling obligations; facilitating sufficient recovery and recycling of packaging waste to meet obligations and obtaining supporting evidence of compliance and submitting a certificate of compliance. The compliance costs will also be determined by the amount of obligation facing each company.

The Regulations share the obligation to recover and recycle target levels of packaging waste between the four main sectors in the packaging chain according to the "activity" performed with regard to packaging and on the percentages agreed by industry on 15 December 1995. The "activity" obligations in the Regulations are:

Raw materials manufacturer 6 per cent.

Convertor 11 per cent.

Packer/filler 36 per cent.

Seller 47 per cent.

The costs faced by retailers or packaging manufacturers will depend on the product range including the range of materials handled, the size of the firm and the ease with which packaging waste can be recovered and data obtained. Consequently, we are unable to distinguish between the relative costs faced by firms in different sectors of the packaging chain.

The consultation paper on the review of the Regulations issued on 30 July included a draft Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA). This asked businesses to provide the Department with some further information on costs. Revisions will be made and a further RIA will be produced when the Regulations are amended.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60210]

Mr. Meale: I welcome the independent assessment of my Department's recent quarterly returns on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. I can assure the hon. Member that the Department is making every effort to deal with the problems identified particularly as the assessment reinforces that made by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council in September. My Department is pleased to note the positive feedback on progress in the Centre. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of DETR latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the Internet.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy that all local authorities should publish details of their Year 2000 planning; and if he will make a statement. [60209]

Mr. Raynsford: We wish to see all public sector bodies publishing their plans for dealing with the millennium bug and reporting every 100 days on their progress against their plans. We are working with the Local Government Association to achieve this in the local government sector.

Regional Eurostar Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the timescale for the review of regional Eurostar services. [59441]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The review is to be presented to Government shortly, and we will report the outcome to the House before the end of the year.

Flooding (Guidance)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review planning guidance in respect of areas prone to flooding; and if he will make a statement. [60243]

Mr. Raynsford: Existing guidance, which was issued in 1992 as DOE Circular 30/92 (MAFF Circular FD 1/92), already advises strongly against development in areas prone to flooding. The Independent Review of the Easter Floods found that, in recent years, local planning authorities had heeded advice from the Environment Agency on development in flood plains but that there was a legacy of imprudent past development in areas at risk of flooding.

The Government indicated in their response to the Agriculture Select Committee Report on Flood and Coastal Defence (House of Commons Paper 1117), which was published on 29 October, that they will consider, in the light of that report and the recent report of the Independent Review of the Easter Floods, together with any specific evidence from the Environment Agency or any other parties regarding deficiencies in the planning system, whether the present guidance to local planning authorities needs to be made even more emphatic. My Department will review the evidence with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Environment Agency to determine by the spring of next year what revision, if any, would help in directing future development so as to avoid adding to the problem.

Meanwhile, the Government continue to look to local planning authorities and the Environment Agency to maintain effective liaison on flood risk matters, both in terms of preparing development plans and in determining individual planning applications. In doing so, local authorities should continue to take the advice of Circular 30/92 into account.

Bus Passes

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to review the operation of the London Regional Transport Act 1984 so as to equalise the age at which bus passes are made available to male and female pensioners; and if he will make a statement. [60416]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. Provision was made in the Pension Act 1995 for the age at which women became eligible for concessionary travel schemes to be raised from 60 to 65 years over a transitional period from 2010 to 2020. This maintains the link between concessionary travel and pensions, and eliminates the discrimination against men. The Government have no plans to change these dates.

Social Exclusion

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to better co-ordinate Government policies to combat poverty and social exclusion in rural areas. [58917]

Mr. Meale: The Government believe in the importance of integrating policies for rural areas, and ensuring that the rural dimension is fully reflected in wider policy-making. DETR is developing better arrangements with MAFF for the joint planning of countryside and rural policies and programmes; Regional Development Agencies will be taking an integrated approach to the regeneration of deprived areas in all parts of their regions; and the new countryside agency to be formed in April 1999 will be promoting and developing policies to overcome disadvantage and social exclusion in rural areas.

The Rural Development Commission has recently published reports on two major research projects on rural deprivation: Developing Indicators of Rural Disadvantage and Rural Disadvantage—Understanding the Processes. We will be taking forward the findings of these reports with the new countryside agency.

Audit Fees (Councils)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much was paid by local and parish councils in England for audit fees in each of the last five years; and what proportion of their budget this represented for each of those years. [60423]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not available centrally. I will ask the Controller of Audit to write to my hon. Friend with details of the audit fees charged for the years concerned.

National Air Traffic Services

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultation has taken place with the International Civil Aviation Organisation on the option of a public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services with regard to the current NATS contract for the control of international airspace in the Eastern Atlantic; and if NATS would be allowed to operate a for profit air traffic control service for ICAO in international airspace. [59964]

Dr. Reid: A copy of the consultation paper "A public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS)", published on 20 October, has been sent to the Secretary General of the International Civil Aviation Organisation, and the Government will be happy to discuss any matters on which ICAO wishes to comment. The provision of air traffic control services in the Eastern Atlantic is the responsibility of the Governments of the UK and the Republic of Ireland, by virtue of an international agreement reached under the aegis of the International Civil Aviation Organisation. We believe that—as long as charges are reasonable—our international partners, and the airlines using the service, will regard the safety, reliability and quality of the service provided as more important than the status of the service provider.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how a structure of incentives and disciplines will be established to maximise efficiency in the event of a public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services; [59961]

(2) what contingency plans he has for replacing National Air Traffic Services after the introduction of a public/private partnership in the event of failure to comply with an enforcement notice; [59960]

(3) how the Government will maintain sufficient rights and safeguards in respect of (a) national security, (b) the United Kingdom's international relationships and (c) other public interests, if the proposed public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services goes ahead; [59956]

(4) if the Government will ensure that National Air Traffic Services plc cannot be taken over by a non-British company at a future date; [59959]

(5) what contingency plans he has made in the event of the company becoming insolvent under the option of a public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services; with particular reference to (a) the conduct of licensed activities pending transfer to another company, (b) the transfer of an insolvent company as a going concern to ensure that the licensed activities could be carried on and (c) staff terms and conditions. [60154]

Dr. Reid: The detailed arrangements for the proposed public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS) have not yet been determined, and we wish to take full account of responses to the consultation paper published on 20 October 1998 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, before reaching final decisions on the proposal. The consultation period ends on 31 January 1999.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much of the contracted investment has yet to be raised for the new en route centre at Swanwick. [59957]

Dr. Reid: The last of the contracts for the provision of the building and systems at the Swanwick centre were closed in April this year. Total capital expenditure on these contracts amounted to £350.1m.

The Government have commissioned consultants to look at the costs and project management of the Swanwick centre. Their report should be available in February next year.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress to date on replacing the Oceanic flight data processing system at Prestwick. [59963]

Dr. Reid: Discussions between NATS and the contractor, EDS Ltd., are continuing over issues which have arisen at the project definition stage of this project.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what options other than the public/private partnership he considered in order to achieve a capital receipt to allow other transport schemes to benefit from the proceeds of changing the structure of National Air Traffic Services. [59962]

Dr. Reid: As I sought to explain to the Transport Sub-Committee of the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee, the Government's preferred option of a public/private partnership for NATS was intended to confer a range of benefits on NATS itself, its customers, and the UK more generally thereby providing an innovative solution to growing air traffic demands in the next century. The proceeds are a benefit which will fund other transport schemes but that was not the main objective in the Government's considerations.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how the Government's preferred option of a public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services will affect the PFI contracts for the new Scottish and Oceanic air traffic control centres. [59953]

Dr. Reid: The Government's financial advisers are currently considering the possible relationship between the proposed public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services and the financing of the New Scottish and Oceanic centres. The Government remain committed to NATS's strategy of providing two centres at Swanwick and Prestwick to deal with air traffic flying over the UK.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reason the recently revised financial structure for municipally owned airports will not apply to finance for national air traffic development. [59955]

Dr. Reid: We carefully considered each case on its own merits and concluded that the degree of commercial freedom sought by NATS's management would be incompatible with public sector status. In the longer term, NATS may want to expand into European and world-wide air traffic control markets—or even into non-ATC business. The case with the municipally owned airports is somewhat different, and the commercial freedom we are offering them will be restricted to airport-related investment in the UK.

Manchester Airport

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will forecast the capital investment programme for Manchester airport for the next 10 years. [59954]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Manchester Airport last published its long-term development strategy in May 1993, covering the period to 2005. This was updated in the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's quinquennial review of the airport's pricing and trading practices, published in July 1997. Appendix 9.2 of the MMC Report sets out the airport's capital investment programme until 2007–08, and its forecast for expenditure during the ten-year period from 1998–99 to 2007–08, which was then expected to total some £643 million. The airport is currently discussing a figure of around £686 million for this period with the Civil Aviation Authority and the airlines. I understand that the airport is also reviewing its long-term strategy in the light of developments since 1993, including the Government's intention to remove borrowing controls for financially sound local authority airport companies.

Planning Applications (London Boroughs)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the planning applications of London boroughs on which he has intervened this year by way of Article 14 directions, indicating the date (a) when each intervention was made and (b) when he made his decision on each. [60542]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend has intervened in planning applications by giving the article 14 Directions in the table.

Date	Application	London Borough	Decision issued
7 January	Southall Park, Southall, UB1	Ealing	6 March
17 July	Bowring Building, 4–31 Tower Place EC3	City of London	21 July
30 October	Gothic works site, Glover Drive N18	Enfield	No
10 September	St. Paul's Hospital, Endell Street, WC2	Camden	17 November
30 September	Battersea Bus Garage/Albion Wharf, Hester Road, SW11	Wandsworth	No
10 November	Gargoyle Wharf, York Road, SW18	Wandsworth	No
12 November	Tooting Bec Hospital (Phase 2), Tooting Bec Road/Church Lane SW17	Wandsworth	No
12 November	Friends Provident Site, Brewhouse Street SW15	Wandsworth	No

Note:
15 further directions were given on applications referred to the Government Office as departures from development plans or under the shopping direction to permit more time for consideration of the cases. Five of them remain undecided.

Air Quality

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 89, if he will include in the forthcoming review of the air quality strategy the statistics on human mortality and morbidity arising from different forms of energy generation presented in (a) UK Environmental Accounts 1998 published by the Office for National Statistics, (b) The Social Cost of Fuel Cycles published by the DTI in 1992, (c) The National Air Quality Strategy published by the Department of the Environment in March 1997 and (d) Quantification of the Effects of Air Pollution on Health in the United Kingdom published by the Department of Health, 1998. [60582]

Mr. Meale: The report on the review of the National Air Quality Strategy, which I expect to publish for consultation early in the New Year, will discuss the various impacts on health of air pollution. It will draw on the report published earlier this year by the Department of Health on the Quantification of the Effects of Air Pollution on Health in the United Kingdom, which attempted for the first time to measure the effects of air pollution on the health of people in the UK.

Latex

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many reports of disease due to exposure to latex have been made under the Reporting of Injury, Disease and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations in each of the past 10 years. [60580]

Mr. Meale: The number of cases of occupational asthma and occupational dermatitis reported as due to latex under the RIDDOR regulations are given in the table. Reporting of occupational disease cases under RIDDOR is incomplete. Dermatitis was designated as a reportable disease with effect from 1 April 1996, and there are therefore no cases reported under RIDDOR before this date. No cases of occupational asthma due to latex were reported for the years from 1 April 1998 to 31 March 1993 inclusive.

	Occupational asthma	Occupational dermatitis
1993–94	1	—
1994–95	0	—
1995–96	1	—
1996–97	3	18
1997–98	1	18

Drug Abuse

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates the Health and Safety Executive has made of the number of (a) fatal accidents and (b) injuries at work as a consequence of drug abuse for the last year for which figures are available. [60425]

Mr. Meale: The Health and Safety Executive has made no such estimates.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact of drug abuse on health and safety in the work place; and if he will make a statement. [60426]

Mr. Meale: The Health and Safety Executive commissioned a study of psychotropic drugs and work performance and the health implications of recreational drug use.

The Health and Safety Executive, along with other Government departments, intends to commission further research next year on the effects on performance and increased risk of accidents from alcohol and drugs—both illegal and legal, including psychoactive medication transferred into the work environment.

School Crossing Patrols

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what decision he has reached following the recent public consultation on proposed changes to the powers of school crossing patrols. [60652]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My noble Friend the Minister for Roads and Road Safety, Lord Whitty, has announced today that the existing powers of School Crossing Patrols should be enhanced by allowing them to cross children of any age along with any adults who may wish to use the facility. The existing time limits on when crossings may operate will also be removed. These proposals were supported by a large majority of those who responded to the public consultation.

The consultation also asked whether there was a need for the creation of community crossing patrols—attended crossings similar to school patrols but provided at any location where there was a perceived need for one. The majority of those who responded opposed this mainly on the grounds of cost and because there was no need for a further type of crossing in addition to the Zebra, Pelican and Puffin crossings which operate continually.

We will not therefore be proceeding with community crossing patrols but will be taking forward the School Crossing Patrol changes at the earliest legislative opportunity. A Press Notice giving further details has been placed in the Library.

London (Emergency and Civil Protection)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the responsibilities of the Greater London Assembly and Mayor of London in relation to emergency planning and civil protection. [59589]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply.

The Greater London Assembly, through the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority, will be responsible for those aspects of emergency planning and civil protection which currently rest with the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat (Hygiene and Inspection)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the increase in the level of supervision in slaughterhouses resulting from the implementation of the Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Charges Regulations 1998. [58234]

Mr. Nick Brown: The recently announced increases in the level of veterinary supervision in licensed meat plants, including slaughterhouses, stem from the under-implementation by the previous Government of harmonised Community meat hygiene rules in Great Britain, for which the European Commission has begun infraction proceedings against the United Kingdom.

After detailed consideration, we have concluded that veterinary supervision arrangements of licensed plants in Great Britain should be brought into line with Community rules as quickly as possible. As full compliance is not possible immediately, essentially because of a shortage of veterinarians in the UK willing to undertake meat hygiene work, the Meat Hygiene Service has produced a programme of initiatives to secure additional veterinary resources and to implement a series of incremental increases in veterinary supervision levels over a relatively short period of time as those additional resources become available.

In accordance with EC rules, the costs of such additional veterinary supervision will have to be recovered from plant operators in the normal way. We recognise, of course, that the resulting increase in costs will be unwelcome to the industry, but the increased supervision is essential if official control over fresh meat in licensed plants is to be improved, a European Court case is to be avoided, and our efforts to have the beef export ban lifted for the whole of the UK are not to be undermined.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Maples: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to provide a substantive reply to the question from the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon tabled on 7 October. [57986]

Mr. Nick Brown: Shortly.

BSE

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for (a) each EU country (b) England, (c) Wales, (d) Scotland and (e) Northern Ireland the number of BSE cases recorded in each of the last three years for which figures are readily available and the figures for this year to the latest available date, indicating for each of the United Kingdom countries the figures for each month of the current year to 30 September. [55495]

Mr. Rooker [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 1998, c. 1154]: Figures for confirmed BSE cases in other EU countries for 1995, 1996, 1997 and to the end of September 1998, supplied to us by the Commission, are given in the table:

EU country	1995	1996	1997	1998 (to 30 September 1998)
Belgium	—	—	1	4
France	3	12	6	10
Germany[1]	—	—	2	—
Luxembourg	—	—	1	—
Netherlands	—	—	2	1
Portugal	14	29	30	60
Republic of Ireland	16	73	77	46

[1] Germany has reported no homebred cases of BSE

Fishing

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure the consistency of fishing vessel safety inspections. [60181]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

The consistency of fishing vessel safety inspections is established principally by means of statutory fishing vessel rules and regulations, and supplementary guidance for surveyors carrying out the inspections. Other steps being taken include surveyor training, monitoring of inspections, meetings between fishing vessel surveyors and meetings with the fishing industry.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if the principle of relative stability will continue beyond 2002; [59824]

(2) what legal text governs the length of time that the principle of relative stability will continue. [59825]

Mr. Morley: Article 8(4) of Council Regulation (EC) 3760/92 lays down the requirement to distribute fishing opportunities between Member States in such a way as to assure each Member State relative stability of fishing activities for each of the stocks concerned. No time limit is placed on the duration of this provision. It will therefore continue automatically beyond 2002 unless there is agreement by the Council, acting by qualified majority on a proposal from the Commission, to change it.

Environmental Integration

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to implement the Cardiff Summit Ministerial Declaration on environmental integration; what indicators he is developing for measuring progress; and if he will raise these matters at the forthcoming Council of Agriculture Ministers meeting. [55780]

Mr. Morley: The integration of environmental considerations into EU agricultural policy is on the agenda for the Agriculture Council on 23 and 24 November. The Government are continuing to press for fundamental reform of the Common Agricultural Policy to meet the commitments made at the Cardiff Summit in May this year.

MAFF has published a consultation document containing proposals for a set of indicators to measure progress towards sustainable agriculture in the UK. The responses are being assessed and we aim to publish the indicators in 1999.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54271]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 31 July 1998]: In association with Royal National Institute for the Blind, MAFF has produced two publications which have been made available in alternative formats; including Braille, large print and audio cassettes. The publications are:

Healthy Eating for Older People—available since 1993 and;

New Microwave Labels—available since 1992

Beef

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals have been made by the EU Veterinary Committee about de-boning beef in slaughter houses (a) for the domestic market and (b) for export; and what impact these proposals will have on progress towards the restoration of beef exports from Britain. [57482]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission has made a proposal for the export of UK beef and beef products from animals born after 1 August 1996 (the 'Date Based Export Scheme'). On the advice of the EC Scientific Steering Committee, the scheme is restricted to deboned beef. The original proposal also required all beef sold on the domestic market to be deboned but a revised proposal no longer contains this provision. That proposal received the support of a simple majority of Member States at the Standing Veterinary Committee on 4 November. Since it did not obtain a qualified majority, it has now been referred to the Council, who are expected to vote on it on 23 November.

Environmental Indicators

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the development of environmental indicators for agriculture by the OECD for use in OECD member countries. [56772]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 27 October 1998]: The OECD is developing a set of indicators to measure the environmental impacts of agriculture and agricultural policies across OECD countries.

The UK hosted a workshop on behalf of the OECD in York on 22–25 September to help progress this work. The workshop's conclusions and recommendations will be discussed at an OECD meeting in Paris on 14–16 December.

Sustainable Agriculture

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many responses he received to his Department's consultation document, Development of a Set of Indicators for Sustainable Agriculture in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [56770]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 27 October 1998]: The Department received 75 written responses to the consultation document from external organisations or individuals.

The responses are being assessed and we aim to publish the indicators next year.

Farm Subsidies

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if farmers can have their subsidy payment made by credit transfer as well as by cheque. [56710]

Mr. Morley: It is MAFF's intention to offer payment of Grants and Subsidies to farmers by BACS (Bankers Automated Clearing System) during 1999.

Pig Industry

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to encourage caterers and processors to source pigmeat from the UK. [57788]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The Government, supported by the Meat and Livestock Commission, launched a campaign in July, aimed at the catering and food service sector with the aim of increasing the use of UK pigmeat in this important sector.

The campaign was completed on 16 November when the pig producers and processors were brought together with the catering and food service sector with the aim of finding a mutual interest in developing trade between the sectors. This action will help our Industry to find new opportunities for pigmeat produced in the UK.

EU Milk Quotas

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the milk processing industry on the restrictions of the EU milk quota system in the UK. [59448]

Mr. Rooker: My right hon. Friend the Minister met the representatives of the Dairy Industry Federation on 11 November to discuss, among other issues, the Government's policy on reforming the EU milk quota system.

Nutrition

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the nutritional value of (a) frozen food and (b) food which is fresh or has been chilled. [59767]

Mr. Rooker: MAFF continuously monitors the nutritional value of food at the retail level. Chilled, frozen, canned or dried foods such as fruit and vegetables are a convenient way of adding variety to the diet and can be as nutritious as fresh produce. Although nutrient losses may occur in some foods during storage or processing, as well as during cooking at home, these losses are not of major significance in a mixed diet.

Landing Ports

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what fisheries conservation objectives are intended to be achieved by the designation of landing ports. [59828]

Mr. Morley: Tighter controls on landings, including designated ports, are being introduced to assist fisheries inspectors with the task of monitoring catches and therefore the uptake of quotas which are set in order to conserve fish stocks and maintain sustainable fisheries.

Animal By-Products Order 1992

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those rendering plants currently in operation in accordance with the Animal By-Products Order 1992 indicating for each whether (a) a waste water disposal system meeting hygiene requirements is required, (b) ministerial approval has been given for each facility and (c) a waste water disposal system is currently operating. [60025]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The following rendering plants are currently approved and operating under the Animal By-Products Order 1992.

Alba Proteins Ltd. (Cumbria)
Chambers (AW) Ltd. (Yorks)
Chettles Ltd. (Northants)
Chettles Ltd. (Notts)

Sun Valley Poultry Ltd. (Hereford)
United Fish Products Ltd. (Aberdeen)
Waddington (P) & Co. Ltd. (Bradford)

All of these plants are approved by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. It is a condition of approval in each case that the plant has a waste water disposal system meeting hygiene requirements. If this system is not operational, the plant would be in breach of its approval.

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Animal By-Products Order 1992 in relation to off-site hygienic disposal. [60042]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The Animal By-Products Order 1992 requires animal by-products to be disposed of by rendering, incineration, use of scientific purposes, or in certain circumstances, by burial or burning. For low risk material, use for the production of petfood, pharmaceutical or technical products is also allowed, and for low risk material and certain types of high risk material, treatment at a knacker's yard, hunt kennel, maggot farm or similar premises is permitted.

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria apply to define a waste water system as required by the Animal By-Products Order 1992; and if he will make a statement. [60026]

Mr. Rooker: The Animal By-Products Order 1992 does not specify the criteria that define a waste water system. Responsibility for enforcing controls on the disposal of waste water rests with the water authorities and, in some cases, the Environment Agency.

Dry Stone Walls

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to (a) prevent the destruction and (b) encourage the maintenance of dry stone walls. [60006]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry helps to prevent the destruction and encourages the maintenance of dry stone walls through agri-environment schemes. Both the Environmentally Sensitive Areas and Countryside Stewardship Schemes provide payments for wall restoration and associated maintenance.

The Government are also considering the recommendations of the Environment Sub-committee report on their Inquiry into the Protection of Field Boundaries.

EU Fisheries (Relative Stability Principle)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which other EU states have pledged their support for the retention of the principle of relative stability as per the 1983 agreement. [59826]

Mr. Morley: Because there is no expectation that the principle of relative stability will lapse, Member States have not been called upon to pledge their support in the Fisheries Council for its continuation. None has suggested to the Council that it should not be retained.

Badgers

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the studies of badger control and tuberculosis will begin in the six areas which he has already announced; when he will announce the remaining 24 areas to reach the minimum number proposed by Professor Krebs; and when those studies will begin. [60234]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Surveying in the Devon/Cornwall triplet (group of three areas) has been completed. Within the triplet, the Putford area has been randomly allocated the proactive culling treatment, Hartland the reactive culling treatment and Bude the survey only treatment. Ministry staff started placing traps in the Putford area on 16 November. Once in place, the traps will be pre-baited for a period before trapping begins.

Surveying is continuing in the Gloucestershire/ Herefordshire triplet.

Other triplets will be selected, on the basis of the latest information on the pattern of TB incidents, as resources become available to start work. I expect the next two triplets to be identified within the next few months.

Global Warming

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect of global warming on coastal defences. [58632]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Since 1989, MAFF has set allowances for sea level rise for operating authorities to take into account when designing coastal defences. The current allowance of 4.5mm a year is based on predictions by the Inter Governmental Panel on Climate Change. This figure is adjusted regionally to take account of long term geological tilt of the UK and the allowances now in use are:

Environment Agency Region	Allowance (mm per year)
North East (South of Flamborough Head), Anglian, Thames, Southern	6
South West, Wales	5
North West, North East (North of Flamborough Head)	4

These allowances apply to defences with a predicted life up to 2030; for those with an expected life beyond this period, designs should be adaptable to allow for any future change in predictions.

These allowances are kept under review as further research becomes available, including predictions provided in October 1998 by the UK Climate Impacts Programme. The current allowance should accommodate the most likely predictions in relative mean sea level until at least the middle of the next century.

Genetically Modified Food

Ms Drown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if current safety testing regulations for genetically modified foods include a requirement to test for side effects in humans. [59143]

Mr. Rooker: The safety assessment of all novel, including genetically modified (GM), food is undertaken on a case by case basis in accordance with the European Commission guidelines which accompany EC Novel Foods Regulation (258/97). These guidelines, which have been published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (L253 vol 40 of 16/9/97), identify the situations where human studies may be necessary. As an additional safeguard, the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes, who advise ministers on the safety of novel foods, are currently considering arrangements for post market monitoring of GM foods.

Supermarkets

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with representatives from supermarkets about the British farming industry. [58786]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) on 12 November 1998, Official Report, column 463.

WALES

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the names of those people he has appointed to public bodies since 1 May 1997, indicating the positions to which they have been appointed, and whether they receive remuneration. [56830]

Mr. Michael: This information, including the date of appointment and any remuneration received, is published quarterly in the report "Appointments made by the Secretary of State for Wales". The latest version, dated 1 September 1998, is available in the House of Commons Library.

Education Funding

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what education funding was provided for each county in Wales for each of the past five years. [59581]

Mr. Hain: The bulk of funding for education is provided to local authorities through the annual revenue and capital settlements. The main additional items of specific funding were as follows:

Additional capital funding for schools (New Deal)

Mr. Hain: The following section 4 grants were awarded by the Wales Tourist Board:

Year	Grant allocated (£)

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60227]

Mr. Michael: My right hon. Friend the President of the Council presents quarterly reviews to Parliament of progress on tackling all issues relating to the Millennium date change problem across central Government and the wider public sector. The conclusions of Taskforce 2000 in respect of my Department contain no surprises.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the Welsh Office latest quarterly return will be placed in the libraries of the House and published on the Internet.

Children's Services

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the financial allocation made to services for children since May 1997 that have been additional to the expenditure previously agreed. [60305]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The provision for the Looked After Children Development Fund for 1998–99 is £1.0 million which compares with £500,000 in 1997–98. Provision for grants to children and families for 1998–99 is £2.884 million and was £2,822 million in 1997–98. Provision for Area Child Protection Committee (ACPC) grants in 1998–99 is £44,000, the same as for the previous year.

NHS (Financial Allocations)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the financial allocations made to the NHS since May 1997 that have been additional to the expenditure previously agreed. [60312]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Since coming into office, we announced, in May 1997, £600,000 for cancer services and £2.5 million for primary care. In October 1997, we announced £9.5 million to assist with winter pressures.

In December 1997, a cash increase of £113.8 million for NHS Wales for 1998–99 was announced by the Secretary of State, which included £60.2 million new money from the July budget and an additional £1.3 million new money from the Welsh Block. In March, we announced an additional £25.1 million for NHS Wales in 1998–99 to bring in-patient waiting lists down. On 3 November, the Secretary of State announced an additional £12.5 million to alleviate winter pressures and emergencies.

These allocations total £164 million of which £111.7 million was additional to expenditure previously planned.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each housing authority the amount in rent revenue that was a contribution towards housing benefit in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [60308]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The figures in the table represent the difference between the cost of rent rebates incurred by local authorities and the amount of Housing Revenue Account Subsidy paid by the Welsh Office. The data for 1997–98 and 1998–99 are provisional.

Disabled People

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the efforts he is making to improving work prospects for people in Wales who have a disability. [60546]

Mr. Hain: The New Deal for Disabled People is testing out ways of providing active help into work for those who want it. Wales has the largest Personal Adviser Service pilot project. This started on 28 September 1998, in the Eastern Valleys (Ebbw Vale, Caerphilly, Blackwood, Merthyr Tydfil and Aberdare), and is being implemented by the Employment Service in partnership with the Benefits Agency. People on incapacity benefit in the pilot area are invited to participate on a voluntary basis and are offered individual support to help them overcome their barriers to employment.

In addition, under the innovative schemes strand of the New Deal, a number of pilot projects are being run in parts of Wales to help disabled people into work. These include projects being delivered by the Leonard Cheshire Foundation and Disability Business Partnerships. A second tranche of projects will be announced in the New Year.

Across the UK a range of measures are being taken which will help disabled people. These include:

an additional £30 million is to be invested by the Department for Education and Employment in specialist disability services over the next three years;

the introduction of comprehensive and enforceable civil rights through full implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 and the establishment of a Disability Rights Commission;

the removal of some of the benefits obstacles to work by extending the Social Security linking rule to protect people's rates of benefit and removing the restrictions on voluntary work; making work pay through the National Minimum Wage and the introduction of the new Disabled Person's Tax Credit.

Further measures to help disabled people who want to work are set out in the recent consultation document "A New Contract for Welfare: Support for Disabled People". These include the introduction of the Single Gateway for all people of working age, including people with a long-term illness or disability and the reform of the "All Work Test".

University Places

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning the take-up of university places in Wales. [60557]

Mr. Hain: The latest provisional figures from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) show that acceptances onto courses at Welsh higher education institutions are holding up well. The fears that there might be a slump in the 1998–99 applications compared to the very healthy 1997–98 figures have not been realised. We have no reason to believe that there is a problem connected with the introduction of the requirement that students contribute towards their tuition fees. We look forward with interest to seeing the final acceptance figures from UCAS which will be available in the next month or so.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of apprenticeships available to Deeside school leavers; and if he will make a statement. [60559]

Mr. Hain: It is not possible from Government sources to quantify the number of apprenticeship places available to Deeside school leavers. Deeside school leavers are able to access both modern and traditional apprenticeships throughout Great Britain. However, in Wales the Government have contracted with TECs for the provision of 4,743 starts on Modern Apprenticeships in 1998–99 of which 750 are in the North Wales TEC area.

Attention Deficit Disorder

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what initiatives he will take to improve provision for pupils in primary and secondary schools who suffer from attention deficit disorder and allied difficulties; and if he will make a statement; [60553]

(2) what is his estimate of the number of pupils in the secondary and primary schools of Wales who suffer from attention deficit disorder; and what advice he has given to local education authorities regarding their obligations to assist such pupils. [60554]

Mr. Hain: Information on the number of pupils in primary and secondary schools in Wales with attention deficit disorder (ADD) is not held centrally. Responsibility for ensuring that appropriate provision is made for children with special educational needs (SEN) rests with LEAs and schools. They are required to have regard to the guidance contained in the "Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of SEN" in all of their dealings with children with SEN, including those with learning difficulties associated with ADD. The Code sets out practical guidance on identification and assessment and on making appropriate provision to meet specific needs.

We will publish the response to the "BEST for Special Education" Green Paper consultation, setting out our programme of action for SEN policy and practice over the remainder of this Parliament, towards the end of the year.

New Deal

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress is being made on the New Deal for Lone Parents; and if he will make a statement. [60545]

Mr. Hain: The New Deal for Lone Parents helps lone parents who are currently claiming income support and have children of school age, into sustainable employment. A Personal Adviser Service is available to give individual advice on jobsearch, in work benefits, and child care. Lone parents participate on a voluntary basis and receive support to help them overcome their particular barriers to employment. From 26 October 1998 the programme was extended across Wales to all lone parents on Income Support.

In Wales, results up to 25 September show that 9 out of 10 lone parents who attended an interview with an adviser agreed to participate in the New Deal. Of those who sought the help of the Personal Adviser Service more than a third moved into work.

Early research, commissioned by the Department of Social Security, was carried out across the UK, on lone parents who had moved into work (and claimed Family Credit). It showed that participants in the New Deal for Lone Parents are, on average, £39 per week better off and have reduced their dependency on benefit by £42 per week.

Job Applicants (Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that there is a sufficient supply of skilled and trained applicants from Deeside for jobs from Deeside employers; and if he will make a statement. [60558]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office supports an extensive set of programmes available throughout Wales to help employers improve the skills of their employees, to provide young people and unemployed adults with the skills needed by employers and, through the New Deal, to help disadvantaged groups increase their employability, find work and remain in employment. The new economic agenda for Wales, "Pathway to Prosperity", highlights the importance of education, training and lifelong learning in meeting our economic objectives.

Temporary Classrooms

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of temporary classrooms in each of the local education authorities of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [60555]

Mr. Hain: This information is not collected centrally. Provision of school classrooms is a matter for local education authorities and governing bodies of voluntary aided and grant-maintained schools.

HEALTH

ME and Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of research paid for by his Department into ME and Chronic Fatigue Syndrome has been conducted using (a) London or Dowsett diagnostic criteria and (b) Oxford or CDC 1994 diagnostic criteria. [59334]

Ms Jowell: The Government fund health and medical research in a number of ways.

The Department funds a range of research and development to support its work on policy development and evaluation in health and social care. The Department also manages the National Health Service research and development levy which is used to support research and development of relevance to the National Health Service in hospitals, general practice and other health care settings, and to fund the NHS research and development programme. In addition, the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the Office of Science and Technology in the Department of Trade and Industry funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the research base.

Management of much of the research supported by the NHS research and development levy is devolved and details are not collected routinely by the Department.

Information which is available centrally shows that the NHS research and development programme has funded a research project entitled Should GPs manage chronic fatigue syndrome? A controlled trial, which has now reported. This project used the 'Oxford' or Centre for Diseases Control criteria. Further work is about to be commissioned through competitive tender on the topic of Management Strategies for Chronic Fatigue Syndrome. The projects and therefore the criteria they will use have not yet been decided upon.

The MRC has funded a project in relation to myalgic encephalomyelitis which has recently been completed. The work was undertaken at the University of Manchester and the project was entitled The role of noradrenaline in the neuropsychological pathogenesis of the chronic fatigue syndrome. This project also used the 'Oxford' or Centre for Diseases Control criteria.

Breast Screening

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the interim results of the pilot studies on extension of the breast screening programme. [59713]

Mr. Hutton: Interim results of the pilot study carried out in Brighton (one of three such studies) were published in the British Medical Journal (BMJ), Volume 317, page 388, dated 8 August 1998. Copies of the BMJ are available in the Library.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much extra funding has been made available to area health authorities for the provision of mammograms for women over 65 years of age. [59655]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service breast screening programme was set up in 1988. Women aged 50–64 are invited for screening by mammography every three years and women over the age of 64 may request to be screened every three years free of charge.

Provision for screening women over the age of 65 is included in health authority baseline resources and is not therefore specifically identified.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 179, what the basis was for his statement that haemophiliacs suffering from hepatitis C infected through contaminated blood products during NHS treatment do not suffer the same stigma as haemophiliacs suffering from HIV virus infected in the same way. [59762]

Mr. Hutton: There was widespread public fear of HIV in the 1980s when the infection was rapidly fatal and associated with sexual transmission. This is not the case with hepatitis C.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will reconsider his decision not to provide a financial assistance scheme to haemophiliacs suffering from the hepatitis C virus infected through contaminated blood products during NHS treatment; and if he will make a statement. [59775]

Mr. Hutton: We continue to hold the view that it would not be right to single out people with haemophilia infected with hepatitis C through National Health Service treatment by establishing a special payment scheme. Our general policy is that financial assistance of this kind is only paid where the NHS, or individuals working in it, have been at fault.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 179, what steps he has taken since to ensure that haemophiliacs suffering from the Hepatitis C virus contracted through infected blood products during NHS treatment will receive adequate social security benefits. [59610]

Mr. Hutton: People with haemophilia who have been infected with hepatitis C through National Health Service treatment with blood products are assessed for their entitlement to assistance under the benefits system in the same way as other people. We have agreed funding for the Haemophilia Society's youth information and support project aimed at providing information to and improving the education and employment prospects of young people with haemophilia who are infected with hepatitis C.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the most recent medical evidence regarding the risks of hepatitis C transmission in families (a) between partners and (b) between parent and children. [59776]

Mr. Hutton: Limited information is available about the risk of household contact but it is generally thought to be low. Current information indicates that sexual transmission of hepatitis C occurs but that the virus is inefficiently spread in this manner. Prevalence rates for antibodies to hepatitis C of less than 5 per cent. have been found in regular sexual partners of infected individuals. A similar rate of transmission has been found among infants born to mothers with hepatitis C antibodies.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many haemophilia patients (a) were infected with hepatitis C virus through contaminated blood products during NHS treatment prior to 1985, (b) await liver transplants as a result of this disease, (c) are being treated for this virus within the NHS and (d) have died as a result of liver disease to date. [59768]

Mr. Hutton: The Department estimates that 4,000 people with haemophilia were infected with hepatitis C through their National Health Service treatment with blood products before the introduction of viral inactivation processes in 1985. All patients found to be infected in this way are referred to a specialist for further assessment, observation and treatment as appropriate. The Haemophilia Society assesses that 90 patients may have died. The United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority's list of people awaiting liver transplants includes 26 whose primary liver disease is post hepatitis C cirrhosis. While not identified separately on this database, 6 or 7 are believed to have haemophilia.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the costs of providing a hardship fund for haemophiliacs suffering from hepatitis C infected through contaminated blood products during NHS treatment; and what the cost is of the scheme already operating for haemophiliacs suffering from the HIV virus infected in the same way. [59774]

Mr. Hutton: Approximately £90 million has been paid since 1988 in special payments to people with haemophilia who were infected with HIV through National Health Service treatment with blood or blood products. We estimate that a comparable scheme for hepatitis C infection would cost in the region of £220 million.

Viagra

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the regulations which permit him to ban NHS prescriptions for Viagra. [60196]

Mr. Milburn: Ministers will be drawing up substantive policy proposals on Viagra shortly and, as an interim measure, the Standing Medical Advisory Committee has advised that doctors should not prescribe Viagra.

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue guidance on the statutory provisions as they affect private prescriptions issued by NHS GPs to their registered NHS patients for Viagra. [60197]

Mr. Milburn: General practitioners might be in breach of paragraph 43 of their terms of service if they issue private prescriptions for Viagra to patients on their lists. The Department advises that patients requesting private prescriptions should be referred to a doctor outside the practice.

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59743]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The Department does not hold any register which is required to be open for inspection by hon. Members and members of the public.

Private Prescriptions

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on private prescriptions issued by NHS general practitioners for their NHS residential patients where the cost of medication is lower than the registered prescription charge. [60035]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service general practitioners might be acting in breach of paragraph 43 of their terms of service if they do not write NHS prescriptions for their NHS patients, except where the drug is included in Schedule 10 or 11 of the NHS (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992.

Overhead Power Lines

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to commission studies concerning the health effects of emissions from overhead power lines on those living nearby. [59898]

Ms Jowell: Several epidemiological studies are currently under way to investigate childhood cancer in relation to various possible causes, including electromagnetic fields. The largest study of this type in this country is the United Kingdom Childhood Cancer Study which is funded in part by the Department of Health with technical support provided by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB). The Department has also recently commissioned a study of childhood cancer and electromagnetic fields from power lines which is being undertaken by the Childhood Cancer Research Group in Oxford.

Dental Services (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on when new NHS dentists' practices will be established in Shropshire. [60157]

Mr. Milburn: Seven investing in dentistry funding requests from Shropshire Health Authority have been approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to help improve the availability of National Health Service dental services in Shropshire. Of the seven approvals, three were for new practices, three were for practice expansions and one was for an emergency dental service. The new practices are in Shrewsbury, Cleobury Mortimer and Dawley, Telford, all of which have now opened. Access to NHS dentistry in the area should also benefit from the first-wave personal dental service pilot in Shropshire, which will start in January 1999.

Calman-Hine Report

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to implement the proposals of the Calman-Hine report; and over what period of time. [59850]

Mr. Hutton: The Calman-Hine report, published in 1995, set out a framework for improving the organisation and delivery of cancer services. This has been supported by the subsequent publication of evidence-based guidance for improving outcomes in breast, colorectal and lung cancer. Guidance on improving outcomes in the gynaecological cancers and cancers of the upper gastro-intestinal tract will be published in 1999. The recommendations in the guidance documents form a set of priorities that help health authorities, hospitals and other providers of care focus on areas most likely to make a difference to the outcomes of care. Substantial progress has already been made across the country in implementing the recommendations. The £10 million made available recurrently for breast cancer in 1997 and for colorectal cancer in 1998 enables targeted investment in workforce and equipment to speed access to diagnosis and treatment and improve quality of care.

Full implementation will take some 10 years and national milestones for the mid implementation period 1999–2002 are currently being worked up. This will include ongoing work in the development of national standards and work being taken forward within primary care.

GP Practices (Dispensing)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review controls on dispensing from GP practices to ensure qualified persons are present when dispensing is carried out. [60195]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans to review the controls on dispensing from general practitioners practices to ensure qualified persons are present when dispensing is carried out.

Doctors are responsible for the duties they delegate to their practice staff, including the dispensing of medicines. The Court of Appeal recently upheld an earlier decision that doctors may delegate the dispensing of medicines to their practice staff.

Nurses (Prescriptions)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the reports he has commissioned on the issue of nurses being able to prescribe drugs; on what date such reports were received by ministers; and when he expects to publish them. [59837]

Mr. Milburn: The report of the Advisory Group on Nurse Prescribing was published in December 1989 and recommended the introduction of prescribing rights to certain groups of nurses. Following the passage of the Medicinal Products: Prescription by Nurses etc. Act 1992, the recommendations were piloted between 1994 and 1998. An evaluation of the original pilot sites was commissioned from the Universities of Liverpool and York and this was published in January 1997.

Tissue Banks

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve the operation and regulation of tissue banks. [59900]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is currently looking into all aspects of the use of human tissue to see whether further regulation is necessary and what form such regulation might take. We hope to be able to consult more widely about this early next year.

Disabled People

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the impact on general practitioners of assisting disabled people to remain in work or move onto benefits; and if he will make a statement. [60165]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 17 November 1998]: We are considering how best general practitioners can contribute to assisting disabled people to remain in work. The National Priorities Guidance for 1999–2002 included as a national priority

"promoting independence—to ensure the provision of services which help adults achieve and sustain the maximum independence in their lives, including, for those of working age, their capacity to take up, remain in or return to employment".

Statutory Agencies in health and social care will need to consider this priority in setting out their policies. We are discussing with other departments the implications for primary care of policies such as the New Deal for Disabled People and the "single gateway".

Osteoporosis

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve treatment of osteoporosis in women; and if he will make a statement. [60484]

Ms Jowell: On 25 June 1998 I launched an osteoporosis strategy at the sixth Bath Conference on Osteoporosis and Bone Mineral Measurement organised by the National Osteoporosis Society.

The strategy was developed in conjunction with a multi-disciplinary team of health professionals and health managers and the National Osteoporosis Society. It is made up of a number of strands, which taken together provide the basis for a range of actions that might be taken at a national, local and individual level to reduce the number of fractures caused as a result of osteoporosis.

The Royal College of Physicians (RCP) have developed evidence-based clinical guidelines on the prevention and treatment of osteoporosis, which are due to be published shortly. From the recommendations of the RCP report a quick reference primary care guide on prevention and treatment has also been produced.

These clearly set out appropriate actions for clinicians, general practitioners and other health professionals to take in patients who have established osteoporosis, and in those at high risk of developing the disease.

Adoption

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to introduce best practice for adoption agencies across the UK; [59470]

(2) what plans he has to reduce the costs to local authorities of placing children with other agencies for adoption; [59471]

(3) what plans he has to amend adoption legislation in England and Wales. [59472]

Mr. Hutton: The Government recently announced the 'Quality Protects' initiative as part of their strategy for improving services for children looked after by local authorities. 'Quality Protects' promotes better management and higher quality in the provision of children's services. So far as adoption is concerned, the programme tackles issues such as the avoidance of children drifting in the care system and also unacceptable delays in placing children for adoption. These issues were also among others addressed in the Local Authority Circular 'Adoption—Achieving the Right Balance', issued on 28 August, copies of which are available in the Library. Local authorities should be in no doubt about the Government's determination to support and monitor the 'Quality Protects' programme.

Through 'Quality Protects', the Government are working with local authorities to improve the management and cost effectiveness of adoption services. For example, greater co-operation among authorities and approved adoption agencies through the wider development of consortia is an effective means of reducing those occasions when a local authority is asked to meet the fees of another adoption agency to enable a child to be placed with a suitable adoptive parent recruited and approved by that agency.

The Government have no plans at present to introduce an adoption Bill for England and Wales. However, we shall do so as soon as parliamentary time allows. In the meantime we are confident that effective action to improve the management and use of adoption services can be taken within the present legislative framework.

Scotopic Sensitivity Syndrome

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if NHS purchasers have contracted with Irlen Centre Practitioners for the treatment of scotopic sensitivity syndrome. [60598]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available in the form required. We are not able to recommend particular service providers centrally. That is a decision to be made at local level taking local needs and factors into account, so health authorities can contract with Irlen Centres if that is in the best interests of the patient.

Radiation (Genetic Damage)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned into links between radiation and (a) genetic damage and (b) genomic instability. [60398]

Ms Jowell: The Department is currently funding three projects into links between radiation and genetic damage and genomic instability within its Radiological Protection Research Programme. The projects are being carried out at the Paterson Institute at the University of Manchester, the Beatson Laboratories in Glasgow and the Medical Research Council Radiation and Genomic Instability Unit in Oxfordshire. The Department is aware that other relevant work is being undertaken by the National Radiological Protection Board, the Medical Research Council, the Cancer Research Campaign and the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee on Cancer Research.

Incentive Project Service Payments

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many administrative personnel of the NHS received incentive project service payments in 1997–1998; what was the total cost to the NHS; how many could potentially benefit from IPRs in 1998–99; and what are his budgeted costs for these payments. [60356]

Mr. Milburn: General and senior managers on residual national terms are subject to individual performance review and eligible for performance-related payments (PRP). New national arrangements for National Health Service senior management in health authorities were introduced from 1 April 1998. Under these, whether pay is linked to performance and the way in which it is linked is a matter for local determination. NHS trusts are free to determine their own levels of remuneration, and this extends to rates of PRP.

Health and Safety Legislation (Schools)

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health and safety legislation, including delegated legislation, which applies to children in schools. [59593]

Mr. Meale: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, is mainly concerned with workplace activities and the protection of workers and others who may be affected by such activities; this may include school children. In addition, the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992, the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994 and the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 have applications which cover children in schools. Also the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996 cover the health, safety and welfare of school children.

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations cover the carrying of weights by children in schools. [59594]

Mr. Meale: I have been asked to reply.

There are no regulations under Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 which specifically cover the carrying of weights by children in schools. The Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992 require, amongst other things, employers to assess the risks arising from work activities which affect the health and safety of those not in their employment, such as school children. This may include any risks arising from manual handling.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Registers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the registers held by his Department which are open for inspection by (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [59747]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, my right hon. Friend the Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 2 July 1998, Official Report, column 258.

There are no separate arrangements for maintaining registers for inspection by hon. Members and members of the public.

Interchange Initiative

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many individuals have been seconded (a) from the Civil Service to industry and (b) from industry to the Civil Service under the Interchange initiative, since its establishment. [60028]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Interchange Unit was set up in the Cabinet Office in May 1997 and has collected statistics for the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98. The total number of inward secondments to the civil service from industry for this period was 581; outward secondments to industry numbered 889.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what budget has been allocated to the Interchange initiative for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [60029]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Interchange Unit was allocated a budget of £7,380.00 for 1997–98, and £146,365 for 1998–99. The budget for 1999–2000 has not yet been set but is unlikely to exceed the current figure.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps he has taken to promote the Interchange initiative. [60016]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Interchange Unit in the Cabinet Office has been actively involved in encouraging departments to increase their Interchange activity with business, local authorities, health service, academia and small businesses. It has produced a range of publicity material, including a video, aimed at raising awareness and increasing understanding and participation in the initiative. The Unit also took a stand at the Institute of Personnel Development exhibition in Harrogate in October and the CBI conference in Birmingham in November. To publicise the initiative, I hope in the near future to arrange a working breakfast to be attended by a range of key decision makers from all sectors of the economy participating in interchange.

Joint Intelligence Committee

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made since January 1996 in reviewing and releasing the records of the Joint Intelligence Committee; where in the Public Record Office the records are which have been released since then; which years are covered by records which have been released since then; what records are now planned to be reviewed for release; and if he will make a statement. [60289]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Since 1996 JIC minutes and memoranda for the years 1951 to 1955 have been reviewed. Those records found to be no longer sensitive have been transferred to the Public Record Office (PRO) at Kew for release with the following class references—CAB 159/9–21 and CAB 158/12–22.

JIC minutes and memoranda for the years 1956 to 1959 have also been reviewed and those found to be no longer sensitive have recently been transferred to the PRO at Kew for public access in January 1999. These records will have the class references CAB 159/22–32 and CAB 158/23–38.

JIC records for 1960 and later years will continue to be released every year in three-year tranches until the review has been completed.

Liberal Democrats

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the factors which led him to specify particular policy areas as suitable for discussions with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith). [60379]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have not sought to limit the scope of my discussions with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed about our review of the work of the Joint Consultative Committee. However, policy areas which might be discussed at the Committee in future seem likely to be those on which the Government and the Liberal Democrat party have some commonality of agenda and approach.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make it his policy to make public the agenda and minutes of meetings with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) arising from the agreement between the Prime Minister and the leader of the Liberal Democrats. [60381]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: No. These documents fall within the exemption for internal discussion and advice under the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information".

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many meetings he has held with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) since 11 November; and how long each lasted. [60434]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have had one meeting with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed to discuss our review of the work of the Joint Consultative Committee. It took place on 12 November and lasted approximately one hour.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Attorney-General what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60523]

The Attorney-General: There are no non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from my Department.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55554]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 19 October 1998]: There have been no occasions on which a Minister in my Department has used RAF or privately chartered aircraft during the dates specified.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Developing Countries

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 28 October 1998, Official Report, column 202, if she will list the major partner countries which are monitored by her economic advisers. [60592]

Clare Short: Economic Advisers from the Department for International Development monitor economic events in the following major partner countries:

Africa

Kenya
Uganda
Tanzania
Nigeria
Ghana
Zimbabwe
Zambia
Malawi
Mozambique
South Africa

Asia

India
Pakistan
Bangladesh
China
Nepal

Latin America and the Caribbean

Montserrat

Eastern Europe and Former Soviet Union (shared monitoring with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office)

Russia
Ukraine
Poland.

Economic Advisers also monitor a number of developing countries which are not our major partners but where there is DFID involvement. These include countries in the Caribbean and Latin America, other Overseas Dependent Territories, countries in the Former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe and other countries in Africa and Asia.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the 10 organisations which receive the greatest amounts of her Department's budget allocated to non-Governmental organisations. [60457]

Clare Short: Information on DFID expenditure through UK NGOs in the current financial year is not yet available. Information on expenditure in 1997–98 is currently being collated and will be available later this year.

In 1996–97, the ten UK NGOs in receipt of the largest amounts of funding from DFID were:

NGO	£ million
Voluntary Service Overseas (VSO)	22.0
British Red Cross	15.9
Save the Children Fund	13.7
Care International UK	11.5
Oxfam	10.2
International Planned Parenthood Federation (IPPF)	8.2
Christian Aid	6.1
Medical Research Council	4.0
London School of Hygiene	3.6
Marie Stopes International (MSI)	3.2

This information is based on the direct funding of UK NGO initiatives and on expenditure channelled through UK NGOs for development activities undertaken on behalf of DFID.

Information on spending through overseas NGOs is not held separately, but is included in DFID's bilateral country programme expenditure.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate she has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from her Department. [60524]

Mr. Foulkes: Information on the numbers of people taken on under the New Deal by non-departmental public bodies for which the Department for International Development is responsible is not held centrally.

Central America (Hurricane Mitch)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the use of portable water purification pumps in the area affected by Hurricane Mitch in Central America. [60586]

Mr. Foulkes: The provision of safe drinking water following natural disasters is an important part of the disaster response effort in order to reduce the consequential risk of health epidemics. Ensuring that the significant numbers of affected people in Central America obtain safe drinking water is a major challenge. Equipment such as water purification pumps can be helpful in this respect but the form of response must follow good technical appraisal and be appropriate. The work being carried out by the Red Cross, the Pan American Health Organisation and various non-governmental organisations, supported by the British Government, includes the provision of safe drinking water and other basic health care needs. Their efforts and those of the United Nations have helped prevent a health emergency occurring in the region.

A Department for International Development expert mission is in Honduras and Nicaragua next week and will assess the effective delivery of emergency water supplies.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in her Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to her Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by her Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55561]

Mr. Foulkes: This Question could be answered in full only at disproportionate cost. Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration.

Between 2 May 1997 and 30 September 1998, Ministers in this Department have used RAF aircraft and private charter aircraft on the following occasions:

Date/journey	Destination	Purpose	Personnel
September 1997	Bangladesh	View projects	20
September 1997	Sarajevo	Visit DFID humanitarian aid programmes	1
October 1997	Kenya-Uganda-Rwanda	Visit DFID projects in Entebbe/Soroti/Kigali	8
November 1997	Donetsk	Visit KHF projects in the region	4
January 1998	Malawi	No commercial flight	2
February 1998	Benja Luka-Sarajevo	Visit DFID humanitarian aid programmes	4
May 1998	Guyana	Visit Iwo krame Rainforest project	3
June 1998	Vietnam	Visit DFID projects in Ha Tinh	4
July 1998	South Africa	Visit projects in Bislio, Eastern Cape/Kwa	3
July 1998	Mozambique	Visit projects in Zulu, Natal and Maputo	9
August 1998	Tanzania	Visit DFID projects in Trnga and Mbeya	3

The average cost of the flights taken to make these trips for the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 is £5,050 compared to £10,409 under the last year of the previous Administration.

Average cost for the last Administration is made up of 2 flights undertaken by Baroness Chalker.

South East Asia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has held with IMF officials concerning the impact of the IMF's rescue package of levels of poverty in South East Asia. [58161]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer discussed this and other matters at the recent IMF and World bank meetings in Washington. He emphasised the need for the IMF and World bank to work together in the design of programmes to ensure that Governments have in place policies to strengthen social systems and tackle the social impact of sudden shocks to the financial system, and that the conditions they attach to programmes preserve as far as possible investment in the social, education and employment programmes which are the foundation for growth.

In that respect, he called upon the World bank to develop as a matter of urgency a code of general principles of good practice in social policy, in consultation with other organisations, that should be drawn upon by the IMF and the World bank in developing adjustment programmes in response to crises. Following my right hon. Friend's proposals, the G7 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors agreed in their recent statement on the world economy that more attention must be given in times of crisis to the effect of economic adjustment on the most vulnerable groups in society.

DEFENCE

RAF Bases

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of (a) RAF Northolt, (b) RAF Uxbridge and (c) RAF Bentley Priory. [59847]

Mr. Spellar: The RAF sites at Northolt, Uxbridge and Bentley Priory are currently the subject of a formal rationalisation study which includes all the Defence Estate sites within the Greater London area.

The study team is due to make a report to Ministers at the end of the year.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997; [55545]

(2) if he will list the occasions of ministerial use of RAF aircraft since 1 May 1997 indicating the Minister, the date of trips, the departure and destination points and the costs. [55564]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 19 October 1998]: This question could be answered in full only at disproportionate cost. Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those which applied under the previous Administration. Between 2 May 1997 and 30 September 1998 Ministers in this department have used RAF aircraft on the occasions which are set out in a table, a copy of which will be placed in the Library of the House.

The average cost of the flights taken to meet these trips for the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 is £3,910 compared to an average cost of £3,433 in the last year of the previous Administration.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if departments have to pay the full cost to the RAF when Ministers from other departments use RAF planes on official business. [55573]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 19 October 1998]: When Ministers from all Government departments use RAF aircraft on official business they are charged at a "no-loss" rate (the direct cost excluding overheads). This represents the same charging policy as under the previous administration.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the VIP transport journeys undertaken by the XV108 since 1 May 1997, indicating in each case the (a) destination and (b) date of each trip; and the names of the VIPs carried together with the number of people accompanying them. [58305]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given to him today by my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister, Official Report, columns 742–46, and the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary, Official Report, column 808.

Cadet Forces

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the budget for the cadet forces in the current financial year; what it was for the last financial year; and what the figure will be for the next financial year. [57172]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The budgets for the Cadet Forces for financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99 are as follows:

£ million

	F/Y 1997–98	F/Y 1998–99

Air Training Corps	16.76	17.11
Combined Cadet Force	6.16	7.18
Total	56.37	57.89

[58713]

Mr. Spellar: Booker's decisions on sourcing products for use by the Armed Forces at home and overseas are based on my Department's requirement that it seek the best prices consistent with meeting our quality specification and assuring continuity of supply. We require it to look to buy British products wherever this cost is effective. I have asked my officials to review the arrangements for the supply of lamb to the Falklands Island Garrison. I shall write to the hon. Member when this review is completed in the New Year.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the current security classifications are of the newsletters produced for the staff of (a) the RAF Personnel Management Agency, (b) the Logistic Information Systems Agency, (c) the Defence Dental Agency and (d) the Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre; how often each newsletter is produced; and when each newsletter was first produced. [60771]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executives of the Agencies concerned. I have asked the Chief Executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from S. J. Lloyd to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 19 November 1998:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about Agency Staff Newsletters as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre Defence Agency.

There were three questions posed concerning the classification, frequency of production and the date of initial issue of the publication.

The Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Centre Defence Agency newsletter entitled 'Lynx' is an unclassified document produced as a suggested management aid to the move to Agency status. Its continued production is in support of the communication activity linked to retention of Investors In People accreditation.

The publication is produced on a quarterly basis. To date there have been seven editions with issue number eight almost ready to go to press.

The first edition was issued in the Autumn of 1996.

I hope that the above answers fully the questions posed.

Letter from I. G. McIntyre to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 19 November 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the publication of newsletters as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Dental Agency.

The Defence Dental Agency produces an unclassified Newsletter on a quarterly basis. The first issue was produced in September 1996. The Newsletter is supplemented by a further unclassified publication known as "Root Issues".

Letter from Alan Cowpe to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 19 November 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the publication of newsletters, as this matters falls within the responsibility of the Air Secretary as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Personnel Management Agency. The Air Secretary is absent on duty so I am replying on his behalf.

The RAF Personnel Management Agency produces an unclassified newsletter on a monthly basis. The first newsletter was produced in October 1996.

Letter from P. A. Flanagan to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 19 November 1998:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the current security classification of the newsletter produced by the Logistic Information Systems Agency, how often it is produced and when it was first produced.

The newsletter, called Insight, has no security classification, it is produced 6 times a year and was first produced in November 1997. The newsletter is distributed internally to all members of staff.

Additionally the Training and Personnel Division produce an unclassified monthly newsletter, this was first produced in June 1997, this is distributed monthly to all LISA staff.

HMS Ocean

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on repairs and maintenance on HMS 'Ocean' since her launch. [60631]

Mr. Spellar: As I said in my answers to the hon. Member on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 638, and 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 12, HMS Ocean was damaged on launch and a package of repairs costing some £1.125 million was needed. The cost of these repairs was borne by MOD under its indemnity scheme. HMS Ocean was subsequently dry-docked at Portsmouth and further repairs were undertaken to her tail shaft bearings and 'A' bracket bearings. The cost of, and liability for, these repairs is currently the subject of a Board of Inquiry and is not expected to be resolved before the end of the year. If MOD accepts liability for the costs involved, the information will be publicly available in the usual way. In addition, approximately £20k was incurred to repair one of the ship's switchboards and this will be recovered by the Prime Contractor under the contract.

As part of her acceptance, HMS Ocean was the subject of a programme of defect rectification under an agreed procedure with the Prime Contractor. This process is common to the acceptance of all warships and the costs incurred are predominantly the responsibility of the Prime Contractor. Although this process is still underway, no costs have so far been borne by MOD.

HMS Ocean has not required maintenance beyond planned routine work since her launch. We do not maintain a complete record of this maintenance centrally and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Allivane

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors led to his Department's intervention in the affairs of Allivane in relation to defence contracts. [60814]

Mr. Spellar: I am not aware that any such intervention took place.

RAF Brize Norton

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the daily cost is of keeping non-RAF planes on stand-by for foreign Governments at RAF Brize Norton. [60462]

Mr. Spellar: Except in circumstances where reciprocal arrangements exist, aircraft of a foreign government making use of any MOD airfield, including RAF Brize Norton, are normally required to pay appropriate landing, parking, and handling fees, and to meet the full costs of any additional support required, thus avoiding any direct costs falling to my Department.

HMS Intrepid

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on repairs, refits and maintenance of HMS 'Intrepid' in each of the last five years. [60632]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Military Aircrew

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircrew in the United Kingdom forces were born in Scotland; how many are pilots of (a) combat aircraft, (b) transport aircraft and (c) helicopters by arm of the service, and how many are other aircrew by (i) arm of service and (ii) function. [55406]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Black Boxes

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to review the design parameters of black boxes. [60477]

Mr. Spellar: Design parameters of Flight Data Recorders and Cockpit Voice Recorders (generally known as 'Black Boxes', are set out in Defence Standards 00–970 'Design and Airworthiness Requirements for Service Aircraft'. These are kept under review to reflect civil and military experience and are aligned with relevant civil requirements as defined by the European Organisation for Civil Aviation Equipment (EUROCAE).

Riot Control Agents

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 June 1998, Official Report, column 230, on riot control agents, if his Department has completed its review of the quantity of CS gas which it holds. [60329]

Mr. Spellar: The MOD has now completed its review of CS gas holdings, which has confirmed a continuing requirement for CS gas as part of a generic, non-lethal weapon capability for operational deployments, and for use in NBC training. Stockholdings will be consistent with the identified requirement.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judge Fingret

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what race awareness course Judge Fingret has attended since his appointment to the Bench. [60326]

Mr. Hoon: Judge Fingret was appointed a Circuit Judge in 1992. He attended a seminar on ethnic minority issues organised by the Ethnic Minorities Advisory Committee of the Judicial Studies Board on 28 and 29 March 1996.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will call for a report on the statement made by Judge Fingret at the Old Bailey case on the sentences of Timothy Heat and Jason Huczek. [60325]

Mr. Hoon: Judge Fingret's remarks as to whether this had been a racially motivated offence were made in the context of deciding the appropriate level of sentence. Judges are free to reach such decisions without interference from Government ministers and it would therefore be inappropriate for me to ask the Judge for a report.

High Court Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many high court judges he has appointed who are (a) Asian and (b) black. [60327]

Mr. Hoon: As at 1 November 1998 there were 98 High Court Judges. No Asian or black judges have been appointed to the High Court Bench either before or after May 1997.

Asylum Appeals

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department for what reasons the Chief Adjudicator of the Immigration Appellate Authority transferred asylum appeals out of London to provincial hearing centres. [60255]

Mr. Hoon: The Chief Adjudicator considers that it is in the appellant's best interest that a claim falling within the Refugee Convention is recognised as soon as possible, just as it is in the public interest that claims not falling within the Convention are similarly determined within a reasonable time. Therefore it was unreasonable for appellants to wait for up to a year for a hearing in London, when hearing dates were available in provincial centres within six to eight weeks.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department which interested parties the Chief Adjudicator of the Immigration Appellate Authority consulted before bringing forward asylum appeals and transferring asylum appeals to provincial hearing centres. [60257]

Mr. Hoon: The proposal was discussed at an Immigration Appellate Authority Users Meeting in July which was attended by representatives from the Refugee Legal Centre, Immigration Advisory Service, the Immigration Law Practioners' Association and other interested parties.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what studies are being made of the effects on asylum seekers of the transfer of asylum appeals to provincial hearing centres. [60256]

Mr. Hoon: Although no study has yet taken place by the Immigration Appellate Authority it is monitoring the extent to which appellants whose cases are transferred are unrepresented at their hearing. The hearings of the transferred cases have only just started so it is too soon to draw any conclusions.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what monitoring he is carrying out of the effect that bringing forward appeals is having on the Refugee Legal Centre. [60254]

Mr. Hoon: No monitoring is being carried out by the Lord Chancellor's Department. It is for the Refugee Legal Centre to notify the Immigration Appellate Authority of any problems that this policy causes them.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what monitoring he is carrying out of the effect that transfer of asylum appeals to provincial centres is having on legal representation at asylum appeals. [60253]

Mr. Hoon: The Immigration Appellate Authority is keeping a record of the number of appellants whose cases are transferred and who are unrepresented at their hearings. However, the hearings of the transferred cases have only just started so it is too soon to draw any conclusions about the effect on legal representation. The information will be used to report to the Chief Adjudicator on the effect of the initiative.

Civil Court Fees

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what principles will underpin the new civil court fees structure which will accompany the unified rules of court to be introduced next April; and if he will make a statement. [60833]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor issued a discussion paper in February 1998 and has concluded in the light of the responses that the civil court fee structure will be based on the following key principles.

Court fees should not act as a barrier to access to justice. Litigants should not expect the taxpayer to pay for the court services they use, if they can afford to do so themselves. We shall continue to provide protection for the less well-off through a system of exemptions and remissions. In addition, fees for Children Act 1989 applications, adoptions, and domestic violence injunctions will be subsidised by the taxpayer. All other fees will be set to recover the full cost of the service provided.

Fees will broadly match the cost of the service for which they are charged. Within civil proceedings, fees payable on issuing a claim will be banded according to the value of the claim and will still be used to defray the bulk of the cost of proceedings. Litigants will pay fees which match the average cost of the service for which they are charged, rather than the specific costs of their particular case. Fees will be paid by the claimant, or where a specific application has been made, by the applicant, and will be paid in advance.

A structure based on these principles will be fairer than the present one. It will encourage and enable litigants to make responsible choices about whether to proceed, while ensuring that the taxpayer's contribution is clearly targeted on the people who really need it.

The Court Service is publishing a consultation paper today on the charging points and the levels at which fees should be set. The paper, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House, includes proposals that separate fees will be set for the main stages of the new civil procedures, introducing charging points at allocation and listing.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55555]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 19 October 1998]: This question could be answered in full only at disproportionate cost. Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration.

No such costs have been incurred in the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 compared to an average cost of £3,094.00 for flights by RAF Aircraft under the last year of the previous Administration.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people he has employed in his Department under the New Deal arrangements. [60370]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to himby the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment with responsibility for Life Long Learning, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie), on 19 November 1998, Official Report, column 755.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Common Market Referendum

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 October 1998, Official Report, column 59, if he will make a statement on his policy on the preservation of material of historical value held on file by the security services relating to the 1975 referendum on United Kingdom membership of the Common Market. [60444]

Mr. Straw: The responsibility for decisions on the destruction of Security Service files rests with the Director General. The criteria which the Service applies in deciding whether to retain files on the grounds of historical interest were listed in my reply to a question from the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis) on 20 January 1998, Official Report, columns 519–20. The criteria are currently being reviewed by the Advisory Council on Public Records.

Sexual Services Advertisements

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the law on newspaper classified advertisements relating to the offering of sexual services; and if he will make a statement. [60417]

Mr. Boateng: We have no such plans. We shall, however, shortly be issuing a consultation paper on proposals to strengthen the criminal law in relation to the nuisance of prostitutes' calling cards in public telephone boxes.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60366]

Mr. Straw: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60525]

Mr. Straw: Non-Department Public Bodies (NDPBs) are encouraged to participate as employers in New Deal. Information on the numbers of people taken under New Deal by NDPBs is not held centrally.

Human Rights

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on his Department's review of those international human rights treaties which the United Kingdom has not yet fully ratified; if human rights groups in the United Kingdom have been consulted about their views; when the results of the review will be announced; and if detailed reasons will be given for decisions, with particular reference, in each case, to protocols 4 and 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights and the first and second optional protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. [60415]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We expect work on the review to be completed by the end of the year. A number of human rights groups have already submitted their views, either in the context of work on the Human Rights Bill, or in response to the announcement of the review. Any other group wishing to submit views should do so as soon as possible.

We will announce the outcome of the review to the House, with a summary of the issues and the decisions.

Compensation Claims

Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost to public funds of claims by employees and the public for compensation in respect of (a) personal injury and (b) employment protection in the last year for which figures are available. [59058]

Mr. Straw: There are no centrally maintained records for all these types of compensation. Delegation of personnel functions and of authority to make such awards has resulted in less central record keeping. To obtain all the information requested would require an extensive trawl of personnel records which could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Awards under section 11 of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme, in respect of personal injury to employees, totalled £822,594 during the period April 1998-September 1998. Compensation awarded by the Civil Service Appeal Board totalled £26,270 during the year 1997–98.

Traffic Police

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has made of (a) the number of traffic police officers and (b) expenditure on traffic police, within (i) the Metropolitan Police and (ii) UK police budgets as a whole (1) at the latest available date and (2) five years ago. [59894]

Kate Hoey: The information requested as regards England and Wales is not collected centrally and could be obtained, from each police force, only at disproportionate cost. The allocation of resources to different functions is an operational matter for individual Chief Constables.

Traffic policing does not necessarily occur independently of other police work and the number of officers deployed to the traffic division is not indicative of the money spent on traffic policing. A large part of traffic officers' time is spent dealing with ordinary crime. It is an advantage that traffic officers deal with matters unrelated to traffic and that beat officers will also deal with traffic offences, thus contributing to more efficient ways of policing.

The Commissioner tells me that an internal review showed that there were 760 traffic officers in Metropolitan Police in June 1998, costing £39,436,913. There are no reliable figures available for the number of traffic officers employed five years ago. However, there were 875 traffic officers in post before the Metropolitan Police Service's restructuring in April 1994, at an estimated cost of £41,617,204.

Injuries and Deaths (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the incidence of (a) injury and (b) death in the Metropolitan Police area, in terms of recorded annual numbers per 1,000 of the population, arising from (i) traffic accidents and (ii) assaults and other violent crimes. [59878]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has supplied the following figures for 1997–98:

Total Numbers

	Personal injury road traffic accidents	Assaults/violent crimes
Injury	40,046	49,785
Death	275	[1]174

[1] Excludes all causing death by dangerous driving cases, of which there were 29 deaths recorded in 1997–98.

Note:

Per 1,000 of the population based on the Office for National Statistics mid-year estimate for 1996 for the Metropolitan Police District (7,564,200).

	Personal injury road traffic accidents	Assaults/violent crimes
Injury	5.29	6.58
Death	0.04	[1]0.02

[1] Excludes all causing death by dangerous driving cases, of which there were 29 deaths recorded in 1997–98.

Bullwood Prison

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute an inquiry into security procedures at Bullwood Prison, Hockley, following the findings of the police investigation. [60337]

Mr. George Howarth: There were two police investigations into the death of Ms O'Dwyer. The first, a routine investigation, concluded that there were no suspicious circumstances. A second investigation was undertaken following the adjournment of the inquest when allegations were made that a witness had committed perjury. The matter was referred to the Crown Prosecution Service who have decided not to proceed further.

The Prison Service is considering the outcome of the Coroner's inquest together with the findings of its own internal investigation. I am content that this constitutes a satisfactory examination of procedures at Bullwood Hall.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the findings of the internal inquiry conducted by the Governor of Bullwood Prison, Hockley, into the circumstances surrounding the death of the prisoner Josie O'Dwyer. [60336]

Mr. George Howarth: The Prison Service is currently reviewing the policy on disclosure of internal investigation reports. The aim is to provide a protocol which will allow disclosure as soon as possible after the report is completed. When the revised policy is introduced, it will not apply retrospectively.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many decisions have been made to date on asylum applications made between 1 July 1993 and 31 December 1995 as a result of the measures announced in the White Paper, Fairer Faster and Firmer; and how many of these decisions were for an outright refusal of the claim; [60030]

(2) how many decisions have been made to date on pre-Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 asylum applications as a result of the measures announced in the White Paper Fairer, Faster and Firmer; and how many of these decisions did not result in the granting of indefinite leave to enter or remain in the UK; [60100]

(3) how many applications for asylum have been determined in each month of 1998 to date; how many of these decisions were for (a) a grant of asylum and (b) exceptional leave to remain, excluding any decisions made under the arrangements for dealing with the pre-Asylum and Immigration Act 1993 and pre-1996 cases announced in the White Paper, Fairer, Faster and Firmer. [60099]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to the hon. Member.

Private Investigation Agencies

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to regulate private investigation agencies; and if he will make a statement. [59890]

Mr. Boateng: We intend to introduce statutory regulation which will be able to be applied to the whole of the private security industry, including private detectives, as soon as possible. We hope to bring forward firm proposals shortly.

Refugees (Slovakia and Czech Republic)

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons from (a) Slovakia and (b) the Czech Republic have awarded (i) refugee status and (ii) extended leave to remain since May 1997. [60011]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to the hon. Member.

Islamic Organisations

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the following organisations are known to operate in the United Kingdom: (a) Al-Ansar al-Shariah, (b) Al-Gamaa al Islaamiya, (c) Algerian Groupe Islamique Armee, (d) Al-Marsad al-l'lami al islami, (e) Al-Muhajir, (f) Al-Muhajiroun, (g) Committee for the Defence of Legitimate Rights in Saudi Arabia, (h) Filisteen al-Muslima, (i) Front Islamique de Salvation, (j) Hamas, (k) Hizbollah, (l) Hizb-ut-Tahrir, (m) Islamic Jihad, (n) Nassiha wal-Isla, (o) Bahraini Freedom Movement, (p) Bahrain Liberation Front and (q) Islamic Observation Centre; and if (i) Ministers and (ii) officials have met representatives of the organisations. [60229]

Mr. Straw: I understand that, of the organisations listed, none has official offices in the United Kingdom. However, Al-Muhajiroun, the Committee for the Defence of Legitimate Rights in Saudi Arabia, Hizb-ut-Tahrir, the Bahraini Freedom Movement and the Bahrain Liberation Front operate publicly in the United Kingdom.

It may be that there have been contacts with individual members, but neither Home Office Ministers nor officials have had formal meetings with any of these organisations.

CS Sprays

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Police Scientific Development Branch started research into the possibility of using alternative solvents in CS sprays; when this work is expected to be completed; and if the report of the results of this research will be made public. [60292]

Mr. Boateng: The Police Scientific Development Branch has been looking at potential solvents since the beginning of the programme to review the use of incapacitants for police use in 1994. A number of studies have been performed, including one by CBD Porton Down in July 1996, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. To date, no suitable alternative to Methyl Iso-butyl Ketone (MIBK) has been found, although work is still progressing.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been undertaken by his Department since 1968 on the interaction between CS gas spray and psychotropic medication; what were the results of this research; and what research his Department intends to conduct on this topic in the future. [60291]

Mr. Boateng: There has been no research undertaken by this Department on this subject and there is none planned at present. I understand that CS is a peripheral sensory irritant and therefore unlikely to have any adverse effect on those using psychotropic drugs, as by the time CS reaches the bloodstream it will be rapidly hydrolysed (broken down by water).

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) members of the public have started legal proceedings because of injuries caused by CS sprays since January 1995; and if he will make a statement. [60332]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not kept centrally.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's guidelines for the use of CS cartridges and grenades by police forces in dealing with serious disorder. [60290]

Mr. Boateng: The guidelines have in the past been classified. The Code of Practice on Access to Government Information exempts from disclosure information that would harm national security or defence but I do not believe the guidelines come within this category. The guidelines have therefore been declassified and I am placing a copy in the Library.

CR Tear Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times police forces have used CR tear gas in public since 1968; on what dates CR gas was used in public; for what reasons; and in what circumstances police forces have been authorised to use CR tear gas in public since 1968. [60331]

Mr. Boateng: CR gas is not issued to police forces in the United Kingdom.

Co-ordinating Committee of Senior Officials

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) draft conventions and (b) proposals for a convention, under discussion in the Co-ordinating Committee of Senior Officials established under article K4 of the Treaty of Maastricht. [60096]

Kate Hoey: Three draft conventions are under discussion within the framework of the Justice and Home Affairs Council at present. They are the draft Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters between member states of the European Union, the draft Eurodac Convention and the draft Convention on Rules for the Admission of Third Country Nationals into the European Union. No proposals for further such conventions are under discussion at present.

Radioactive Gases (Cap La Hague)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Channel Islands about radiation emissions from the nuclear power station at Cap La Hague. [60111]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We received representations about possible radiation emissions from Cap La Hague from Guernsey in May 1998 and from Jersey in June 1998. The representations were communicated to the French Government. We have also had correspondence and discussions with the Channel Islands on other nuclear matters.

EU Home and Justice Convention

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 July 1997, Official Report, columns 74–76, if he will list those conventions agreed under article K3 of the Maastricht Treaty, additional to the seven already agreed by that date; and if he will indicate for each the provision for adjudication by the Court of Justice and scrutiny of each carried out by Parliament. [60095]

Kate Hoey: Three conventions have been agreed under Article K3 of the Maastricht Treaty since 1 July 1997. They are:

1. Convention on Driving Disqualifications (agreed 17 June 1998)

The purpose of this convention is to provide a mechanism whereby a driving disqualification imposed by one European Union (EU) member state on a resident of another member state may be enforced by the latter state when the driver returns to that state. Enforcement by the driver's own state will normally have the effect of removing his right to drive anywhere in the EU and beyond, during the currency of the ban.

The draft convention was sent to the House of Lords European Communities Committee for scrutiny on 24 November 1997 and was finally cleared from scrutiny on 12 March 1998. United Kingdom legislation will be required before it can be ratified.

Provision for adjudication by the European Court of Justice is contained in Article 14 of the convention. This allows for the Court to rule on any dispute between member states (which the European Council has been unable to resolve within six months), or between member states and the Commission, regarding the interpretation or application of the convention. It also allows for member states to accept the court's jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings on interpretation.

2. Convention on Jurisdiction, Recognition and Enforcement of Judgments in Matrimonial Matters (Brussels II convention) (agreed 28 May 1998).

The purpose of this convention is to lay down rules on jurisdiction and on the recognition and enforcement of judgments in certain matrimonial matters between member states. The House of Lords Committee on the European Communities examined an early draft in great detail, and took written and oral evidence. The Committee also saw and cleared from scrutiny a late draft of the convention.

Provision for adjudication by the European Court of Justice (ECJ) is contained in a separate protocol to the convention, which each member state has the option whether or not to ratify. The protocol provides for competent authorities in the member states to refer issues to the court where there is a conflict of jurisprudence, either between member states or between a member state and the Commission. Ratification of the convention will require amendment of primary legislation in the United Kingdom; this is not a priority at present. No decisions have yet been taken on whether the United Kingdom will ratify the protocol on ECJ jurisdiction.

3. Convention on Mutual Assistance and Co-operation between Customs Administration (agreed 18 December 1997).

The draft text of the 'Naples II' Convention was considered by the House of Lords European Communities Committee during November and December 1997 and cleared from scrutiny on 17 December 1997.

Under Article 26 of the convention, the European Court of Justice will have jurisdiction to resolve disputes between member states, and between a member state and the Commission, in relation to the interpretation or application of the convention where the Council is itself unable to do so within six months. In addition, jurisdiction may be conferred on the court by a member state which makes a declaration to this effect, enabling its courts and tribunals to refer questions concerning interpretation of the convention for a preliminary ruling. This jurisdiction will be similar to that described in Article 177 of the EC Treaty. The United Kingdom does not intend to make such a declaration.

Social Policy Protocol

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the application of Protocol 14 of the Treaty of Maastricht, on Social Policy, to the United Kingdom; and what steps have been taken to ensure that the provisions of the social policy are applied in the Isle of Man. [60258]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government fully support the inclusion of the Agreement on Social Policy (Protocol 14) in the Amsterdam Treaty as the new Social Chapter, and will implement the measures already agreed under it.

European Union rules apply to the Isle of Man only to the limited extent set out in Protocol 3 of the Treaty of Accession. Broadly speaking, this includes customs matters and certain aspects of the common agricultural policy. Protocol 14 of the Treaty of Maastricht does not fall within the scope of Protocol 3 of the Treaty of Accession.

Council Directives

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the application of Council Directives (a) 96/34/EC, (b) 93/104/EEC, (c) 91/533/EC and (d) 90/270/EEC. [60088]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Fire Safety

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government will take to take forward the proposals in the document, Fire Safety Legislation for the Fut[illegible] [60190]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Heppell) on 8 April 1998, Official Report, columns 254–55. It remains our intention to reform fire safety legislation along the lines set out in the consultation document "Fire Safety Legislation for the Future" as soon as is practicable.

Crown Dependencies (Financial Regulation)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report of the Edwards Review of Financial Regulation in the Crown Dependencies will be made publicly available. [60838]

Mr. Straw: The United Kingdom Government and the authorities in Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man welcome Andrew Edwards' report on financial regulation, which has been laid before the House today. The report is being placed in the Library and copies are also available in the Vote Office. The report, which has been produced in consultation with the Islands, contains detailed accounts of the legislation and regulatory arrangements on Jersey, Guernsey and the isle of Man respectively. It confirms that the arrangements in place conform in large measure to the internationally accepted standards of financial regulation.

The report also concludes that there are a number of changes which could raise standards still further, both in the United Kingdom itself and in the Crown Dependencies. In many cases, these conclusions are in line with policies which are already being developed. The United Kingdom Government and the Island authorities have agreed to meet in January 1999 to begin the task of examining systematically the conclusions of the Edwards Report and the plans of action being drawn up by the Islands and the United Kingdom in response to those conclusions. This programme will include new arrangements, under the chairmanship of my noble Friend the Minister of State, for all the parties to meet jointly on a regular basis to take stock of progress. These meetings will take place alternately in London and in one of the Crown Dependencies.

The United Kingdom and the Island authorities believe that the Edwards review and the follow up action on its conclusions should further strengthen effective financial regulation in the Islands and, in so doing, contribute to the long term health of the Island economies.

Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 and the Zoo Licensing Act 1984 to cover Northern Ireland. [60847]

Mr. George Howarth: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Special Constables

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the re-application process required of special constables who move to a new police area. [60642]

Mr. Boateng: The Working Group which reviewed the Special Constabulary in England and Wales during 1995–96 was aware that, in cases where a special constable wished to transfer from one force to another, the officer was required to resign from his current special constabulary and apply to his new force, undergoing the full recruitment process. The Group saw no reason why a special constable should have to resign in these circumstances and suggested that each force should have procedures and policies to administer transfers between forces, whilst recognising that it is ultimately for the chief officer of the receiving force whether to accept or reject the officer.

Following the Working Group's report, the Home Office and representatives of several special constabularies developed guidance to facilitate transfers between forces. This guidance was presented to, and endorsed by, delegates at the Special Constabulary National Conference in March 1998. It was subsequently ratified by the Standing Committee on the Special Constabulary at its inaugural meeting this month, and it will shortly be disseminated to chief officers by way of a Home Office circular.

Extradition Requests

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used in the determination of an extradition request (a) prior to the magistrates' court hearing and (b) after the court has granted the request. [60588]

Mr. Straw: I will write to my hon. Friend.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conditions were placed on General Pinochet's recent entry to the United Kingdom. [60499]

Mr. Straw: Senator Pinochet was granted leave to enter for six months' Employment and recourse to public funds was prohibited, in accordance with the Rules.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the extradition requests received concerning General Pinochet; and if he will make a statement. [60466]

Mr. Straw: I received a formal request for the extradition of Senator Pinochet from the Spanish Government on 11 November 1998. Later the same day, I received a formal request from the Swiss Government. I received a formal request for the extradition of Senator Pinochet from the French Government on 13 November 1998.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions with the Chilean authorities were held by officials of (a) his Department and (b) the Immigration Service prior to the entry of General Pinochet to the United Kingdom from Chile. [60465]

Mr. Straw: No such discussions were held by officials of my Department, including those in the Immigration Service, prior to the entry of Senator Pinochet.

Women's Land Army

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that the Women's Land Army are represented in the parade in Whitehall in 1999's Remembrance Sunday service. [60439]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I understand from the Royal British Legion who are responsible for organising the march past the Cenotaph which follows the official ceremony on Remembrance Sunday, that they intend to make proposals which will allow greater participation in future years by non ex-Service groups and individuals.

Theft

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) domestic burglaries, (b) vehicle thefts and (c) thefts from a vehicle were recorded in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1997 in Staffordshire; and what were the clear-up rates for each offence. [60244]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is given in the table.

Notifiable offences recorded by the police: Staffordshire

Burglary in a dwelling	12,090	12,395	11,272

Percentage cleared up	26	28	27
Theft from vehicle	14,970	13,415	13,468
Percentage cleared up	20	22	19

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average age of people convicted of (a) vehicle theft and (b) domestic burglary in Staffordshire in the last year for which figures are available. [60245]

Mr. Boateng: Provisional information for 1997 on the number of offenders convicted at all courts in the Staffordshire Police Force Area by age is given in the table.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which treaty articles, subsequent to the coming into force of the Treaty of Amsterdam, will provide powers enabling officials of the Government to (a) question, (b) examine the belongings of, (c) search and (d) detain any persons possessing documents purporting to show that they are citizens of (i) the European Union and (ii) a state being part of the European Economic Area. [60681]

Kate Hoey: I will write to my hon. Friend.

National Assembly for Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has with regard to the deposits to be paid by candidates standing for (i) constituency seats and (ii) list seats for the National Assembly for Wales; and what plans he has to set expenditure limits on the election campaigns of such candidates, with particular reference to the position of candidates who may appear on both the constituency and list nominations. [60715]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to the right hon. Member.

Police Helicopters

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ban flights by police helicopters in London between the hours of 11 pm and 6 am. [60634]

Mr. Boateng: The use of police helicopters is governed by the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA), as outlined in Civil Air Publication 612 (Police Air Operations Manual Part 1). This publication sets out the joint CAA/Home Office policy for the conduct of police air operations.

There are no restrictions on the times during which police helicopters, or any other helicopters, are allowed to fly. The deployment of the helicopter is an operational matter for the Commissioner.

The Commissioner tells me that the Metropolitan Police have a self imposed limitation on when they fly at night. This limitation runs from 2am until 10am. Only when a life is likely to be saved will the helicopter fly during this period.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each series of research papers which his Department currently produces. [60691]

Prisoners (Amenities)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Kingston Prison is to be included in the initiative to install televisions in prisoners' cells; and if he will make a statement. [60791]

Mr. George Howarth: All prison establishments in England and Wales are included in the initiative and will in due course provide in-cell television as an earned privilege. Installation of in-cell televisions will take place on a rolling basis over an initial three year period. Kingston is not included in the 80 establishments installing in-cell television this financial year.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria the prison service uses in denying prisoners access to books which are publicly available. [60015]

Mr. George Howarth: Prisoners are normally allowed to receive, or make arrangements to purchase, books while in prison; to have access to the prison library; and to have at least three books in their possession at any one time, subject to the volumetric limits that apply to prisoners' property.

However, there are a number of grounds on which access to publications may be limited or denied. These are:

(i) Governors have discretion to withhold or withdraw any publication if it constitutes a risk to security or good order or discipline, or where the medical officer considers that possession of the material is likely to have an adverse effect on the prisoner's physical or mental condition;

(ii) prisoners may have access to publications/library facilities withdrawn for a limited period following an adjudication for an offence against discipline (although access to approved religious books would not be removed in such circumstances);

(iii) under the national incentives and earned privileges policy the number of books prisoners may hold, and frequency of visits to the library, may increase or decrease depending upon the privilege level which the prisoner concerned has attained; and

(iv) where a prisoner has requested a book which is not available in the prison library, attempts will be made to obtain it through the inter library loan system or, if necessary, the British Library. It is possible in such circumstances that there may be delays in obtaining the requested publication and a limit on its availability to the prisoner once obtained.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55553]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 19 October 1998]: This Question could be answered in full only at disproportionate cost. Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration.

Between 2 May 1997 and 30 September 1998, Ministers in this Department have used RAF aircraft on the following occasions:

Date	Destination	Purpose	Numbers accomp. Minister
May 1997	Brussels	Meeting with Spanish & German Ministers	3
July 1997	Cardiff	To address ACPO[1] function	2
September 1997	Teesside	Youth Justice Workshop	1
October 1997	Luxembourg	Meeting with Irish Justice Minister and Home Affairs Council meeting	2
December 1997	Sarajevo & Split	Visit British Police serving in Bosnia	2
December 1997	Banja Luka	Visit Police serving in Bosnia	2
August 1998	Belfast	Various meetings	2

[1] ACPO Association of Chief Police Officers

The average cost of the flights taken to meet these trips for the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 is £1,795 compared to an average cost of £2,447 under the last year of the previous administration.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in her Department has other than for flights to and from Northern Ireland used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to her Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by her Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55560]

Marjorie Mowlam [holding answer 19 October 1998]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Agriculture

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she is taking to alleviate the crisis in each sector of the agricultural industry in Northern Ireland. [59152]

Mr. Paul Murphy: In the past twelve months Grants and Subsidies payments worth over £200 million have been made to farmers in Northern Ireland. Included in these payments are the aid packages announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham), the then Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, in December 1997 and February 1998.

In addition, the Prime Minister announced an additional £7 million for processing and marketing grants over the next three years to improve competitiveness in the agri-food industry and enable value to be added to what is produced on Northern Ireland farms.

Following the recent hard work by both Government and the industry to secure the lifting of the beef export ban, exports of beef from Northern Ireland have now commenced on a commercial scale. In recognition of the fact that it will take considerable effort to regain lost markets for Northern Ireland beef, the Chancellor of the Exchequer has put forward £2 million over the next three years to support the marketing work of the industry. Government are continuing to press for the introduction of a Date Based Export Scheme, which will bring benefit to more Northern Ireland farmers.

More favourable beef intervention arrangements have been secured for Northern Ireland and "flagged" suckler cow producers have received financial aid totalling £0.5 million.

Pig producers have been paid almost £0.5 million under the Pig Welfare Slaughter Scheme and export refunds for pigmeat were further increased on 15 October. DANI and the IDB are working with Unigate to enable them to take forward their re-investment plans in Northern Ireland with all reasonable speed.

Private Storage for sheepmeat will operate from 19 October to 20 November 1998 in the UK.

80 per cent. of beef special premium and suckler cow premium has been paid up front, rather than 60 per cent. as in previous years. £38 million in advance payments have been made to Beef and Suckler Cow producers in the last 2 weeks. This is some 2 months earlier than has been achieved in recent years.

Around £6.3 million of Sheep Annual Premium (SAP) payments (2nd advance) were brought forward from December 1998 to October. Arrangements are in hand to expedite Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance (HLCA) payments in the Spring of 1999.

On top of this, Government also announced, on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 624–40, a special aid package for UK farmers amounting to some £125 million. This package is likely to be worth some £19 million to Northern Ireland farmers and will include payment of agrimonetary compensation, an increase in HLCAs and the temporary continuation of the Calf Processing Aid Scheme (CPAS).

Terrorist Offences

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in prison for terrorist offences she expects to remain in prison in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Great Britain, by 31 December 2000; and to which terrorist or paramilitary organisations those prisoners belong. [59083]

Mr. Ingram: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many murders were committed with firearms in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years and the current year; in how many cases in each year the fatal shots were fired with (1) a handgun, indicating how many such handguns were (a) revolvers and (b) automatic or semi-automatic weapons, (2) rifles of .22 calibre, (3) other rifles, indicating in respect of each of these two categories how many were (a) bolt action and (b) semi-automatic weapons, (4) machine guns and submachine guns, (5) shotguns, indicating how many such deaths were caused by legally held firearms of each category; and how many victims were killed by (i) the legal owner of the weapon used, (ii) terrorists, (iii) members of the armed forces, (iv) police officers and (v) other members of the security forces and prison officers. [59031]

Mr. Ingram: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

CR Tear Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) in what circumstances the military and security forces in Northern Ireland have been authorised to use CR tear gas since 1968; [60283]

(2) how many times the security forces in Northern Ireland have used CR tear gas since 1968; on what dates CR gas was used; and for what reasons. [60286]

Mr. Ingram: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Police Interviews (Audio Recording)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 210, relating to the audio recording of police interviews with terrorist suspects, if she will list the differences to which she refers. [60583]

Mr. Ingram: When the Draft Code of Practice under Section 53A of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996 was being drawn up, no record was made of where the draft Code departed from the equivalent PACE Code.

To provide the information requested would require a check to be made of the draft Code against the NI PACE Code of Practice on the Tape Recording (Code E), which itself differs from the England and Wales PACE Code. The information is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost and outside the timescale allowed for reply. I have, however, arranged to have copies of the relevant codes relating to the EPA and NI PACE placed in the Library.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60375]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As of 18 November 1998, 8 vacancies have been identified and 2 New Deal jobseekers have been employed in the Northern Ireland Civil Service under the New Deal programme's Employment Option for 18–24 year olds. The identification of further vacancies suitable for New Deal jobseekers is ongoing and more appointments are expected to follow.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from her Department. [60521]

Mr. Ingram: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when sweaters were procured for the Royal Ulster Constabulary marked NI Police Service; and how many have been (a) ordered and (b) issued. [60362]

Mr. Ingram: No sweaters marked NI Police Service have been procured for issue to the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Water Cannon

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances the military and security forces in Northern Ireland have been authorised to use water cannon since 1968. [60288]

Mr. Ingram: Water cannons were withdrawn from service by the Royal Ulster Constabulary in December 1969 and have not been used since. Records are not available as to their usage prior to that time.

Integrated Education

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the Chairman and other members of the Government's Working Party on Integrated Education and the organisations they represent. [60463]

Mr. McFall: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Plastic and Rubber Bullets

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been killed as a result of the use of plastic or rubber bullets by the security forces in Northern Ireland since 1970. [60287]

Mr. Ingram: Records show that 16 deaths have resulted from the use of rubber and plastic baton rounds since 1970.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been injured as a result of the use of plastic or rubber bullets by the security forces in Northern Ireland since March 1981. [60284]

Mr. Ingram: Records indicate that 594 persons have been injured from the use of plastic baton rounds since March 1981.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Royal Ulster Constabulary (a) first and (b) last used rubber bullets; in which years since 1968 it used rubber bullets; and how many rubber bullets it used in each of those years. [60285]

Mr. Ingram: The first rubber baton rounds were fired by the Army in August 1970 with the last fired in November 1975. Plastic baton rounds were phased in from 1973. The RUC were first issued with baton guns in October 1978. The table shows the number of rounds fired since 1970.

[1] Police and Army

Notes:

1. There are no figures separating police and Army firings prior to 1981. Up to 1978 all baton rounds were fired by the Army. From October 1978 to March 1981 the figures shown include both police and Army.
2. The Army figures for 1997 and the RUC figures for 1998 may be subject to minor adjustment.
3. The figures for the years 1973, 1974 and 1975 include 42,216 and 3,556 plastic baton rounds respectively.
4. The dramatic increase in 1981 can be put down to the heavy rioting in support of the hunger strikers who died that year.

National Security Certificate Procedure

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received from the Bar Council of Northern Ireland concerning the proposed role of members of the Bar appointed by the Attorney-General to represent parties excluded from hearings before tribunals under the National Security Certificate procedure; what replies she has sent; if she will make a statement; and if she will place the relevant correspondence in the Library. [60438]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Chairman of the Bar Council of Northern Ireland wrote to me on 5 November 1998 expressing a preliminary view on the proposed role of members of the Bar appointed by the Attorney-General to represent parties excluded from hearings before the proposed National Security Certificate Tribunal. The letter was copied to the Attorney-General. As the point raised related substantially to the operation of the Bar's Code of Conduct, the Attorney-General replied to the letter on 13 November. With my agreement, the letter was expressed to be a response on my behalf also.

I do not intend to make a statement but I will arrange to have copies of the two letters placed in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in the Cabinet Office has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to the Cabinet Office and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by the Cabinet Office (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55548]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 October 1998]: Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration. The volume of travel by RAF aircraft and private charter flights reflects our Presidency of the European Union, our chairmanship of the G8, and the leading role played by this Government in peace talks in Northern Ireland and the Middle East. This Question could be answered in the precise terms requested only at disproportionate cost. Between 2 May 1997 and 30 September 1998 I have used RAF aircraft/private charter aircraft on the following occasions:

The average cost of the flights undertaken for these trips for the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 is £11,613 compared to £11,136 under the last year of the previous Administration. In addition to these flights, the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster used an RAF plane to make an official visit to Yeovilton in July 1997 accompanied by 3 officials. The cost was £1,109.

Euro

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 28 October 1998, Official Report, column 171, what are the criteria for determining the appropriateness of the Euro Preparations Unit producing information packs for schools. [59857]

The Prime Minister: The purpose of the Government's communication campaign is to ensure UK businesses are aware of the implications of the introduction of the single currency from 1 January 1999.

A number of schools have requested copies of our fact-sheets, primarily for pupils on business studies and economics courses. No information packs have been specifically produced for schools.

The criterion for determining the focus of our information campaign is its effectiveness in raising business awareness of the advent of the euro next year. The focus and effectiveness of the campaign are things we keep under review.

Senior Salaries Review Body

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister if he will set out the revised Terms of Reference of the Senior Salaries Review Body; and if he will make a statement. [60184]

The Prime Minister: The Terms of Reference for the Senior Salaries Review Body have been revised as follows to reflect the key considerations of the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper.

The Review Body on Senior Salaries provides independent advice to the Prime Minister, the Lord Chancellor and the Secretary of State for Defence on the remuneration of holders of judicial office; senior civil servants; senior officers of the armed forces; and other such public appointments as may from time to time be specified.

The Review Body also advises the Prime Minister from time to time on the pay and pensions of Members of Parliament and their allowances; on Peers' allowances; and on the pay, pensions and allowances of Ministers and others whose pay is determined by the Ministerial and Other Salaries Act 1975.

In reaching its recommendations, the Review Body is to have regard to the following considerations:

the need to recruit, retain and motivate suitably able and qualified people to exercise their different responsibilities;

Government policies for improving the public services including the requirement on Departments to meet the output targets for the delivery of departmental services;

the funds available to departments as set out in the Government's departmental expenditure limits;

the Government's inflation target.

In making recommendations, the Review Body shall consider any factors that the Government and other witnesses may draw to its attention. In particular it shall have regard to:

differences in terms and conditions of employment between the public and private sector between the remit groups, taking account of relative job security and the value of benefits in kind;

changes in national pay systems, including flexibility and the reward of success; and job weight in differentiating the remuneration of particular posts; and the need to maintain broad linkage between the remuneration of the three main remit groups, while allowing sufficient flexibility to take account of the circumstances of each group.

The Review Body may make other recommendations as it sees fit:

to ensure that, as appropriate, the remuneration of the remit groups relates coherently to that of their subordinates, encourages efficiency and effectiveness, and takes account of the different management and organisational structures that may be in place from time to time;

to relate reward to performance where appropriate;

to maintain the confidence of those covered by the Review Body's remit that it's recommendations have been properly and fairly determined; and to ensure that the remuneration of those covered by the remit is consistent with the Government's equal opportunities policy.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the problems which have arisen in his Department from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60069]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 November 1998]: For the purpose of this answer, my office is part of the Cabinet Office.

The Cabinet Office and its agencies have well developed Year 2000 programmes in place and the necessary remedial work to correct non-compliant systems including those involving embedded chips is well advanced.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the contingency plans drawn up by his Department in relation to problems arising from millennium compliance, including the embedded chip problem, after 31 December 1999. [60071]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 November 1998]: For the purpose of this answer, my office is part of the Cabinet Office.

The Cabinet Office and its agencies business continuity plans are being reviewed to ensure that they deal with any risks posed by the millennium bug.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what is his latest estimate of the total cost of tackling the millennium computer problem including the embedded chip problem in his Department, separately identifying expenditure to date and future expenditure; and if he will make a statement; [60068]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the computer systems in his Department will be modified and tested in relation to the millennium computer problem by January 1999; and if he will make a statement. [60070]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 November 1998]: For the purpose of this answer, my office is part of the Cabinet Office.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Garston (Maria Eagle) on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 1109, in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government department and agencies progress in tackling the bug. This also covered key organisations within the wider public sector. The information the hon. Member requests will be found in the copies of departments' plans which have been published in the Libraries of the House. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be published in the Libraries of the House and on the internet.

Advisory Committee on Business Appointments

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he proposes to take following the recent report of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments. [60836]

The Prime Minister: I am today placing in the Libraries of both Houses revised "Guidelines on the Acceptance of Appointments or Employment outside Governments by Former Ministers of the Crown". They will replace the existing Guidelines, which the Committee said could be improved, from the start of the next Session of Parliament.

The changes are designed to make clearer the role of the Committee and the circumstances in which former Ministers should consult them, and do not alter the system itself which the Committee reported was otherwise working well.

Pörtschach

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will deposit in the Library a copy of the speech he delivered at Pörtschach; and what (i) minutes and (ii) notes were taken by (a) United Kingdom delegates and (b) the Council Secretariat. [60779]

The Prime Minister: This meeting of the Heads of Government was an informal meeting in preparation for the full European Council in Vienna, at which a broad range of issues were discussed. No formal decisions were taken.

I did not make a formal speech. As this was an informal meeting there were neither formal minutes nor conclusions. As has been the practice under previous administrations, a member of the UK delegation took an informal record of the discussion, but as is standard practice, this remains confidential. There is no formal Council Secretariat record.

Chile

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has held with the Prime Minister of Spain concerning relations with (a) Chile and (b) the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [60468]

The Prime Minister: I hold regular discussions with Mr. Aznar on EU and other international issues both bilaterally and at meetings of EU Heads of State and Government. Mr. Aznar and I met most recently in London on 2 November and have had a number of telephone conversations since then.

Iraq

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had with his Ministers prior to his decison to authorise armed action against Iraq on 14 November; and when. [60651]

The Prime Minister: It is the normal convention under this and previous Governments that discussions which take place between the Prime Minister and Ministers are not routinely disclosed.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 610, what support there is in (a) the Arab world, (b) Iran, (c) the Islamic world and (d) Asia for sustained bombing of Iraq if Saddam Hussein again obstructs the work of the UNSCOM inspectors. [60730]

The Prime Minister: The UN Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1205, condemning Iraq's decision to cease co-operation with UNSCOM as a flagrant violation of UN resolutions. The Damascus Declaration states (Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and UAE) announced that Iraq would be responsible for any consequences if it did not reverse its decision. The international community has lost patience with Iraqi intransigence and non-co-operation.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of whether Baghdad received warning of an imminent attack, and from what source. [60732]

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in my statement on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 607–10, a private warning from the UK was delivered directly to the Iraqi Permanent Representative at the UN on 12 November. When the Iraqi government climbed down, they had clearly assessed that this and other warnings were serious and that military action was imminent.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the collateral damage to civilian Iraqi people which would result from a military air strike against Iraq. [60742]

The Prime Minister: The risk of collateral damage is a major consideration in selecting targets and only precision guided weaponry would be used. Military action can never be risk-free, but the combination of precision weaponry and careful planning offers by far the best chance of minimising such dangers.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 610, what the basis was for his statement about Iraqi propaganda being repeated in Britain. [60733]

The Prime Minister: I was commenting on the tendency of some sections of the British media to report Iraqi Government information as fact.

Iraq claims that the suffering of its people is due to sanctions. But the UN Special Rapporteur on Human Rights concluded in his October interim report that the Government of Iraq bear the primary responsibility for their continuing suffering. Reasons for this include Iraq's decision to prohibit shipments of humanitarian aid from third countries and its decision to stop supplying its food ration to the Iraqi people. Iraq complains that its people are starving, but it is selling wheat and barley to Jordan and Syria at low prices.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister (1) pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 610, what consultation he has had with international lawyers about attacking Iraq without further warning; [60731]

(2) pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 611, what consultation he has had with international lawyers about removing a head of state. [60735]

The Prime Minister: None.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 609, for what reasons there is to be no negotiation with Iraq. [60729]

The Prime Minister: Iraq's obligations under the relevant UN Security Council resolutions are clear. There is no need for negotiations.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 608, what representations he has received from (a) Iran, (b) Jordan, (c) Saudi Arabia, (d) Syria, (e) other Arab states and (f) Israel about the risks to them from Iraq's behaviour. [60728]

The Prime Minister: The risks posed by Iraq's behaviour are well-documented: Iraq fired nearly 200 Scud missiles against Iran during the Iran-Iraq war; during the Gulf War it fired Scud missiles indiscriminately against Saudi and Israeli cities.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the UNSCOM officials paid 180,000 US dollars a year or more. [60740]

The Prime Minister: We do not keep this information. This is a matter for UNSCOM.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 614, what assessment he has made of the threat from pollution to Arab neighbours if missiles are unleashed against targets in Iraq. [60739]

The Prime Minister: In selecting targets for military action, all relevant factors are taken into account.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 608, if he will list the materials found at presidential sites by UNSCOM. [60727]

The Prime Minister: As I told my hon. Friend on 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 372, a full report on the UNSCOM/IAEA Presidential site inspections was submitted to United Nations Security Council members on 15 April. The report recorded that the sites had very obviously been extensively cleared before the inspectors entered.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the recent statement by Mr. Denis Halliday concerning oil for food arrangements in Iraq. [60734]

The Prime Minister: We regret Mr. Halliday's criticisms of "oil for food" at a time when the UN's latest report shows that the programme is bringing greater benefits to the Iraqi people. But we agree with him that it is unfortunate the UN has been obliged to sustain the sanctions regime against Iraq for so long. This is entirely the fault of Iraq.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 617, to which words of the UN Secretary-General he was referring. [60741]

The Prime Minister: I was referring to the UN Secretary General's statement to the press on 15 November, saying that Iraq's agreement to resume full co-operation

"is a victory for all those who expressed their firm determination that UN resolutions must be respected".

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 613, what evidence underlay his statement that money for the food programme has gone to elite people around Saddam Hussein; and whom he includes as members of that group. [60738]

The Prime Minister: The Iraqi regime does not have direct access to "oil for food" funds. But as soon as "oil for food" started the Iraqi government reduced their own spending on essential humanitarian goods for the Iraqi people and diverted these funds to other purposes.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 613–14, what is the nature of the support expressed by Arab states, and what measures they supported. [60737]

The Prime Minister: After their 11–12 November meeting in Doha, the Foreign Ministers of the Damascus Declaration states (Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and UAE) called on Iraq to rescind its decision to halt co-operation with UNSCOM and to implement all relevant Security Council resolutions. The Ministers held Iraq responsible for any consequences resulting from Iraq's refusal to rescind that decision.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the reasons for establishing an Iraq media unit within Her Majesty's Government. [60811]

The Prime Minister: The Government have set up an ad hoc inter-departmental group chaired by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett). The group ensures that the Government's media response to the Iraq crisis is properly co-ordinated.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 612, concerning the views of the international community, what evidence he has obtained that (a) the UN Secretary General, (b) Iran, (c) the Arab world, (d) Russia, (e) China and (f) France accept that next time Iraq obstructs the work of UN inspectors there will be no formal negotiation regardless of last minute pleas and letters. [60736]

The Prime Minister: On 15 November the UN Secretary-General stated that, if there were a next time, he was not sure that there would be time for further diplomatic initiatives and appeals. France has acknowledged the role of the threat of force in resolving this crisis. The Security Council as a whole has called on Iraq to demonstrate unconditional and sustained co-operation with UN inspectors and the Damascus Declaration states (Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and UAE) held Iraq responsible for any consequences resulting from a refusal to resume co-operation with UNSCOM.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister if the Iraqi Government signified to the Secretary-General of the United Nations their willingness to co-operate with the UNSCOM inspectors after the orders had been given by the Prime Minister to launch an attack; how long before the attack on targets in Iraq was due to commence, the communication from the Iraqi Government were received by the United Nations; and what was the source from which the Iraqi Government learned that an attack was imminent. [60668]

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in my statement on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 607–10, a private warning from the UK was delivered directly to the Iraqi Permanent Representative at the UN on 12 November.

On the morning of 14 November I gave final authorisation for the use of force against Iraq that afternoon. Just over two hours before the attack was due to commence, we learned that the UN Secretary-General had received a message from the Iraqis. The Iraqis can have been in no doubt about our resolve to take action.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister which countries were aware that orders had been given to initiate an attack on targets in Iraq. [60746]

The Prime Minister: We have been in close contact with many countries throughout this crisis. As has been the practice under this and previous administrations, it is not Government policy to disclose the content of these conversations.

World Wars (Civilian Women)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to commemorate the contribution of those civilian women who worked directly to support the war effort in both world wars. [60660]

The Prime Minister: The contribution of all who gave their lives and suffered in the service of their country, including those women who played a vital role in industry, agriculture and other civilian services in both world wars, is recognised at the ceremony at the Cenotaph on Remembrance Sunday.

I understand from the Royal British Legion, who are responsible for organising the march past the Cenotaph which follows the official ceremony on Remembrance Sunday, that they intend to make proposals which will allow greater participation in future years by non ex-Service groups and individuals.

Security Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many hon. Members have been identified by the security services as a security risk. [60433]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) on 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 402.

It is not appropriate to comment in detail on security matters. However, in its recent annual report the Intelligence and Security Committee referred to the process and gave an indication of the numbers of honourable Members involved.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal

14. Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision can be made to enable young people participating in the new deal to acquire basic skills to enhance their prospects of employment. [59116]

Mr. Andrew Smith: One of the key roles for New Deal Personal Advisers is to identify young people with basic skills needs. A range of help is available which is in place, including assessment, advice and access to training in basic literacy, numeracy and IT.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60367]

Mr. Mudie: As at 18 November, the information on Civil Service Departments (including their Agencies) participating or intending to participate as employers in the New Deal is as follows:

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the tender document which was sent to those wishing to participate in the forthcoming New Deal pilot schemes for those aged 25 years or over. [60853]

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many New Deal clients in Hendon have (a) had interviews with personal advisers, (b) proceeded through the Gateway, (c) had interviews with prospective employers and (d) obtained employment; and if he will make a statement. [60421]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I will write to the hon. Member and my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60529]

Mr. Mudie: NDPBs are encouraged to participate as an employer in New Deal. Information on the numbers of people taken under the New Deal by Non-Departmental bodies is not held centrally.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new courses or new places on existing courses have been provided for 18 to 24 year olds undertaking education and training under the New Deal (a) nationally, (b) by delivery unit and (c) by New Deal option. [59200]

Mr. Andrew Smith: To the end of August, there have been 5,600 starts on the Full Time Education and Training option. Figures for individual units of delivery are available in the Library.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the responsibilities of each agency in relation to the health and safety of New Deal clients who have taken the option of a subsidised job. [60400]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal Employment Option aims to encourage employers to take on long-term unemployed people by the payment of a subsidy. Once recruited, the status of people who take subsidised jobs is identical to that of any other employee. Their health and safety is the responsibility of the employer, and is handled in accordance with the employer's established procedure for meeting the requirements of health and safety legislation.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made in securing employer involvement in the New Deal for the young unemployed. [59113]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Swindon, South (Ms Drown) on 19 November 1998, Official Report, column 1093.

Special Needs

15. Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received regarding provision for children with special educational needs in Essex. [59117]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Over the past year, my Department has received some 250 letters from members of the public, the Essex Local Education Authority, hon. Members and others about provision for children with special educational needs in Essex. These include responses to the Green Paper "Excellence for all children".

21. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to support children with special educational needs. [59124]

Mr, Charles Clarke: Our plans for supporting children with special educational needs (SEN) are set out in Meeting Special Educational Needs: A programme of action, published on 5 November. They include:

better support and advice for parents and carers of children with SEN;

improving the SEN framework, but retaining parents' rights to seek a statutory assessment and statement of SEN; developing a more inclusive education system;

developing the knowledge and skills of all staff working with children with SEN; and promoting partnership in SEN locally, regionally and nationally.

Implementation of the Action Programme will be supported by funding of almost £60 million in 1999–2000.

24. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his policy towards integrating children with special educational needs into mainstream schools. [59128]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Action Programme—"Meeting Special Educational Needs"—published on 5 November, sets out steps to promote further inclusion of children with special educational needs where parents want it and appropriate support can be provided. We are providing financial support of up to £8 million in 1999–2000 through the SEN Standards Fund to promote inclusion, and increasing the capital support under the Schools Access Initiative from the £4 million we inherited to £20 million.

30. Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his proposal to enhance the early detection and support provision for children with learning difficulties. [59134]

Mr. Charles Clarke: On 5 November 1998 we published Meeting Special Educational Needs: A programme for action. This explains how through our early years policies such as the new Sure Start programme, the Early Years Development and Child Care Planning process, our Early Excellence Centres, the introduction of baseline assessment and the National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies we will encourage earlier identification of difficulties and appropriate early intervention. It also sets out the practical steps we will take to support children with special educational needs, including those with learning difficulties.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the £56 million for funding of an early intervention programme includes funding for a specific training module for special educational needs for new teachers at teacher training college. [56900]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There are no specific modules for special educational needs which trainees must take as part of their initial training. However since May this year, in order successfully to complete a course of initial training, all trainee teachers must have demonstrated that they can identify pupils who have special educational needs and know where to get help in order to give positive and targeted support.

Universities (Selection Procedures)

17. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the fairness of the present methods used by universities to select students. [59119]

Mr. Mudie: The selection of students is a matter for individual universities, but the Department, UCAS and other agencies monitor and analyse the overall profile of student entry. We encourage all universities and colleges to be flexible and imaginative in assessing the potential of applicants, so that selection is fair to applicants from all backgrounds.

Further Education

18. Mr. Ilsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future of off-site collaborative provision in further education colleges. [59121]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State considers that cost-effective and high quality collaborative provision can make a significant contribution to the lifelong learning agenda. But some aspects of collaborative provision have caused concern. We shall keep those under review with the Further Education Funding Council.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to improve standards of achievement in further and higher education. [59120]

Mr. Mudie: The Government's commitment to raising standards throughout Further and Higher Education is being taken forward through active collaboration with the funding councils and other partners. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will announce details shortly, building on our plans announced in The Learning Age.

Under-fives

19. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his plans for provision for the under-fives. [59122]

Ms Hodge: A free, high quality, early education place is available across England for four year olds; and two thirds of three year-olds will have places by 2002. Early Years Development and Childcare Plans will show how this is to be integrated locally with daycare.

Computer Technology

20. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about the use of computer technology in schools. [59123]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government view the use of new technologies as an integral part of their education and lifelong learning policies aimed at raising standards in schools, modernising Britain and equipping us to compete in the global economy of the Information Age. These plans are being backed with an investment of over £1bn over the next four years. A full statement of the Government's plans for the use of new technologies in schools and other learning institutions can be found in Open for Learning, Open for Business, a copy of which is lodged in the House of Commons Library.

Primary Teachers (Training)

22. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures his Department is taking to improve the training of primary school teachers. [59125]

32. Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures his Department is taking to improve the training of primary school teachers. [59136]

Mr. Charles Clarke: From September this year all those training to become primary school teachers must follow a national training curriculum in English and mathematics which specifies the essential core of knowledge, understanding and skills which all trainees must be taught, know and be able to do in relation to primary English and mathematics.

As part of the National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies, all serving primary teachers will receive training in the most effective methods of teaching these key skills.

Maintained Schools

25. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the role of the private sector in the management of schools. [59129]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Responsibility for managing maintained schools which have delegated budgets rests in law with the governing body, with support as necessary from the local education authority. Governing bodies and local authorities may purchase advice or services from the private sector to help them meet their statutory duties.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 524, on the cost of qualifications in maintained schools, if he will rank each local education authority in order of the cost per (a) A level and (b) GCSE, by dividing the education standard spending assessment per secondary school pupil by the number of qualifications obtained in each authority. [60094]

Mr. Mudie: [holding answer 16 November 1998]: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Asylum Seekers

26. Mr. Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of persons granted asylum who have obtained employment in each of the last three years. [59130]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No such estimate has been made.

Young Unemployed (Remedial Training)

27. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to improve literacy and numeracy skills among the young unemployed. [59131]

Mr. Andrew Smith: In the New Deal for 18–24 year olds young people who lack the basic skills they need to enter employment will be given help to gain those skills, and to pursue an appropriate qualification. Depending on their level of need, help can be in the form of short, intensive courses, while they are on the Gateway, full-time study through the Full-Time Education and Training option, or, for those on one of the three work-based options, study towards a qualification one day per week, or the equivalent.

Sixteen and 17 year olds in Work-based Training for Young People may also receive help to improve their literacy and numeracy skills, where this will help them to achieve their vocational objective.

Teachers (Recruitment and Retention)

28. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he proposes to increase recruitment and retention of teachers (a) in London and (b) elsewhere. [59132]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We will publish before the end of the year a Green Paper on the teaching profession which will propose a range of reforms to improve the attractiveness of teaching as a career. In addition to this, my hon. Friend the Minister for School Standards announced last month a £130 million package of measures designed to boost teacher recruitment in the short term. This includes the establishment of a network of local recruitment advisers in areas with high teacher vacancies. Eleven London boroughs—including Southwark—already know they will benefit from these additional resources. These measures will add to the strong programme of action already being taken forward by the Teacher Training Agency. This includes a number of activities focused specifically on London including next month's Teaching in London Event.

Family-friendly Employment

29. Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to promote family-friendly employment practices. [59133]

Ms Hodge: Our detailed plans were set out in the recently published Home Office consultation document "Supporting Families". Over the coming months, building on the legislative agenda set out in the "Fairness at Work" White Paper and working in partnership with other Governmental Departments, employers and other key players, we will be taking forward an awareness and promotional campaign to promote the benefits of family friendly working practices.

Learning Direct Helpline

31. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the learning direct advice and information line. [59135]

Mr. Mudie: Learning Direct has been a resounding success. Since its launch in February it has given over 370,000 callers free high quality impartial information and advice on learning opportunities. The freephone number (0800 100 900) has been trailed on all five terrestrial television channels.

Learning Direct has a key role in the Government's commitment to creating a learning society. Because of its success, we recently announced an increase in its budget to £6.25 million for the 1999–2000 financial year. This will enable us to develop and expand the service to prepare for the extra demand for learning advice and information created by the University for Industry, scheduled to be launched in the year 2000.

Primary Schools (Standards)

33. Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to improve standards of numeracy and literacy in primary schools. [59137]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are providing significant investment to support the implementation of both the National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies in primary schools. We have allocated almost £60 million to the literacy strategy in 1998–99, and committed a further £120 million per annum over the next three years to both strategies. This will support a comprehensive professional development and training programme for teachers designed to raise literacy and numeracy standards in schools.

Postgraduate Student Loans

34. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the uptake of career development loans by postgraduate students in Great Britain. [59138]

Mr. Mudie: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Training and Enterprise Councils

35. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the performance of training and enterprise councils. [59139]

Mr. Mudie: We are currently considering the results of a consultation on the future role of Training and Enterprise Councils which ended on 30 September. The consultation paper "TECs: Meeting the Challenge of the Millennium" covered a range of proposals designed to improve the performance of TECs. Copies of this document are available in the Library. We will be announcing the outcome in the coming months.

Local Management of Schools

36. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to encourage local initiatives in school governance and management. [59140]

Ms Estelle Morris: Education Action Zones provide considerable scope for innovation in school governance and management. My Department is also sponsoring demonstration projects to show how schools can set up streamlined administrative systems. In addition, we are keen to build on the many excellent initiatives being developed around the country through identifying and spreading good practice. With this in mind, we plan to issue good practice guidance on governor training next year.

Adult and Community Learning Fund

37. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the adult and community learning fund. [59141]

Mr. Mudie: The Adult and Community Learning Fund prospectus was published on 28 August 1998. We received nearly 400 applications in the first round of bidding which closed on 5 October. Following consideration by the Department's independent Advisory Panel we announced funding in principle for 65 projects covering a wide range of local activities to involve more people in learning relevant to their lives. The closing date for the second round of applications, including re-submissions of first round bids referred back for further development, is 30 November 1998.

Pre-school Playgroups

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what role he plans for pre-school playgroups and nurseries in the national childcare strategy; and how he will support that role. [59127]

Ms Hodge: The Green Paper "Meeting the Childcare Challenge" which was published in May, sets out the Government's plans for a National Childcare Strategy to raise their quality of care, to make childcare more affordable and to make it more accessible.

The private and voluntary sector has an important role to play in delivering the objectives of the National Childcare Strategy and in meeting our commitment of a free nursery place for every four year old.

Women (Employment)

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the percentage of women with a child aged between 10 and 15 years who (a) work full-time, (b) work part-time (c) are unemployed and (d) are economically inactive. [60769]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Edward Leigh, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary questions (60765, 60766, 60767, 60768, 60769 and 60770) about the economic status of mothers with dependent children.

Tables attached show data from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) which is the ONS major source of labour market data on individuals.

The first table shows the latest available quarterly data for the United Kingdom. The second table gives the same analysis for Great Britain for the average of the period from spring 1996 to winter 1996/7 i.e. on a geography and time period consistent with the answers to your other three questions about demographic data.

In the General Household Survey (GHS), adults and children in each household are assigned to families: married couple families; cohabiting couple families and lone parent families. Children belong to the appropriate family either by virtue of being the natural children of both the parents forming the couple, or of the lone parent, or else, if they are adoptive or stepchildren, by belonging to the same family as their adoptive/step parents. Foster children, however are not regarded part of their foster parent family since they are not related to them. For the purpose of answering this question, it has been assumed that the natural/adoptive/step parent(s) are the adults responsible for the children. Attached are tables from the GHS give the information requested regarding households.

Teacher Training

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many initial teacher training places funded by his Department have not been filled by the Teacher Training Agency in each subject for the current year. [59198]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table shows the target and actual intake to initial teacher training for the year 1998–99. We continuously monitor recruitment to initial teacher training in order to be responsive to supply and demand. A £130 million package of short-term measures designed to boost teacher recruitment, particularly in the key subject areas of mathematics and science, was announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for School Standards on 27 October. Details of this have been placed in the Library.

Target and actual recruitment[1] to initial teacher training[2] courses in England, 1998–99

	Target	Actual	Difference (actual-target)
Primary[3]	11,500	11,545	45
Mathematics	2,150	1,120	–1,030
English[4]	2,200	1,970	–230
Science	3,050	2,286	–764
Modern foreign languages	2,300	1,657	–643
Technology[5]	3,000	1,682	–1,318
History	900	898	–2
Geography	1,000	747	–253
Physical education	1,450	1,491	41
Art	1,100	904	–196
Music	600	493	–107
Religious education	750	606	–144
Other[6]	600	523	–77
Total secondary	19,100	14,377	–4,723

[1] Provisional

[2] Includes School Centred ITT (SCITT)

[3] The primary target includes the 294 places that the TTA allocated to the Open University for a part-time PGCE course commencing in February 1999. These places were relinquished by the OU, subsequently reallocated to providers offering new part-time courses starting in April 1999, and so will not have yet been filled.

[4] The English target given here differs slightly to the one announced by the DfEE in 1997. This is because the target the TTA allocated to 'drama' is currently included in other.

[5] Technology includes Design and Technology, Information Technology, Business Studies and Home Economics.

[6] Other includes Classics, Economics, Other social sciences, Other subjects and, currently, drama. Therefore, the target for 'other' differs slightly to the one announced at the end of 1997 because of the inclusion of drama.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the initial teacher training course providers that have (a) added courses and (b) increased the number of places on offer on existing courses in each subject; and if he will list for each of (a) and (b) the number of places added for the funding years 1997–98 and 1998–99. [59199]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Teacher Training Agency's allocations of additional initial teacher training places for individual providers in 1997–98 and 1998–99 are set out in the table; those for new courses are asterisked. The 1997 allocation also awarded some places in 1998–99 and these have been included in the 1998–99 column.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Film Industry

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what proposals for action have been received from (a) the voluntary All-industry Fund, (b) the Film Marketing Agency and (c) the Skills Investment Fund in respect of the British film industry; [58488]

(2) if he will make a statement on the new training strategy for films as envisaged by the Film Policy Review Group. [58487]

Janet Anderson: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on support for the film industry in (a) Britain, (b) other member states of the European Union and (c) the United States of America. [60266]

Janet Anderson: (a) My Department's support for the film industry in Britain is channelled through the British Film Institute, the British Film Commission, British Screen and the Arts Council of England. Following the results of my Department's Spending Review, we announced proposals to rationalise the delivery of public support to the film industry by the creation of a new film body, which would be able to take an overall strategic view of support for the film industry as a whole. We are currently holding discussions on the establishment of this new body.

The report of the Film Policy Review Group, A Bigger Picture, recommended a number of initiatives which would provide further support for the British film industry. Work on implementing those recommendations is underway and we expect the key elements to be in place by April next year.

(b) All the other member states of the European Union provide support for their film industries. Across the EU as a whole, there are around 54 aid measures distributing total public support to the audio-visual industries of around £470 million a year. France accounts for 39 per cent. of this figure, Germany 20 per cent, the UK 6 per cent, Italy 6 per cent., Spain 4.5 per cent. and Ireland 4 per cent. Most of this support is directed to the production sector: currently on Germany and France provide significant amounts of support for the distribution and exhibition sectors, making up 24 per cent. and 20 per cent. of those countries' total public support respectively.

Generally, support across the EU is geared towards projects rather than companies, but each member state organises its public support mechanisms in a different way. For example, Germany's support is marked by its regional component, France has a centralised structure and Italy draws largely on a credit mechanism and bank guarantees.

(c) I am not aware of any public support for the commercial film industry in the United States of America, although some states offer tax exemptions for film to attract productions to their area. Film culture and education are supported in the United States at the federal level by the National Endowment for the Arts, which funded programmes in media arts of nearly $3.4 million in 1996. There is also some funding available at the state level for local film commissions, film festivals and study grants to film schools.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60373]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60522]

Mr. Chris Smith: Non-departmental sponsored bodies have been encouraged to take on New Deal recruits. The National Lotteries Charities Board has plans to pilot the scheme with a view to taking on up to 18 New Deal recruits, and the Broadcasting Standards Commission are considering New Deal applicants to fill a current vacancy.

Museums

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what basis was used to calculate the funding required to compensate national museums which currently charge for admission for his plans to introduce universal free admission by 2001. [59934]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 November 1998]: Initial estimates of the requirement were made by Departmental officials. Further work on the detail of requisite funding allocations has been carried out in consultation with the national museums, including the issuing of detailed questionnaires in each case, and the analysis of any VAT implications that may arise.

Decisions on the adoption of the stages towards free admission remain of course with the Trustees of the individual museums.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what plans he has to amend the current concessionary television licence scheme for pensioners living in sheltered accommodation; [60392]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the appropriateness of the current level of concessionary television licences for pensioners living in sheltered accommodation. [60391]

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the review of legislation relating to BBC funding with particular reference to concessionary licences for disabled people and pensioners. [60422]

Janet Anderson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced details of the review of BBC funding on 14 October. It will cover a number of closely defined issues, including the structure of the current concessionary television licence scheme and possible alternative arrangements. The review panel will make recommendations to my right hon. Friend by the end of July next year, after which we shall consult on the panel's findings.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many pensioners in sheltered accommodation with an on-site warden qualified for a concessionary television licence in (a) 1988 and (b) the last year for which figures are available; and how many claimed their entitlement in each of these years; [60389]

(2) how many pensioners in sheltered accommodation have had their concessionary television licence withdrawn as a result of the removal of the on-site warden in each of the last 10 years. [60390]

Janet Anderson: TV Licensing records total membership of the scheme but cannot provide detailed breakdowns between pensioners and beneficiaries, or between recipients in sheltered housing and those in other qualifying accommodation (i.e. residential homes). Nor is information available on the number of people who are entitled to the concession but fail to apply, though the numbers are likely to be minimal. Approximately 629,000 units of accommodation were covered by a concessionary television licence in December 1988, compared with 644,000 in October 1998.

Creative Industries

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action will be taken, following the creative industries mapping exercise, to (a) protect intellectual property rights, (b) stimulate creativity and innovation amongst young people, (c) improve access to venture capital in new ways and (d) promote creative industry exports. [59781]

Janet Anderson: The Government are committed to ensuring that British talent is able to reap the rewards of its creativity. We are negotiating in Europe on the draft Copyright Directive and with counterparts in other countries on frameworks for intellectual property management and ways of helping industry combat piracy.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment set up the National Advisory Committee on Creative and Cultural Education last year to look at creative and cultural development in young people. We expect a draft report shortly and we shall consider its recommendations in detail.

My Department is reviewing a possible networking seminar in conjunction with the DTI in the first half of next year, to bring together creative entrepreneurs with venture capitalists, corporate venturers and business angels, in order to facilitate understanding between them and establish ways in which they can work together.

The Creative Industries Export Promotion Advisory Group, which was set up at the Creative Industries Task Force's recommendation, is drawing up a series of export strategies based on clusters of creative industries which share certain characteristics. We anticipate that we will publish those in the course of next year.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost was of the creative industries task force; what the cost was of printing and distributing the mapping documents; how many mapping documents were printed; and what the cost of each document was. [59780]

Janet Anderson: The only quantifiable cost relating to the Creative Industries Task Force (CITF) is that of refreshments for meetings, which amount to £156 since its first meeting on 8 October 1997. Costs incurred by my department in copying and circulating papers for CITF are not separately recorded.

Publication of the mapping document, including design, print and paper costs and arrangements for the launch cost £53,000. We estimate that the full costs was around £110,000, but sponsorship secured us substantial savings on hire of the launch venue, print, paper and other costs. In addition, much of the initial research was done on Task Force's behalf free of charge.

5,000 copies of the document were printed. Distribution costs cannot be extrapolated from my Department's budget for postage and parcels. Although costs relating to the document's launch are included in the sum of £53,000, we cannot disaggregate these from publication costs. We therefore arrive at a cost per document of £10.60.

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, and indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55549]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 19 October 1998]: There have been no occasions on which I or Ministers in my Department have used RAF or privately charted aircraft.

Stonehenge

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what sum of money English Heritage has agreed to contribute towards the proposed road works in the vicinity of Stonehenge. [59426]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 12 November 1998]: English Heritage has offered to contribute £10m towards the cost of these works.

Royal Opera House

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will make a statement on the present relationship between the Royal Opera House and its principal private sponsors; [59933]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the Royal Opera House. [59932]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The Government are wholly committed to a secure long-term future for opera and ballet of the highest quality in the redeveloped Royal Opera House. Convent Garden, post-reopening, will be a magnificent building, one of the most advanced and exciting venues for lyric theatre anywhere, and will provide a fitting stage for the dedicated artists of the Royal Ballet and Royal Opera. The building work at Convent Garden is now well advanced. We expect the House to reopen in late 1999, on time and on budget.

The Government are determined that the reopened House should be used to improve access to the arts, in particular through work to develop new audiences and education programmes, and to address fully the recommendations made by Sir Richard Eyre in his recent review of the future of lyric theatre in London.

In September, the Royal Opera House Board announced a radical strategy to put the House's affairs on a proper footing. The Government fully support this strategy. Constructive discussions have taken place between the management and trade unions towards flexible new working arrangements and I hope final agreement can be reached soon.

The future success of the House will depend on a close partnership of public and private investment. A key element of this will be the continued support of the private and corporate donors, whose great generosity and commitment to the House have not always been properly recognised. I pay tribute to their passionate support for the House and for the arts in this country. The personal involvement of the donors and their capacity for raising funds from the private sector should be warmly applauded.

Lottery Grants (East Midlands)

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many Lottery grants were awarded to the East Midlands Region in (a) the last 12 months and (b) 1996; and of these how many in each period were for projects relating to (i) sports facilities, (ii) the theatre, (iii) music, (iv) dance and (v) the preservation of sites of historical interest. [59591]

Mr. Banks: To date the National Lottery has made 31,782 awards worth £5.53 billion across the UK. In the East Midlands there have been 1,700 awards worth £215.37m.

In the last 12 months to 31 October 1998 the East Midlands has received 246 awards worth £41.62m. In 1996, 297 awards were made in the East Midlands to the value of £29.31m. The table sets out the awards to sports facilities, the theatre, music, dance and preservation of historical interest during these two periods. These are based on information provided by distributors.

Information on lottery awards is available on the Department's website www.lottery.culture.gov.uk.

Ms Estelle Morris: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Standards Agency

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Food Standards Agency will be independent of Government departments. [59154]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 November 1998]: This question is addressed in Chapter 6 of the White Paper "The Food Standards Agency: A Force For Change" (Cm3830), to which I have nothing further to add.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Ms Drown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the dates of meetings over the last year which he has held about genetically modified organisms with (a) companies, indicating the name of the company in each case, (b) environmental non-Governmental organisations and (c) English Nature. [60604]

Mr. Rooker: In the past year MAFF Ministers have held the following meetings with companies, environmental non-governmental organisations and English Nature at which genetically modified organisms have been discussed.

Agricultural Compensation

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amounts have been available in other EU member states for agricultural compensation since 1 May 1997 (a) directly from the EU budget and (b) as permitted by the Commission from member states' budgets; and what percentage of this has been claimed. [59658]

Mr. Rooker: Apart from the UK only three other Member States, Sweden, Italy and Ireland have been eligible for agrimonetary compensation since 1 May 1997. According to information supplied by the Commission, aid available from 1 May 1997, and amounts claimed, in these Member States is as follows:

Agrimonetary compensation available and claimed in other EU Member States since 1 May 1997 (all amounts stated in Mecu)

	Available		Claim notified
	EU funded	Nationally funded	EU funded	Nationally funded

Italy	206.1	206.1	123.65 (60%)	0.35 (0.16%)
Sweden	11.6	11.6	11.6 (100%)	6.1 (52.9%)

Meat Inspection

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish comparisons of charges made to ensure public health in respect of slaughter processing in the United Kingdom and in other EU states. [58446]

Mr. Nick Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 17 November 1998, Official Report, column 577.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish comparisons of the amounts of state subsidy given to farmers and abattoirs in EU countries for meat inspection. [58447]

Mr. Nick Brown: In Great Britain the meat industry pays the full cost of the hygiene/welfare inspections carried out by the Meat Hygiene Service in licensed meat plants. However, the Government currently meet the cost of enforcing SRM controls in licensed slaughterhouses having announced on 25 February that these would not be recovered from industry from 1 April 1998 as had been planned.

So far as other EU Member States are concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 104.

Pig Industry

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to ensure that (i) welfare, (ii) quality and (iii) traceability standards in the pig industry are raised in the European and international contexts; and if he will make a statement. [57787]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 3 November 1998]: The Government have made clear their view that EU Directive 91/630 does not adequately protect the welfare of pigs and that EU standards should be improved to address their welfare needs. We will continue to press the European Commission for the early publication of its proposals for revision of the Directive. During the UK Presidency, the need for the EU to develop a strategy for achieving a more global basis for high farm animal welfare standards was placed firmly on the EU agenda.

I believe the higher quality standards met by British pig producers are a positive marketing advantage. The Government and the Meat and Livestock Commission are supporting the UK pig industry's initiatives to improve the quality of the domestic product. This will be emphasised by the introduction of the British Meat Standard for Quality Assured Pigmeat; a single independently audited quality assurance scheme. Such a scheme will allow retailers and caterers to highlight the advantages of the British product to the consumer.

The principal Community rules relating to the traceability standards for pigs are laid down in Council Directive 92/102/EEC on the identification and registration of animals. The European Commission sent a report to the Council earlier this year on the operation of this Directive. We have consulted with interested organisations on the report and are ready to discuss the issues in both the European and, as necessary, the international context.

Flood Prevention (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress in relation to flood alleviation measures in the Edgware, Burnt Oak and Colindale areas of Hendon constituency. [60420]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has prepared an outline flood alleviation strategy for the whole of the Silk Stream catchment. The Ministry will be providing the Agency with feedback on the technical, economic and environmental aspects of this outline strategy shortly. It will then be for the Agency to continue to prepare a more detailed strategy with a view to obtaining the necessary approvals.

Taskforce 2000

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60225]

Mr. Morley: I note that the Taskforce 2000 analysis published on 11 November concludes that MAFF has made good progress with its millennium programme. We remain on schedule to complete work on business-critical systems by April 1999, but recognise that much work still remains to be done, for which resources have been allocated, if we are to achieve that target.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of MAFF's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the Internet.

Fishing

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will (a) establish and (b) financially assist an early retirement scheme for fishermen as a means of reducing fishing effort. [60179]

Mr. Morley: I have no plans to do so.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance he will offer for the installation of safety equipment on fishing vessels under 10 metres in length. [60180]

Mr. Morley: Grants for the installation of safety equipment are currently available for fishing vessels of 12 m and over in length. The Maritime and Coastguard Agency are consulting the fishing industry on a Safety Code for under 12 m vessels. Once these consultations are complete and decisions have been taken on the code, I will consider the implications for vessel safety grants.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food with which other states he has discussed the concept of coastal or zonal state management proposed by the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and the Scottish Fishermen's Federation. [59827]

Mr. Morley: There has not yet been an opportunity to discuss the NFFO and SFF's proposals formally with other Member States. However, the NFFO and SFF have themselves been discussing their ideas with their counterparts in other Member States and I shall be interested to see the outcome of these contacts.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce a scrap and build programme for fishing vessels under 10 m. [60182]

Mr. Morley: None.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria will be used to determine which applicants will be accepted into the Countryside Stewardship Scheme in 1999; and if he will make a statement on the effects of the recent £1 million addition to the scheme's budget. [60175]

Mr. Morley: All applications for grants under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme are assessed against the aims and objectives of the Scheme and local priorities which are set at country level in consultation with MAFF's statutory advisers and interested organisations. Applications which offer the best environmental value for money are offered agreements.

The £1 million addition to the Countryside Stewardship budget announced recently is part of a total increase in scheme expenditure of £2 million.

The £1 million will be used to provide new Stewardship agreements in the upland areas of England. This will bring the total budget available for new agreements in 1999 to £7.5 million.

£0.5 million will be used to fund the Countryside Stewardship elements of the upland experiments in the Forest of Bowland and on Bodmin Moor. The aim of the experiment is to test how an integrated programme of agri-environment and rural development funds can work on a practical day to day level.

The remaining £0.5 million is to keep open the pilot Arable Stewardship scheme in 1999.

Calf Processing Scheme

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for changes in the calf processing scheme; and if he will postpone the changes until such time as the live export trade in calves reverts to its level in 1990. [60584]

Mr. Rooker: I refer to my right hon. Friend the Minister's statement to the House on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 624–40. This is an EU scheme which is voluntary as from 1 December 1998, but the scheme lapses totally at the end of 1999. We could not, therefore, even if we were minded to do so, maintain it indefinitely.

Feedstuff Regulations

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the additional costs to local authorities of implementing the Feeding Stuffs (Establishments and Intermediaries) Regulations; and how these will be met. [60585]

Mr. Rooker: Local Authorities are to provide information shortly on the costs of enforcing these Regulations. When I have this information I will be able to make decisions on the funding of this work.

Fur Breeding Farms

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many licensed fur breeding farms there are in England and Wales. [57409]

Mr. Morley: As at 30 October 1998, there were 14 licensed mink farms in England. There are currently no licensed fur farms in Wales.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60139]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 1998]: No particular problems have arisen in my Department, its Agencies or Non-Departmental Public Bodies from millennium compliance, other than those of a general nature facing most organisations and concerned with funding and accommodating a major and diverse programme of activity with potential wide impact.

Systems/services have been prioritised, and priority is being given to those of a business-critical nature, which will be compliant by April 1999. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 17 November 1998, Official Report, column 579, regarding the availability of further information on progress to date.

Nitrates

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he plans to take to reduce the elevated nitrate levels in streams and lakes. [59611]

Mr. Meale: I have been asked to reply.

Measures to combat elevated nitrate levels in streams and lakes are included in the requirements of the EC Urban Waste Treatment Directive (in relation to point sources of pollution such as sewage treatment works) and the EC Nitrate Directive, which aims to combat pollution of waters by agricultural sources of nitrate.

In both cases action is required where monitoring indicates that nitrate exceeds a level of 50mg/litre in surface or ground waters. Where levels of nitrate exceed this threshold, Nitrate Vulnerable Zones are designated under the terms of the Nitrate Directive. In Nitrate Vulnerable Zones farmers are required to take measures under action programmes, which are based on good agricultural practice for the use of fertilisers and manure.

Under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive, waters where nitrate levels exceed 50mg/litre are designated as Sensitive Areas (Nitrate). Within these areas qualifying sewage treatment works are required to remove nitrogen from sewage effluent before it is discharged to the receiving waters.

WALES

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55557]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 19 October 1998]: Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration.

Since May 1997, no Minister in my Department has used an aircraft belonging to the RAF or privately chartered an aircraft. In the year 1 May 1996 to 30 April 1997, the Department incurred costs of £7,837.27 on such travel.

School Inspections

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the total cost of school inspections in Wales in each year from 1990 to 1997 indicating separately (a) the administration costs of the Office of Her Majesty's Inspector of Schools in Wales, (b) payments made by OHMCI, (c) costs to schools and (d) costs to local authorities. [58579]

Mr. Hain: Prior to 1992, HMI's main role was school inspection. Since 1992 inspections have increasingly been contracted out to Registered Inspectors enabling OHMCI to focus on its responsibilities for raising standards in schools, nursery settings and teacher training institutions. The frequency of school inspection has been increased so that all schools are inspected over a cycle of 5 years (6 years in the new cycle). OHMCI also inspects LEAs according to the requirements in the Education Act 1997 and assesses the quality and standards of work in further education colleges at the request of the Further Education Funding Council in Wales. From April 1999, OHMCI will also be responsible for inspecting the work of the Government funded training institutions and the Careers Service—giving them the widest remit of any comparable inspectorate in the UK. The rise in OHMCI's administrative costs between 1990 and 1998 reflects these evolving responsibilities.

The purpose of school inspection is to identify strengths and weaknesses so that schools may improve the quality of the education they provide and raise educational standards achieved by pupils. Schools and local authorities are not charged for school inspection.

OHMCI's administrative and programme costs are shown in the table:

OHMCI net administrative costs and programme expenditure

£000

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Administrative Costs[1]	2,471	2,670	4,570	3,122	3,208	3,374	2,974	2,720
Programme Costs[2]	[3]n/a	[3]n/a	64	837	2,435	3,922	5,009	4,783
Total	2,471	2,670	4,634	3,959	5,643	7,296	7,983	7,503

[1] Administrative costs are net expenditure on salaries and general administrative expenditure.
[2] Programme costs exclude capital expenditure and administrative costs, otherwise all net expenditure is shown—including school inspection, the training of Registered Inspectors and the provision of information services.
[3] Prior to 1992, there was a single budget line for all expenditure relating to the inspection of schools. Following the establishment in 1992 of OHMCI as a non-ministerial Government Department, programme costs relating to the statutory inspection cycle were identified separately.

Agricultural Production

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the problems facing sheepmeat, beef and dairy production; and if he will make a statement. [59517]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Welsh Office Ministers have received numerous representations on the problems facing the livestock and dairy sectors and have met with both the farming unions and farmers' deputations on several occasions.

The Government have just announced a further major aid package totalling more than £120 million which will provide valuable immediate assistance to the industry. Welsh farmers will receive over £21 million of this, which will mean around on average £1,500 extra for cattle and sheep farmers in the Less Favoured Areas of Wales.

We appreciate that this is only a short-term solution and both my right hon. Friend and I are concerned to help farming in Wales adapt so that it can have a viable and prosperous long-term future. This is why the Welsh Office has established three industry-led working groups to develop action plans for taking forward the Food Strategy in the lamb and beef, dairy and organic food sectors. The action plans are due to be published in the New Year and the Welsh Office and the WDA will be working with the industry to take these plans forward.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of Welsh-speaking educational psychologists in Wales. [60386]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not available centrally. The training and recruitment of educational psychologists and Welsh speaking educational psychologists in particular was an issue recognised in our Special Educational Needs (SEN) Green Paper review and is being considered by the Department and the Welsh Advisory Group on SEN (WAGSEN).

Poll Tax

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the amount of money owed relating to the former poll tax, indicating the former district and borough councils affected; and if he will make a statement. [60549]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The latest available information on community charge arrears for the former district and borough councils is given in the table.

Arrears of community charge are now collected by unitary authorities. These figures cannot be split into figures for the former district and borough councils. The total amount in arrears as at 31 March 1998 was £10.5 million.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the amount so far of council house sales receipts that he has released to each of the housing authorities of Wales to date; what amounts he proposes to release; what amount of sales receipts each housing authority in Wales holds; and if he will make a statement. [60556]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The amounts allocated to each of the unitary authorities in Wales under the Capital Receipts Initiative (CRI) in 1997–98 and 1998–99, and the amounts of receipts from the sale of council housing held by each unitary authority in Wales at 31 March 1998, are in the tables. The distributions under the CRI took account of the cumulative set aside receipts for each authority since 1990, not the cash held from set aside receipts.

My right hon. Friend is currently consulting on spending plans for Welsh Office programmes for the next three financial years and on changes to the local authority housing capital distribution arrangements. He will announce his decisions later in the year.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of (a) men, (b) women and (c) young people who will benefit from the National Minimum Wage Act 1998 indicating the employment sectors in which the main impact of the Act will be felt. [60548]

Mr. Hain: Figures provided by the Office for National Statistics estimate that 578,000 men and 1,388,000 women in the UK will benefit from the National Minimum Wage Act 1998. Of these 1,966,000, 221,000 are young people aged between 18 and 21.

Comparable figures are not available for Wales. However, it is estimated that 133,000 people in Wales should benefit.

The economic sectors in the UK in which the impact of the Act are expected to be felt are: Hotels and Restaurants; Agriculture, Hunting and Forestry; Other Community Workers; Wholesale and Retail; Health and Social Work. It is not possible to produce a similar analysis for Wales.

Disabled People

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of people in Wales with disabilities broken down by disability group. [60547]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The number of people on local authority disability registers in Wales at 31 March 1998 is shown, by register category in the Registers of people with physical and sensory disabilities:

Disability registers	Number
Deaf with speech	1,497
Deaf without speech	955
Hard of hearing	5,658
Blind	8,958
Partially sighted	8,681
General classes[1]	72,839
Total for registers of people with physical and sensory disabilities	98,588
Registers of people with learning disabilities	11,771
Total of all people on disability	110,359
Rate per 1,000 population—all people on disability registers	37.7

[1] Includes 1997 data for 2 authorities

The Register of physically and sensorily disabled persons includes people registered under Section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948. The Register of persons with learning disabilities is based on people identified and known to local authorities. The numbers of these registers are believed to understate the total number of people with disabilities as some people choose not to be included.

The most recent comprehensive sample survey was the OPCS survey of disability in Great Britain, published in 1988, which showed that the estimated prevalence of disability in Wales, per thousand population, was 170 for people aged 16 or over and 31 for children. Applying these rates to the 1997 population of Wales would give an estimated number of 414,000 people with disabilities (an overall rate of 141 per thousand population).

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on by training and enterprise councils under the New Deal arrangements. [60413]

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on by (a) health authorities and (b) health trusts under the New Deal arrangements. [60411]

Mr. Hain: Sixteen Health Trusts and one Health Authority in Wales have signed New Deal employer agreements. By the end of October 1998, five New Deal participants had been recruited by Health Trust and none by Health Authorities.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of grant aid from his Department. [60536]

Mr. Hain: By the end of October 1998, no New Deal participants had been recruited by Non-Departmental Public Bodies in receipt of grant aid from the Welsh Office.

I and my Ministerial colleagues will be writing shortly to all Non-Departmental Public Bodies funded by the Welsh Office to encourage them to recruit New Deal participants.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by each of the health authorities in Wales. [60534]

Mr. Hain: One Health Authority in Wales has signed a New Deal employer agreement. By the end of October 1998, no New Deal participants had been recruited by Health Authorities.

Health Structures Reorganisation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy in respect of the links between Llandudno General Hospital and Ysbytu Gwynedd, Bangor, following the current reorganisation of health structures in North Wales. [60396]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: An announcement on the proposals to reconfigure NHS trusts in Wales will be made shortly. This will take account of the management arrangements for Llandudno General Hospital.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) cost of prescriptions written by GPs in Wales in the last year for those drug products which were signalled in the new edition of the British National Formulary as less than suitable for prescribing. Local Authority Ward Boundaries

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the areas where the boundaries for local authority wards for 1999 elections have not yet been determined. [60394]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To date, we have received reports from the Local Government Boundary Commission covering 17 authorities as follows: Neath Port Talbot, Denbighshire, Swansea, Powys, Carmarthenshire, Flintshire, Rhondda Cynon Taff, Wrexham, Merthyr Tydfil, Caerphilly, Pembrokeshire, Conwy, the Vale of Glamorgan, Bridgend, Newport, Gwynedd and Cardiff.

The recommendations made by the Commission in all but Newport, Vale of Glamorgan and Gwynedd have been accepted and will be implemented in time for the 1999 elections. Draft orders will be laid before the House shortly.

We have recently asked the Commission to look again at its recommendations for Newport and the Vale of Glamorgan.

A revised report covering Gwynedd was submitted to us by the Commission in September. This was then subject to a statutory six week consultation period, which has only recently finished. We will be considering the Commission's proposals for Gwynedd shortly. If agreed, it will be too late for implementation by the May 1999 elections as preparations for these elections are already in hand.

The Commission has until December 1999 to report on electoral arrangements in Anglesey, Ceredigion, Monmouthshire, Blaenau Gwent, and Torfaen.

Noise Mitigation

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to introduce revised criteria for dealing with requests for noise mitigation on existing trunk roads built before current standards were introduced. [60696]

Mr. Hain: Our plans to introduce revised criteria relating to noise mitigation matters were included (at paragraph 3.8) in the report on the review of the Welsh trunk road programme "Driving Wales Forward" published on 28 July. We are liaising with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on this matter and a separate announcement will be made in due course.

Millennium Stadium

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with representatives of Laing concerning the completion of the Millennium Stadium. [60458]

Mr. Hain: None. This is a matter for Millennium Stadium plc.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will review the decision on the site for the Welsh Assembly. [60460]

Mr. Michael: I am still receiving briefing on the present proposals from my officials.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the Leader of Cardiff County Council concerning the use of Cardiff City Hall as the site of the Welsh Assembly. [60459]

Breast Cancer

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the level of audit by health authorities of breast cancer treatment outcomes. [60601]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Public Health Common Data Set contains mortality data for breast cancer by health authority but information on survival is not yet collected. The current development by the Cancer Services Co-ordinating Group of a cancer information strategy for Wales to be put in place during 1999 will address this issue.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the level of training provided in each health authority for general practitioners in breast cancer follow up. [60609]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: This information is not held centrally. Responsibility for postgraduate education for general practitioners rests with the GP Sub Dean in the School of Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education based in the University of Wales College of Medicine.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) number and (b) percentage of (i) doctors, (ii) nurses and (iii) administrative staff involved in providing breast care services have received training in communication skills. [60614]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: This information is not held centrally. However, all doctors and nurses have to undergo training in communications skills as part of their pre-registration curriculum.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of women receive the triple assessment for breast cancer recommended in "Improving Outcomes in Breast Cancer"; [60607]

(2) what percentage of test results for breast cancer patients are available within five working days. [60613]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: This information is not held centrally. However, such information will be obtained from a prospective audit of referrals to specialist breast teams to be undertaken in January 1999 by the Cancer Services Co-ordinating Group.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the location of multi-disciplinary breast cancer teams working with a written protocol as a benchmark to manage co-ordinated care. [60610]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The location of multi-disciplinary breast cancer teams in Wales was published on 4 November 1998 in the Annual Report of the Cancer Services Co-ordinating Group. I will arrange for copies of the report to be placed in the Library of the House. All multi-disciplinary teams are required to work to the minimum standards for breast cancer care which include the requirement to work within documented evidence-based local policies based on national guidelines.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the involvement of general practitioners in each health authority in developing local arrangements for the follow up of primary breast cancer patients. [60611]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: General Practitioners should, with their local multi-disciplinary team for breast cancer, develop arrangements to ensure patients receive continuing care. The new Local Health Groups will have an important role to ensure that this happens.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many trusts which provide a breast cancer service have (a) a written communications policy and (b) a protocol for communication with patients. [60612]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: This information is not held centrally. However, the cancer centres in Velindre and Singleton NHS trusts are piloting patient-held records with a view to improving communication between trusts, primary care and patients, their families and carers.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of prostate cancer have occurred in Wales (a) in each of the last three years and (b) during the period 1985 to 1988. [60619]

Cancer (Survival and Death Rates)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by tumour site the cancer (a) survival and (b) death rates in the last year for which figures are available. [60608]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Data on survival rates, for England and Wales, were published by the Office for National Statistics in 'Population and Health' Monitor MB1 98/1, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Data relating to Wales only are not currently available.

The available information on deaths by site of cancer, from the Office for National Statistics, is detailed in the following table. The data relate to deaths of Welsh residents occurring in 1997.

Departmental Support (Jobs)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of (a) new jobs created and (b) existing jobs protected since May 1997 by the provision of financial support from his Department. [60618]

Mr. Hain: A range of services which include the provision of financial support are operated by the Welsh Office. Information on all of these is not held centrally in the form requested.

The main form of direct financial support available to companies wishing to pursue investment projects in Wales is Regional Selective Assistance (RSA).

Since 1 May 1997, RSA offers worth £133 million have been accepted by firms toward 193 projects. This amount was in total associated with the creation of 14,744 new jobs and the safeguarding of 2,957 existing jobs over the estimated 3 to 5 year life of each project.

Funding (Farmers)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the additional funding he has made available to farmers since May 1997 to cover the costs of food safety and public assurance measures which would otherwise have been met by the agricultural sector. [60716]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Separate figures for Wales are not available. However, the Government decided that charges for implementing the Specified Risk Material (SRM) controls in licensed slaughterhouses and cutting plants would not be recovered from the industry from 1 April 1998 as originally intended. This represents a saving to the industry in Great Britain of around £35 million.

The Government also decided to meet the costs of setting up the Cattle Tracing System (CTS) and of running it for its first full year of operation; the CTS became operational in September this year. This represents another total saving of £35 million to the industry in Great Britain, £15 million in start-up costs and £20 million in running costs including enforcement.

HELIOS Programme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about Welsh involvement in the HELIOS programme of the European Union since its inception. [60617]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: HELIOS II was established by a decision of the European Council in February 1993. The key aims of the programme were to promote the integration of, and equal opportunities for disabled people.

Four organisations from Wales were selected to take part in the HELIOS II programme. The Welsh Office was a member of the HELIOS II Co-ordinating Committee. The programme finished in 1996 and no successor programme has been established.

Housing Starts

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the (a) planned and (b) actual housing starts made by housing associations in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [60620]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information requested is:

Year	Planned starts	Actual starts

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales launched the Compact between the Government and the voluntary sector in Wales (Cm 4107) at the Conference of the Wales Council for Voluntary Action in Llandudno this morning. We will be promoting the principles contained within the Compact to all public bodies in Wales including local authorities building on the work carried out jointly by the Welsh Local Government Association and Wales Council for Voluntary Action in the document "Achieving Shared Aims" which the Under-Secretary my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain), launched last February.

Health Trusts (New Deal)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by each of the health trusts in Wales. [60535]

Mr. Hain: By the end of October 1998, five New Deal participants had been recruited by Health Trusts in Wales:

1 by Clwydian Community Care NHS Trust;

1 by Glan Clwyd DGH NHS Trust;

1 by Glan Y Mor NHS Trust;

1 by Llanelli Dinefwr NHS Trust;

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The available information is as set out.

Total Welsh Office allocations for housing capital expenditure to Tai Cymru and unitary authorities for new build and improvements:

1996–97 £343 million;

1997–98 £274 million;

1998–99 £277 million.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: We received the revised report for Gwynedd from the Local Government Boundary Commission in September. The statutory six week consultation period has come to an end only recently and we will be considering the Commission's recommendations shortly. In coming to a view, we will, of course, take into account any representations that have been made in response to the Commission's recommendations.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Twenty-one bids for Rural Development Grant (RDG) matching funding have been received under Round 7. The details remain commercial in confidence between the Department and the applicants.

RDG is a grant of last resort designed to pump prime projects where there is a shortfall of alternative public support funding. The grant awards will be decided at the conclusion of the Department's Internal Review Process.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Payment of Rural Development Grant will depend on the phasing of expenditure on the individual projects.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State intends to make an announcement about allocations for future spending plans in the near future.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy on establishing international recognition of the Laos Government; and what support his Department has provided to Laos. [60039]

Mr. Fatchett: The United Kingdom recognises states rather than Governments. We have normal diplomatic relations with Laos. The British Ambassador to Bangkok is accredited to Vientiane and visits regularly. The UK provides a small package of bilateral assistance to Laos, concentrating on demining, health, education, and rural development.

Youth for Europe

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 17 June 1998, Official Report, column 246, if he will make a statement on the plans of Youth for Europe to develop (a) European solidarity and (b) European awareness; and if the definition of Europe is synonymous with the European Union. [59998]

Ms Quin: Negotiations are at an advanced stage on a new European youth programme, to incorporate the main features of the current Youth for Europe III and European Voluntary Service programmes, which run out at the end of 1999.

The aims of the new Youth programme include:

- to promote an active contribution by young people to the building of Europe through their participation in transnational exchanges;
- to strengthen their sense of solidarity through transnational community-service activities.

The new programme, like the current Youth for Europe III, will promote exchanges with young people from non member countries. The proposed programme will be open to the participation of the States of the European Free Trade Area as well as the associated Central and Eastern European countries, Turkey, Cyprus, and Malta, according to the conditions established in the respective agreements with these countries. Accordingly, the definition of Europe stretches beyond the European Union. We continue to welcome and support action in this field.

Counter-drug Agreement

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 1998, Official Report, columns 126–27, when and where he will ratify the agreement by the UK and the USA concerning maritime and aerial operations in the Caribbean, signed in Washington on 13 July. [59813]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 16 November 1998]: The Agreement between the Governments of the United Kingdom and the United States concerning Maritime and Aerial Operations to Suppress Illicit Trafficking by Sea in Waters of the Caribbean and Bermuda provides for entry into force upon exchange of notes between the parties indicating that they have completed the necessary internal procedures. Before such notification can be made implementing legislation must be in place in the Caribbean Overseas Territories and Bermuda. The Agreement will be published as a Command Paper and laid before Parliament in the usual way by 2 December.

Radioactive Gases (Cap La Hague)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the French Government about radioactive gases emitted from the nuclear power station at Cap La Hague. [60110]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not personally made any representations to the French Government about the nuclear facility at Cap de la Hague. However, British and French officials continue to discuss discharge from nuclear facilities in both countries.

EU General Affairs Council

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the outcome was of the General Affairs Council in Brussels on 9 and 10 November. [60385]

Ms Quin: The General Affairs Council in Brussels on 9–10 November adopted the A points listed in document 12595/98 and noted the resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament in its session of 19 October to 23 October and listed in document 11727/98. Copies of the documents listing the A points and resolutions will be placed in the House Libraries as soon as they become available.

On 10 November the EU held successful ministerial meetings of the Accession Conferences with Cyprus, Hungary, Poland, Estonia, the Czech Republic and Slovenia. The Conferences opened substantive negotiations at ministerial level and marked another milestone in the accession process. Association Councils with Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic were also held on 10 November.

The GAC reviewed progress in the Agenda 2000 negotiation. Many Member States called for an increase in the pace of negotiation, in particular on the Common Agricultural Policy. The Foreign Secretary called for more progress on CAP reform. Subject to the general rule that no element in the package can be agreed finally until there is agreement on the package as a whole, there was widespread agreement in principle to the Commission's draft pre-accession instruments, though Spain maintained a reserve. The Presidency said that there would be a conclave of Foreign Ministers on 6 December. There was also discussion of a number of detailed aspects of structural funding.

The Commission presented its progress reports on the candidate countries, in advance of discussion at the Vienna European Council.

The Council discussed the humanitarian situation in Russia and agreed that, should Russia formally request food aid from the EU, the Council would examine urgently a Commission proposal on that basis. The Council will discuss a further report on EU policy and assistance to Russia at the 7 December GAC.

The Commission presented two draft regulations on funding the European Strategy for Turkey. The Presidency remitted the proposals for further discussion in Coreper.

The Commission explained progress on the EU/Switzerland negotiations. Ministers urged continued efforts by both sides towards early agreement. The 7 December General Affairs Council may consider this further.

Ministers had an exchange of views on the Middle East Peace Process with EU Special Envoy Miguel Moratinos present, following the Wye River memorandum. They underlined the importance of the speedy implementation of the Memorandum, the need to avoid unilateral acts, and the need for progress on all tracks of the peace process. The Council condemned in the strongest terms the recent acts of terrorism and urged the Parties to do their utmost both to forestall extremist actions and to deny success to extremists seeking by provocation to frustrate the peace process. Ministers also confirmed EU support for a significant political and economic EU contribution to the implementation of the Wye Memorandum.

On Kosovo, the Council reiterated its expectation that all parties, the FRY security forces and the armed Kosovo Albanian groups, comply fully with recent UN Security Council Resolutions. It repeated its support for the Kosovo Verification Mission, which should be fully operational as soon as possible, and underlined the need for an early start to political negotiations, with the EU's active involvement. It also condemned the action taken by the FRY authorities to prevent the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, Louise Arbour, and her team from fulfilling their mission in Kosovo, as well as their recent crackdown on the independent media.

The Council emphasised the EU's continued commitment to support Albania. It welcomed the successful holding of the International Conference in Tirana on 30 October. The Council repeated the call in the EU's recent declaration to the Democratic Party to participate in the 22 November referendum on the constitution. It welcomed the WEU recommendations on assistance to ensure a viable police force in Albania and confirmed the Union's intention to reinforce its contribution to the re-establishment of such a force.

The Council reviewed the continuing crisis in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and its implications for the stability of the Great Lakes region. It agreed that the immediate priorities were the cessation of hostilities; the withdrawal of foreign troops; and all-party negotiations aimed at achieving a political settlement as soon as possible. It stressed the need to respect human rights and humanitarian law. It instructed officials to recommend how the EU could help further, in particular to stem the trafficking in small arms in the region.

At the UK's request, Ministers discussed the situation in Iraq and agreed a declaration emphasising support for UNSCR 1205 and condemning as totally unacceptable Iraq's decision to cease co-operation with UNSCOM.

The Presidency reported on the meeting of EU Defence Ministers on 3–4 November.

Taskforce 2000

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60211]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 18 November 1998]: We are committed to having all its business-critical IT systems year 2000 compliant before the millennium. The report that the FCO will have only "minimal functionality" for some period around the turn of the century is false.

The FCO had long planned to replace its numerous and outdated office automation systems by year 2000 compliant systems. It still aims to replace as many as possible before the year 2000. In addition, as a contingency measure, the FCO has completed work to make its existing main strategic office automation system year 2000 compliant and will have replacements or acceptable workarounds in place for all other business-critical systems. The FCO's Internal Audit Departments has now begun an audit of the millennium programme.

The FCO's Global Telecommunications PFI contract is still under negotiation. But the FCO has signed an 'Instruction to Proceed' to enable replacement of non-compliant telephone switches to proceed while negotiations continue.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's latest quarterly return will be placed in the Libraries of the House and published on the Internet.

VIP Facilities, Heathrow

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the procedure for booking VIP facilities for former heads of state and Government at Heathrow. [60428]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The procedure for booking VIP facilities at Heathrow Airport are assessed from time to time, and will be reviewed again in due course.

Senator Pinochet

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost of VIP facilities at Heathrow for Senator Pinochet's visits to the United Kingdom in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998. [60427]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The costs were as follows:

(a) 1997

Arrival at Gatwick on 29 September: £188.00

Department from Heathrow on 5 October: £160.98

Arrival at Gatwick on 17 October: £160.98

Department from Gatwick on 21 October: £188.00

(b) 1998

Arrival at Heathrow on 22 September: £160.98.

Al-Shifa Factory, Sudan

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he had with the Prime Minister about the Al-Shifa factory in Sudan (a) prior to the bombing mission on 20 August and (b) prior to the Prime Minister's appearance on television on 20 August. [60408]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister was in France on 20 August and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary was in Scotland. They were in contact through their officials. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister did not appear on television on 20 August.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he was informed of the plans to bomb the Al-Shifa factory on 20 August; and by whom. [60409]

Mr. Fatchett: The US Administration informed Her Majesty's Government of their intention to launch an attack shortly before the attack took place.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which the British Ambassador to the Sudan visited the Al-Shifa factory. [60410]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Ambassador to the Sudan has visited the Al-Shifa factory once, on the occasion of the official opening in July 1997.

Indonesia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the current human rights situation in Indonesia. [60473]

Mr. Fatchett: While welcoming a number of positive developments since May (the release of many political prisoners, trade union reform and a greater freedom of expression), we remain concerned about the overall human rights situation in Indonesia, particularly in the light of recent events. We regret the loss of life and the injuries that resulted from the use of force against demonstrators. We have urged the authorities to show restraint. We are encouraged by the steps towards democratic reform taken at last week's session at the People's Consultative Assembly, including the commitment to hold early elections in May or June next year.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent student demonstrations in Indonesia. [60497]

Mr. Fatchett: We regret the loss of life and injuries resulting from the use of force against demonstrators in Jakarta and elsewhere in Indonesia. We have urged the authorities to show restraint.

Organisation of African Unity

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the meeting of the Organisation of African Unity in Burkina Faso concerning the conflict between Ethiopia and Eritrea. [60476]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: At the meeting on 7–8 November in Ouagadougo, a committee of the Organisation of African Unity presented to Ethiopia and Eritrea a set of proposals for the peaceful resolution of the border demarcation dispute that exists between them.

We have made clear to the OAU and to both parties that Britain, together with EU partners, fully supports the OAU mediation efforts. We hope the OAU proposals may form the basis for a peaceful resolution of the conflict. We welcome Ethiopia's formal acceptance of them, and look to Eritrea to indicate similar acceptance.

Sri Lanka

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on human rights in Sri Lanka. [60540]

Mr. Fatchett: We want to see an end to human rights violations by all sides in Sri Lanka. The Sri Lankan Government have taken some positive steps to improve their human rights record. We will continue to press them to make further improvements as I did when I visited Sri Lanka on 10 November.

East Timor

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to mobilise international opinion against the actions of the Indonesian Government in East Timor; and if he will make a statement. [60399]

Mr. Fatchett: We support the United Nations efforts to seek a just, comprehensive and internationally acceptable solution to the East Timor issue. We remain in close touch with the UN Secretariat, the Governments of Portugal and Indonesia and other partners.

Nigeria

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK's arms embargo on Nigeria. [60835]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We will continue to implement rigorously the EU arms embargo against Nigeria. The UK interprets this as covering all goods and technology on the UK Military List which forms Part III to Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods Order 1994, as amended.

Following consultations with this Department and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently approved, as an exception, a licence for the export of three military listed protected vehicles for use by the Central Bank of Nigeria for the escort of currency. This licence is being granted to permit a civilian end user to meet legitimate security needs and is consistent with the purpose of the embargo.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the EU has reacted to the changed political circumstances in Nigeria. [60839]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: In recognition of the progress being made towards respect for human rights and the restoration of a democratic civilian Government in Nigeria, on 1 November the EU adopted a new Common Position, replacing the Common Positions of 20 November 1995 and 4 December 1995. The UK was at the forefront of those advocating this change of policy. As a result the following measures have now been lifted:

- all visa restrictions;
- the ban on high level visits;
- the ban on sporting contacts;
- the ban on the appointment of European military personnel to diplomatic missions in Nigeria and Nigerian military personnel in the European Union.

The following measures continue to apply:

- suspension of military co-operation;
- cancellation of training courses for all Nigerian military personnel, except for non-combative courses to encourage respect for human rights and to prepare the military for the democratic control by a civilian Government of the armed forces;
- an embargo on arms, munitions and military equipment.
- A dialogue on development co-operation may now be resumed with a view to re-engagement after the installation of a democratically elected civilian Government.

The European Union also re-affirmed its willingness to strengthen a constructive dialogue with Nigeria and to support the electoral process. It also re-iterated its support for Nigeria's regional peacekeeping activities.

The new Common Position will be reviewed no later than 1 June 1999. Should there be any deterioration in the respect for human rights or the democratic processes, the Council will immediately review the Common Position with a view to adopting additional measures.

A copy of the new Common Position on Nigeria has been placed in the library of both Houses.

European Information Association

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's involvement with the European Information Association. [60640]

Ms Quin: The FCO is aware of the activities of the European Information Association and subscribes to its publications.

EU Information Projects (Funding)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a breakdown of the current expenditure in the United Kingdom under EU budget lines (i) B3–300 and (ii) B3–301. [60641]

Ms Quin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson), the then Minister of State with responsibility for Europe, to the hon. Member for South-West Devon (Mr. Streeter) on 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 597. It explained that budget lines

B3–300 and B3–301 of the EC budget, which fund information activity within the EU, are not broken down by Member State.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions have been given to Her Majesty's Ambassador in Chile concerning the current position of General Pinochet. [60467]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Ambassador has been asked to make clear to the Chilean Government that the question of Senator Pinochet's immunity is for the courts and not for the Government.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the education facilities available to Greek Cypriot children who live in the Rizokarpaso area in occupied northern Cyprus; and if, when the British High Commissioner for Cyprus or one of his officials last visited this area, they visited the Greek Cypriot schools in the area; [60703]

(2) when the British High Commissioner to Cyprus, or one of his officials last visited the Rizokarpaso area in occupied northern Cyprus; and what report he has submitted on the findings of the visit. [60704]

Ms Quin: There is one functioning Greek Cypriot primary school in Rizokarpaso. This school serves Greek Cypriot children from all the villages in the area. There are no facilities for secondary education for Greek Cypriot children in the Karpas. These children have to come to the south of the island to complete their education. Officials from the British High Commission in Nicosia make regular visits to the area. The last such visit on 20 October included a visit to the school and discussions with the teachers, children and parents. We continue to urge the Turkish Cypriot authorities to co-operate with UNFICYP in respect of their humanitarian mandate towards Greek Cypriots and Maronites in the northern part of the island.

Kosovo

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in bringing to an end acts of repression against civilians by Serbian security forces in Kosovo; and what progress has been made in securing a political dialogue between the two sides. [59443]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As a result of sustained NATO pressure, there were significant withdrawals from Kosovo of army and police units which had been responsible for repression in late October. The situation on the ground is now generally quiet, if tense, with sporadic acts of violence and provocation from both sides. Displaced persons have begun to return home. We continue to monitor the situation closely. The deployment of the first contingent of 50 British personnel to verify compliance with UNSCRs 1199 and 1203 was completed on 12 November.

Contact Group Experts met on 11 November to consider progress on the political track. The Contact Group endorsed US Envoy Ambassador Hill's plans to return to the region with EU Envoy Petritsch to press ahead rapidly with the negotiation process. Indirect negotiations are continuing and we support the efforts of US Envoy Hill to secure both sides agreement to an interim political settlement in the next few weeks.

Commonwealth Institute

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what progress has been made on the new constitutional basis and financial support system for the Commonwealth Institute; and if he will make a statement; [60689]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with the Commonwealth Institute on the future of the institute; and if he will make a statement. [60690]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: There are frequent consultations between Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials and senior management of the Commonwealth Institute, primarily about the Institute's strategic direction and the funding it needs to achieve its goals. We are currently considering a proposal from the Institute, which, if agreed, would enable the Institute, while remaining a charity, to become a company limited by guarantee. If agreement can be reached with the Institute, on both the new constitution and the level of funding necessary to secure the Institute's future, the proposed change in the constitutional relationship would be laid before both Houses of Parliament.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60368]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Six New Deal applicants have been selected to work in the FCO (subject to security clearance).

We are in touch with the Westminster Job Centre (and through them other Job Centres) in an on-going programme to identify future candidates. We hope to increase the FCO's intake of New Deal personnel next year.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60527]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Information on the numbers of people taken on under the New Deal by non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

It is Government policy to encourage NDPBs to participate in the New Deal.

Pakistan

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received concerning religious persecution in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [60710]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received representations expressing concern about religious minorities in Pakistan and its blasphemy laws. We share these concerns. I raised the issue of religious minorities with the Interior Minister during my visit to Pakistan last year, as did my noble Friend the Under-Secretary in January this year. As Presidency we led an EU démarche on the blasphemy laws on 14 May and participated in a further EU démarche on 19 October. We will continue to monitor the situation closely and raise our concerns with the Pakistan authorities.

Drug Gangs (Latin America)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many reports on the purchase of advanced military hardware by drug gangs in Latin America have been compiled by his Department since January 1997; and what is their current security classification. [60695]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: It is difficult for this Department to collate comprehensive data on these types of purchase, given the clandestine nature of the operations on the drugs cartels. We do actively monitor reports from a variety of sources in the capabilities of drug gangs to get as much information as we can. We have no reason to suppose that advanced military hardware manufactured in the UK has ended up in the hands of drug gangs.

Research Papers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each series of research papers which his Department currently produces. [60692]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office issues research papers in the following series:

Library and Records Department

History notes

Occasional papers

Information Department

Background briefs

Wilton Park

Occasional papers

Wilton Park papers.

A list of publications, some of which are available on the Internet, is included in the FCO's annual report. Research Analysts and Economic Advisers also produce internal series of note and memoranda.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Northern Spirit

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the performance of Northern Spirit in West Yorkshire in respect of cancelled and late services, short formations, and overall capacity; and what steps he plans to take to improve the franchising arrangements in West Yorkshire. [59657]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director and I have received 216 representations specifically about Northern Spirit's performance on the overall franchise since the General Election.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has said that the books are open for the renegotiation of franchise agreements, and he would consider any proposals to improve franchising arrangements. He will involve Passenger Transport Executives (PTEs) where they are signatories to the franchise agreement.

Drivers (Drug Tests)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what results are available of the police pilot sweat/saliva tests of drug use among drivers in Strathclyde, Sussex, Cleveland and Lancashire. [60322]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I have him on 24 February 1998, Official Report, column 146.

The trials undertaken by the police in March and April this year were for the purpose of assessing two examples of drug screening equipment for their practicality, robustness and suitability for general day-to-day police work, and not to detect drug use amongst drivers. The Department has discussed the outcome of the trials with the equipment suppliers.

Bridge Strengthening

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the cost is of strengthening the Avonmouth Bridge to comply with EC loading standards; what the total cost is of bridge strengthening work in the United Kingdom in order to comply with the EC directive allowing 40 tonne lorries; and how much of this cost has been met from public funds. [60267]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The current expected cost of the strengthening of the M5 Avonmouth Bridge is about £88 million.

A total cost for bridge strengthening work in the UK is not available, but in England, the total funds available to local authorities for bridge maintenance assessment and strengthening on their roads between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1998 was £915 million. This figure does not distinguish between strengthening and maintenance needed to carry 40 tonne vehicles or 11.5 tonne axles and that needed to restore bridges' capacity to carry present vehicle traffic.

In Wales it is for individual local authorities to determine the level of resources to allocate to their assessment and strengthening programmes from annual settlements which are not attributed to particular services.

On all other roads in the UK, the costs of strengthening bridges owned by highway authorities is estimated to be some £700 million.

All the above costs are met from public funds.

Road Hauliers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the oral Statement by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury of 11 November 1998, Official Report, column 349, on taxation of road hauliers, if he will list examples of continental hauliers who have chosen to register their truck in the UK; and how many foreign-owned trucks have been registered in the UK by continental hauliers. [59885]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not held by my Department. As my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary stated on 11 November 1998, there has been a report in the trade press of French hauliers registering their businesses in the UK to take advantage of lower business costs.

London Underground

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on his proposals for a public/private partnership for the management and operation of London Underground; and if he will make a statement. [60323]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport has completed a market sounding exercise to get the views of potential bidders and much has been done to take forward the detail needed to implement the public/private partnership policy announced in March. London Transport and the Government are drawing together the results of the consultation with potential bidders, and finalising the detailed structure of the public/private partnership.

Water Budget Payment Units

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many homes in each UK region have water budget payment units; and if he will make a statement. [59913]

Mr. Meale: The Government welcomed the High Court ruling earlier this year that budget payment units with a closure valve which could cut off the flow of water were unlawful. The fifteen water undertakers in England and Wales who had previously installed budget payment units are complying with the court ruling by removing either the closure valves or the complete units. The information in the table, collected by the Office of Water Services for each company's area, shows the progress made as at 30 September 1998 and the number of units remaining to be dealt with. Information on the use of budget payment units is not available by region.

The Office of Water Services is pressing companies to act rapidly and is monitoring each company's progress in complying with the court ruling. The bulk of the units still with a closure valve are in Wales and OFWAT has told Welsh Water that it must comply or enforcement action will be taken.

Private Hire and Taxi Licences

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the operation of the provisions of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976 relating to the revoking and reinstatement of private hire or taxi drivers' operating licences by local authorities in cases of conviction for dishonesty, indecency or violence. [60324]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Exercise of the powers concerned is a matter for local authorities. It is they who are best placed to reach a decision, in the light of the circumstances of each particular case. The Act gives drivers a right of appeal to the local magistrates' court. I have at present no plans for a review.

Rail Ticket Prices

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the regulation of long-distance rail saver tickets by OPRAF. [60363]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Saver fares are protected by the Franchising Director. The current controls are a consequence of legally binding franchise agreements inherited from the previous Government.

Through Ticketing

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidelines he has issued to the Rail Regulator on the matter of through ticketing arrangements. [60361]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. This is a matter for the Rail Regulator, who requires all train operators to offer through ticketing for all rail journeys.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the continuation of through rail ticketing arrangements. [60360]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have received no representations about the continuation of through ticketing arrangements for rail journeys. The Rail Regulator requires all train operators to offer through ticketing for all rail journeys.

Packaging Waste Regulations 1997

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received relating to the impact of the Packaging Waste Regulations 1997. [60489]

Mr. Meacher: A total number of the 356 responses were received to the consultation document we published on 30 July. Of the responses, 66 were from Trade Associations, 141 were individual businesses and 66 from local authorities. Comments were made on a wide range of issues regarding the Packaging Waste Regulations, all of which are being considered and will be taken into account in formulating proposals which we hope to announce shortly.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the operation of the Packaging Waste Regulations 1997 and correct market distortions produced by the malfunctioning of the PRN system. [60487]

Mr. Meacher: We published a consultation paper on 30 July this year. The paper proposed a number of amendments to the Regulations and further developments to the non-statutory approach to the Packaging Waste Recovery Note (PRN) system. We are presently considering the 356 responses to the document and hope to make an announcement shortly.

Teesside International Nature Reserve

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the arrangements made at the demise of the Teesside Development Corporation for the future of the Teesside International Nature Reserve; [60541]

(2) if he will list the owners of land allocated for the Nature Reserve following the demise of Teesside Development Corporation. [60502]

Mr. Meale: Prior to its wind up, the Teesside Development Corporation entered into contractual arrangements whereby its leasehold interest in the land would be assigned to the Teesside Environmental Trust Limited, subject to the consent of ICI as the freeholders; its freehold interest would similarly be transferred to the Trust; two landfill operators would commit landfill tax credits to the nature reserve; and one of the landfill operators would have the right to extract clay, thereby creating water features, in return for which the operator would pay royalties to the Trust.

Upon the Development Corporation's wind up at the end of March, its freehold and leasehold interests in the land were transferred to the Commission for the New Towns. The Commission still holds these interests, with ICI owning the freehold of the land leased by the Commission.

Commission for the New Towns

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the office accommodation formerly rented by the Teesside Development Corporation which has been passed on to the Commission for the New Towns. [60503]

Mr. Meale: The Commission for the New Towns inherited the Teesside Development Corporation's freehold interest in Dunedin House, with a commitment to take a lease of the third floor thereof when the freehold is disposed. The Commission also inherited the Development Corporation's leasehold interest in office space at Tees house and Stephenson House.

National Air Traffic Services

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the forecast expenditure by National Air Traffic Services over the next 10 years as a percentage of his Department's budget. [59952]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 15 November 1998]: The figures for National Air Traffic Services' forecast capital expenditure over the next 10 years are as follows:

£ million

Year	NATS capital expenditure
1999–2000	51.2
2000–01	91.2
2001–02	122.9
2002–03	104.3
2003–04	75.7
2004–05	47.9
2005–06	37.0
2006–07	40.0
2007–08	38.4

This expenditure is funded through NATS' operating surplus, contributions by the Ministry of Defence, and from borrowing from the National Loans Fund which counts against the Public Sector Borrowing Requirement. The above figures exclude spending on projects which will go forward under the Public Finance Initiative and spending to date on the New En Route Centre at Swanwick, due to become operational during the period in question.

Figures for DETR budgeted expenditure are available for the next 3 years only, and are as follows:

Year	£ million
1999–2000	9,729
2000–01	10,582
2001–02	12,000

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60378]

Mr. Meale: None as yet. Within my Department 11 posts have so far been identified as suitable for people under the New Deal programme. We aim to fill as many of these posts as possible through the programme, subject to suitable candidates being found.

Latex Allergy

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) guidance and (b) training is given to Health and Safety Executive inspectors on the issue of latex allergy; and how many enforcement actions have been taken by the Health and Safety Executive against NHS trusts over failures to implement legislation in relation to latex allergy in each of the past 10 years. [60576]

Mr. Meale: Health and Safety Executive (HSE) inspectors enforce occupational health and safety law including the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988 (COSHH). These regulations deal with, amongst other things, latex allergy. Latex allergy is included in one of HSE's Field Operations Directorate's key national objectives for health services. The Health and Safety Commission (HSC) and HSE produce a wide range of COSHH guidance material, some of which deals specifically with latex allergy. The Medical Devices Agency of the Department of Health have also produced guidance on latex allergy, in consultation with HSE. Further detailed guidance by HSE to inspectors on latex allergy is in preparation and will be issued next week.

All HSE inspectors receive training in COSHH and the related Approved Codes of Practice. These relate to latex allergy. As part of HSE's recent Good Health aids Good Business Campaign a number of internal training initiatives were held for inspectors which included such issues as occupational asthma and dermatitis.

Since the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 and the establishment of NHS trusts the following enforcement action under COSHH has been taken:

Year	Improvement notices	Prohibition notices	Informations laid
1990–91	43	2	1
1991–92	57	0	0
1993–94	55	4	3
1994–95	54	3	1
1995–96	38	4	0
1996–97	45	3	0
1997–98 (provisional)	25	2	0

Enforcement data related specifically to latex are not maintained.

Animal Deaths (Railways)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate how many domestic animals were killed or injured on railway tracks in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [60501]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate does not record this information. Under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 (RIDDOR 95) these types of incidents are reportable to the Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate only if damage is caused to the train necessitating immediate temporary or permanent repair.

Section 14 Notices

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many section 14 notices he has placed on planning applications in inner London boroughs during the last 12 weeks indicating the (a) dates, (b) applications and (c) boroughs concerned in each case. [60509]

Mr. Caborn: Five such article 14 directions have been given.

Date	Application	London borough
10 September	St. Paul's Hospital, Endell Street, WC2	Camden
30 September	Battersea Bus Garage/Albion Wharf, Hester Road, SW11	Wandsworth
12 November	Friends Provident Site, Brewhouse Street, SW15	Wandsworth
12 November	Tooting Bec Hospital (Phase 2), Tooting Bec Road/Church Lane SW17	Wandsworth
10 November	Gargoyle Wharf, York Road, SW18	Wandsworth

Local Government

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the local authorities that have (a) formally notified his Department of their intention to change to and (b) have changed to a cabinet system of local government decision-making. [60589]

Mr. Raynsford: We are aware that a number of councils are already seeking to streamline their decision-making arrangements, with the adoption of cabinet type structures. However, under the current legislative framework it is not open to councils to adopt the full cabinet model, with individual councillors having executive responsibility, as proposed in the White Paper "Modern Local Government—In touch with the People" (Cm 4014).

Official Visits (Dorneywood)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the dates since 1 May 1997 on which he made official visits to Dorneywood, indicating in each case the (a) purpose, (b) dates of the visit and (c) individuals who accompanied him; and if he will make a statement. [60671]

Mr. Prescott: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 10 February 1998, Official Report, column 132. I have used Dorneywood on a number of further occasions since then.

Bathing Water

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will announce the bathing water compliance results for 1998; and if he will make a statement. [60801]

Mr. Meacher: Overall UK compliance with the mandatory coliform bacteria standards in the Bathing Water Directive was 89 per cent. compared with 88 per cent. in 1997 and 90 per cent. in 1996.

I am pleased that this year more bathing waters in England met the mandatory coliform bacteria standards than ever before. I recognise the action taken by the Environment Agency and water companies in response to pressure from Government to achieve this. 90 per cent. of the identified coastal bathing waters passed, compared with 88 per cent. in 1997. But there are still too many bathing waters which fail regularly and compliance remains very poor in the north west, in particular, where only 62 per cent. achieved the standards. An overall failure rate of one in ten bathing waters is not good enough and I want to see significant improvements and our bathing waters to be regarded as among the best in Europe.

When I announced the results last year, I wrote to the Chairman of the Environment Agency asking for a detailed report on the prospects for compliance and the action needed on persistent failures. I also commented on the disappointing results in the north west and asked North West Water to work with the Agency to sort out the remaining problems in the region, particularly in the Blackpool, Fylde coast area.

The Agency has produced a comprehensive report and must build on their analysis and devise a well-targeted programme of action, with particular emphasis being given to persistent mandatory failures. By 2005, I want to see a further significant increase in bathing water quality, particularly in the level of compliance with higher, guideline standards.

Inland bathing waters are included for the first time and all 9 passed the mandatory coliform bacteria standards.

A record number of coastal bathing waters in England—349—met the Directive's coliform standards and of the 40 which failed, half of them missed compliance by only 1 of the 20 samples. Results in the north east were worse than in 1997 but in other regions percentage compliance was either better or the same as last year. I am pleased that Anglian region, again, achieved the mandatory coliform standards at all their bathing waters. Thames regional also achieved 100 per cent. and Southern region had only 2 failures compared with 8 last year.

More English coastal bathing waters (146) met the "guideline" standard needed for a European Blue Flag than in 1997 (136) and I hope that where those beaches achieve the appropriate beach management standards more local authorities will apply for this internationally recognised and valued award.

The main results for the UK are summarised in the table. This information, together with details for each bathing water in England, will be placed in the Libraries of the House today. Detailed results for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland will be published by the Departments concerned. A report with more detailed results for the UK will be available around the turn of the year.

London Government Headquarters

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish his Department's evaluation of the various bids for shortlisting for the prospective headquarters for London Government. [60782]

Mr. Raynsford: No. The information provided by the seven short-listed developers on which the evaluation was based was supplied on a commercially confidential basis.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what independent advice he sought on (a) value for money, (b) architectural merit and (c) social impact on neighbouring boroughs before making his decision on the shortlisting of prospective headquarters for London Government. [60781]

Mr. Raynsford: Turner & Townsend Project Management, Knight Frank and the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (PACE) are advising on property related matters, including value for money and the availability of local amenities. A small design advisory group is advising me on the architectural merit of each proposal and the London Boroughs of Camden and Southwark are working closely with the teams responsible for the two short-listed proposals.

Vehicle Licence Fraud

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) in how many cases of vehicle licence fraud prosecutions (a) fines and (b) the maximum fine were imposed in the last year for which figures are available; [60645]

(2) how many cases of vehicle licence fraud investigated by the DVLA proceeded to prosecutions in the last year for which figures are available; [60647]

(3) how many investigations were carried out into vehicle licence evasions (i) in total and (ii) as a percentage of the total number of licensed vehicles in the last year for which figures are available. [60646]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

London Airports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what planning assumptions the Government have made about the number and type of aircraft movements at the London airports in 15 years' time. [60644]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1997, my Department published "Air Traffic Forecasts for the United Kingdom", which look ahead to 2015 and include assumptions about the number of aircraft movements and average plane loads in the London airports system. Copies of this document are available in the House library. BAA and other London airport operators also prepare forecasts of this nature. The implications of these forecasts will be considered during the preparation of the UK airports policy announced in the "New Deal for Transport" White Paper.

Airports Policy

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects his Department to issue the first consultation draft of the airports policy. [60643]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are currently considering the precise scope and timing of the airports policy statement promised in their White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", and will announce their conclusions in due course. They will also consider what steps might be taken to develop thinking and focus the debate on the way forward including proposals for consultation.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that his Department's paper on an airport strategy will be published after the publication of the inspector's report on the Terminal 5 inquiry at Heathrow; and if he will make a statement. [60751]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In their White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", the Government said:

"We will prepare a UK airports policy looking some 30 years ahead. This will develop the application to UK airport of the policies set out in this White Paper—of sustainable development, integration with surface transport and contribution to regional growth. It will provide the framework within which those concerned can plan for the future with greater certainty. We will consult widely in preparing the new policy and will take account of the Inspector's report on the Heathrow Terminal 5 inquiry".

The Government are currently considering the precise scope and timing of the airports policy statement in their White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", and will announce their conclusions in due course.

London Underground Delays

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the causes of disruption and delays on London Underground in the past year, with particular reference to shortages of spare parts. [60743]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The figures for cause of delays, of 2 minutes and over, on London Underground during the year 1997–98 and in the 32 weeks of the year 1998–99 so far, are set out in the table under the categories London Transport record:

Cause	Delays in 1997–98	Delays in 1998–99 (First 32 weeks only)
Antisocial behaviour	5,645	3,172
Passenger ill/injured	676	462
Person on track	375	241
Unattended luggage	482	198
Terminus management	8,315	6,823
Driving technique	747	511
Possession overrun	114	92
Signals/point	2,827	1,371
Other track	907	473
Rolling stock	18,088	11,241
All other incidents	1,427	847
Total	39,603	25,431

LT do not separately log delays due to a shortage of spare parts. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Standards of Performance Scheme

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government's examination of the possibility of an extension of the standards of performance scheme will include consultation with (a) consumers', energy efficiency and environmental organisations and (b) the energy industry; and if he will place a copy of the accompanying paper in the Library. [60650]

Mr. Meale: As indicated in "UK Climate Change Programme—Consultation Paper", the Government are exploring with the energy industry and others the possibility of promoting energy efficiency through a new standards of performance scheme. Discussions will include consumers', energy efficiency and environmental organisations. I have placed in the Library a copy of the discussion note on the issues circulated to the industry and others.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the dates of meetings over the last year, which he has held about genetically modified organisms with (a) companies, indicating the name of the company in each case, (b) environmental non-Governmental organisations and (c) English Nature. [60603]

Mr. Meale: I refer to the answer given by the then Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member of Wallesey (Angela Eagle), on 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 369. Since that date, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has had no meetings to discuss genetically modified organisms. My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment has had the following meetings:

	Date
Monsanto	14 October
British Society of Plant Breeders (SCIMAC group)	5 November
(b)
Green Alliance	2 June
RSPB	2 June
Nuffield Council on Bioethics	7 October
Genetics Forum	15 October
(c)
English Nature	2 June

Genetically Modified Crops

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for a certification scheme to regulate the commercial release of genetically modified crops. [60602]

Mr. Meale: Commercial release of genetically modified crops is regulated under part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 (amended). Together these implement European Directive 90/220/EEC (Amended) on the Deliberate Release of Genetically Modified Organisms. Under this regulatory framework genetically modified crops cannot be released commercially without prior marketing consent within the European Community. Applications for marketing consent are underpinned by a detailed risk assessment of the genetically modified crop and its intended use.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to license commercial releases of genetically modified crops in 1999; which genetically modified crops will be released in that year; and what form the scientific evidence from the farm-scale trials will take. [60605]

Mr. Meale: The commercial release of genetically modified crops is licenced at European Community level under part C (marketing consent) of Directive 90/220/EEC. No decision has been made about which crops will be included in the farm-scale evaluations in 1999, but we expect that they will include Plant Genetic System's herbicide tolerant oilseed rape (European Community refs C/GB/94/M1/1 and C/GB/95/05–01 A and B). The specification and scientific details of the ecological monitoring of farm-scale plantings of GM crops are still in the early stage of development. An announcement will be made in due course.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he is taking to ensure that local authorities are prepared in respect of the millennium bug. [60437]

Mr. Raynsford: We attach the highest importance to all councils being properly prepared to deal with the millennium bug. To pursue this we are working closely with the Local Government Association, the Local Government Management Board and the Audit Commission. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has, jointly with Sir Jeremy Beecham, Chairman of the Local Government Association, written twice this year to each council leader stressing the importance of their taking action. Council leaders have been asked specifically to sign Pledge 2000 and to nominate a senior member to take public responsibility for seeing that action on the Millennium Bug issue is driven forward throughout their local authority.

Waste Paper Sludge

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultation his Department proposes to hold on new controls for the disposal to landspreading of waste paper sludge; and if he will make a statement. [60675]

Mr. Meale: The landspreading of waste paper sludge is mostly carried out, as a waste recovery operation, under the terms of the exemption from waste management licensing in paragraph 7 of Schedule 3 to the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. We have given a commitment to review this exemption in the light of research carried out to develop further the criteria that determine in what circumstances the landspreading of waste benefits agriculture or results in ecological improvement. Copies of the research report on the "Investigation Of The Criteria For, And Guidance On, The Landspreading Of Industrial Waste" have been placed in the library of the House.

The present position is that the Environment Agency is considering the project's findings and aims to make its recommendations to us shortly. Following receipt and consideration of the Agency's recommendations we intend to carry out a public consultation exercise on the revision of the landspreading controls in the 1994 Regulations.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60528]

Mr. Meale: Non-departmental public bodies are encouraged to participate as an employer in New Deal. Information on the numbers of people taken under the New Deal by non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

Rail Users Consultative Committees

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the staffing and information technology available to the Rail Users Consultative Committees. [60809]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The responsibility for the Rail Users' Consultative Committees and the Central Rail Users' Consultative Committee rests with the Office of the Rail Regulator.

Following a request from that Office, I have agreed that my officials should undertake a staff inspection of these Committees. Work on this began earlier this week.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 349, if he will list the authors of the representations on the Environment Agency decisions on Sellafield, and if they were in favour of or opposed to the recommendations; and what representations he received in the two months prior to the release of the Environment Agency documents concerning the Sellafield mox plant or discharge authorisations. [60682]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Landfill Tax Credit

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of landfill tax credit as a means of supporting projects beneficial to the environment; and if he will review the entitlement of local authority schemes to benefit from the credit. [60698]

Mr. Meale: The Government welcome the strong support for the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme expressed by respondents to their review of the tax last year. The scheme is proving to be a success with £72 million contributed towards environmental bodies in the last financial year (1997–98).

My Department is presently fully involved in reviewing the scheme to consider whether it could further be improved and in particular whether it could be amended to bring recycling within its scope, for example to support Local Authority recycling. If any changes result from this review they will be announced in Spring 1999.

Great Western Train Services

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 306, on the punctuality of Great Western train services, if he will provide a breakdown of the total punctuality and cancellation payments made by the company to date between the three categories identified in his answer. [60621]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under their incentive regime Great Western Trains pay approximately £125,000 per period up front as a benchmark figure. Depending on performance they then receive money back or pay OPRAF a further sum. The up front payments to the end of September amount to £765,753. They have paid a further £486,000 for cancellations and delays of over 20 minutes. It is not possible to provide a more detailed breakdown because of commercial confidentiality.

Mortgage Repossessions

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the benefits of a public-private partnership approach to reducing the number of mortgage repossessions. [60718]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government recognise that providing protection for home buyers experiencing difficulty with their mortgage payments is an area where closer co-operation between the Government and lenders and insurers could be fruitful. We are exploring with the Council of Mortgage Lenders and the Association of British Insurers their proposals for closer integration of an improved private sector safety net with the existing state support.

Oil Production Vessels

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review his policy in respect of health and safety measures on oil production vessels; and if he will make a statement. [60807]

Mr. Meale: Health and safety measures on all offshore oil and gas installations, including production vessels, in UK waters are kept under constant review by the Health and Safety Commission and its Executive. These installations are subject to a modern regime of goal-setting health and safety regulations introduced in response to Lord Cullen's recommendations following the Piper Alpha disaster in July 1988. In particular, no installation may operate in UK waters without a safety case which has been accepted by the Executive. The effectiveness of this regime is currently being evaluated. If as a result of this evaluation the Commission decides to make proposals for further health and safety measures offshore I will given them the most serious consideration.

Planning (Minerals)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps will be taken to integrate the planning of mineral requirements with the development of regional bodies. [60815]

Mr. Raynsford: The primary responsibility for mineral planning in England will remain with the county and unitary councils, which are the mineral planning authorities. But the extraction of minerals is already one of the topics covered in Regional Planning Guidance. This will continue under the new arrangements for the preparation of this guidance by the regional planning bodies, working with the Government Offices and regional stakeholders. We shall also be consulting next year on how the present arrangements for the sub-regional apportionment of the national guidelines on the provision of construction aggregates should be adapted to take account of the development of a stronger system of regional planning.

Sustainable Development

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish his proposals for a set of headline indicators of sustainable development. [60844]

Mr. Prescott: I will be publishing my proposals in a consultation paper, entitled 'Sustainability counts', on Monday 23 November 1998. Copies of this paper will be placed in the Library of the House. The indicators will cover economic, social and environmental issues, reflecting the broad objectives of sustainable development. I hope they will help people to understand what sustainable development means, and that they will be reported regularly on television, radio and in the newspapers.

Buenos Aires Conference

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Buenos Aires climate change conference. [60842]

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress made at the Buenos Aires climate change conference. [60845]

Mr. Prescott: We achieved very significant progress in Buenos Aires.

Decisions were needed at COP 4 to prepare for the future entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol and, to strengthen the implementation of the Convention itself. It was also crucial to maintain the political momentum of Kyoto and to send out a clear signal that Governments are serious about tackling the threat of climate change.

The Conference achieved those goals. After extended negotiations, in which the UK again played a major role, we were able to reach agreement on a number of key issues. The most important of these was adoption of a decision setting out a work programme to put in place rules for the operation of the "Kyoto mechanisms". These mechanisms—emissions trading, joint implementation and the clean development mechanism—will have an important role to play in support of domestic action to enable countries to meet their Kyoto targets. The decision agreed a two year deadline for completion of the work.

We also secured agreement on elements of a workplan and a target date for completion of important procedures and guidelines on other key issues—such as a comprehensive compliance regime, including the strengthening of systems for compiling and reporting national inventories of greenhouse gas emissions and for the review of countries' performance in meeting commitments.

We were also able to agree a package of measures to enhance the technological and financial assistance which we are committed to providing developing countries.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals were agreed to at the Buenos Aires conference on climate change to (a) monitor, (b) regulate and (c) enforce (i) reforestation programmes and (ii) carbon trading; and if he will make a statement. [60846]

Mr. Prescott: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my response in the Library.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55551]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 November 1998]: This question could be answered in full only at disproportionate cost. Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration.

The volume of travel by RAF aircraft reflects our Presidency of the European Union. Between 2 May 1997 and 30 September 1998, Ministers in this Department have used RAF aircraft on the following occasions:

Date	Destination	Purpose	Numbers accompanying Minister
3 May 1997	Kensington Palace	Privy Council meeting	3
23 July 1997	Manchester	Local Government Association first Annual Conference	[1]—
27 October 1997	Luxembourg/Copenhagen/Oslo	Pre UK Presidency Bilateral	4
20 November 1997	Villaconblay/Frankfurt/Stockholm	Pre UK Presidency Bilateral	3
24 November 1997	Lisbon/Madrid/Amsterdam/Vienna	Pre UK Presidency Bilateral	4
22 January 1998	Riga	Heads of Government meeting of the Baltic Sea States	2
23 March 1998	Brussels	Environment Council Meeting	2
29 June 1998	Brussels	Environment Council Meeting	5
16 August 1998	Omagh	Visit Omagh following bomb attack	3
22 August 1998	Omagh	Attend Omagh Memorial Service	3
26 September 1998	Blackpool	Switch on Illuminations	1

[1] Shared flight with Chancellor—accompanied by 4 DETR officials

The average cost to the Department of the flights taken to meet these trips for the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 is £3,063. .

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, travelled by a privately chartered aircraft to Calcutta on 11 September 1997 to represent the UK Government at the funeral of Mother Theresa. He was accompanied by 2 of his staff and a member of the Royal Family and her staff. There was no cost to the Department.

TREASURY

IMF and World Bank (Voting)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to encourage formal votes to be taken and the results published in (a) the IMF and (b) World bank. [57829]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 11 November 1998]: In common with the Executive Boards of other International Financial Institutions (IFIs), the Executive Boards of the IMF and World bank aim to operate by consensus, and formal votes are rare. My right hon. Friends the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Secretary of State for International Development, as Governors of the IMF and World bank respectively, have no plans to encourage formal votes to be taken. However, they have called upon all IFIs to adopt a presumption in favour of release of information, except where this might compromise confidentiality.

In their statement of 30 October, G7 Executive Directors of the IMF called on the IMF to provide that full written summaries on a broader range of Executive Board meetings were made available to the public by issuing Public Information Notices following a discussion of: an IMF program or program review in which there is a Letter of Intent (LOI), Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) or Policy Framework Paper (PFP); changes in general Fund policy; and Article IV consultations. They called for IMF policies to make provision for the timely release of LOIs, MOUs, or PFPs following Board consideration.

Social Security

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will account for the increase in forecast of social security contributions for 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02 between Table B8 of the Financial Statement and Budget report 1998 and Table B9 of the pre-Budget report. [59098]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 10 November 1998]: As paragraph B1 of the Report said, national insurance contributions have been especially buoyant in the first half of the year. Higher than expected outturns in the first half of 1998–99 are assumed to carry forward into future years. The forecasts of social security contributions as a per cent. of GDP are little changed since the Budget, reflecting upward revisions to the projections of money GDP (see table B5 of the Pre-Budget Report and table B1 of the FSBR).

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the effect on the forecast social security contributions in Table B9 of the pre-Budget report if the employee and employer national insurance contribution starting points were uprated each year in line with inflation. [59099]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 November 1998]: The Pre-Budget Report projections for social security contributions assume that lower and upper earnings limits are uprated annually in line with inflation.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the problems which have arisen in (a) his Department, (b) his agencies and (c) other public bodies for which his Department is responsible arising from millennium compliance; if he will make a statement on progress to date in tackling such problems; and what are the priority areas for remedial work. [60065]

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60212]

Ms Hewitt [holding answers 17 and 18 November 1998]: The Year 2000 problem is being addressed as the highest priority in all the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Departments.

Progress in these Departments is reported to Parliament on a quarterly basis. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and copies of the latest quarterly returns will be placed in the Library of the House and published on the Internet.

[redacted]vations by organisations such as Taskforce 2000 are taken very seriously and are taken into account by management in assessing the work that still remains to be done and how it should be taken forward.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what allocations have been made to date from the Contingency Reserve in relation to the millennium computer problem in (a) Her Majesty's Treasury and (b) other departments; and if he will make a statement. [59947]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 November 1998]: No allocations have been made from the Reserve in relation to the costs of ensuring Year 2000 compliance for IT systems either in HM Treasury or elsewhere in Government. The millennium computer problem has long been anticipated and departments are expected to deal with it within existing resources.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has commissioned on the effects of different forms of variable vehicle excise duty; and when he will publish the results. [60151]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 November 1998]: The options on reforming vehicle excise duty are set out in the consultation document published on 3 November, which will inform the next Budget.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the measure announced in the G7 statement in respect of making countries borrowing from the IMF treat foreign and domestic debtors alike. [59442]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 November 1998]: On 30 October 1998, IMF Executive Directors of the G7 issued a statement on the work programme for strengthening the architecture of the international monetary system. The G7 IMF Executive Directors' statement complemented the Declaration of G7 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors issued the same day. With the support of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, G7 IMF Executive Directors called for the policies on the use of IMF resources to include requirements that the borrower, in accordance with a schedule for action, adopt policies to provide a legal basis for non-discriminatory treatment in insolvency proceedings between domestic and foreign creditors and for debtors and other concerned persons.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to improve the transparency of IMF accounting practices. [56527]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 26 October 1998]: The IMF's financial statements are prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and are certified as representing a true and fair view of the Fund's financial position by an external audit committee.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has encouraged the IMF to continue looking for ways to improve the format, readability and clarity of their financial data.

The IMF Executive Board recently decided to publish on a monthly basis, information on the IMF's financial resources and liquidity position. The latest copy of the table and explanatory note have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on (a) a revaluation and (b) the sale of the IMF's gold reserves. [56524]

Ms Hewitt: The UK Government support, and have been pressing for, the sale of a proportion of the IMF gold reserves to provide financing for the HIPC initiative. The UK will continue to press for gold sales in the IMF Executive Board. Gold sales require the approval of the Executive Board by a majority of 85 per cent., and we are therefore working closely with other members at the IMF to secure Board approval. We would expect gold to be sold on the basis of market prices, in line with the provisions set out in the IMF Articles of Agreement.

The IMF can use its gold only by selling it. Under the Second Amendment to the IMF Articles of Agreement, it cannot use gold in loans, leases or as collateral in transactions and operations. Revaluation of gold in the IMF accounts would not therefore provide any additional resources for IMF lending or financing.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the interest forgone on that part of the UK's reserves that are notionally allocated to the IMF. [56523]

Ms Hewitt: The latest estimate, made last year, is that the cost of IMF membership to the UK averages £38 million per annum. This primarily reflects the interest forgone on reserves.

Single European Currency

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce a co-ordinated Government public information campaign about the implications of the introduction of the single European currency. [58915]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 November 1998]: The Government's communication campaign on the euro is not a general public information campaign but is specifically targeted at ensuring that UK businesses, especially small and medium firms, are aware of the implications of the introduction of the single currency from 1 January 1999 and have the information they need to address the issues arising from this.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the public service agreements between departments and the Treasury; and if he will make a statement. [59424]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The Public Service Agreements will be published next month.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what external scrutiny of performance against public service agreements is planned; and if he will make a statement. [59425]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 12 November 1998]: The public service agreements will set out clear objectives and performance and efficiency targets for public services. Performance against these objectives and targets will be reported annually to Parliament and the public.

Privatisations

Ms Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many previous privatisations have involved Government golden shares; and how many of these remain. [59958]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 18 November 1998]: The Government have issued 51 golden shares in privatisations. Most of the temporary golden shares have since expired. The table shows the Government's remaining holdings of 20 golden shares in privatised companies.

Smuggling (Petroleum Products)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) tonnage, (b) retail value, (c) excise duty content and (d) liability for VAT of (1) petroleum products and (2) diesel products subject to cross border smuggling into Northern Ireland for each year since 1995. [60435]

Ms Hewitt: No. HM Customs and Excise do not publish such information.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many vehicles have been impounded by HM Customs and Excise for alleged smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and what was the tonnage of fuel carried for each of the last three years. [60637]

Dawn Primarolo: In 1998 to date, 48 vehicles have been seized by Customs for alleged smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland. In addition 412,598 litres of fuel have been seized, with admission of smuggling of a further 24,195,569 litres.

The problem of petroleum smuggling into Northern Ireland has been evident only since late 1997 and indeed this is the reverse of the situation which existed a few years ago when people from the Republic of Ireland would travel to Northern Ireland to purchase cheaper fuel. There were no seizures of vehicles or fuel in years prior to 1998.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many successful prosecutions there have been in 1998 for smuggling petroleum products into Northern Ireland. [60436]

Ms Hewitt: There have been 2 successful prosecutions to date, with a further 10 cases with the Director of Public Prosecutions (Northern Ireland) awaiting trial. The successful prosecutions resulted in a fine of £3,500 and an 18 months suspended sentence. In addition, arrears of £500,000 of duty were recovered and costs of £25,000 awarded.

In 1998 to date, Customs have seized 48 vehicles and 412,598 litres of fuel, with admissions of smuggling a further 24,195,569 litres. A total of 25 people have been arrested and 6 cases have been the subject of compound penalties to a total of £59,300 and arrears of duty of £200,000. Wherever possible, cases are progressed with a view to criminal prosecution of the individuals involved.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many successful prosecutions there have been in each of the last three years for smuggling petroleum products into Northern Ireland. [60636]

Ms Hewitt: These have been two successful prosecutions in 1998 to date, with a further ten cases with a Director of Public Prosecutions (Northern Ireland) awaiting trial. The successful prosecutions resulted in a fine of £3,500 and an 18 months suspended sentence. In addition arrears of £500,000 of duty were recovered and costs of £25,000 awarded.

The problem of petroleum smuggling into Northern Ireland has been evident only since 1997 and indeed this is the reverse of situation which existed a few years ago when people from the Republic of Ireland would travel to Northern Ireland to purchase cheaper fuel. There were no prosecutions for smuggling of petroleum in years prior to 1998.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons his Ministers have declined to meet the President and officers of the Petrol Retailers Association to discuss petroleum smuggling in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [60639]

Dawn Primarolo: The Petrol Retailers have met with officials, and with Customs staff in Northern Ireland. Ministers have been fully briefed by officials and are aware of the representations that have been made.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to tackle cross-border smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [60638]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government and Customs are both aware of this problem and recognise that it is serious in revenue terms and, just as importantly, disadvantages legitimate traders. Customs are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community.

Cross-border issues such as this are common throughout the European Union and are a powerful argument for the programme to harmonise further duty rates between Member States. One of the ways to achieve this is by increasing EU minimum rates and this Government continue to press for this.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings have taken place between Ministers or officials and their Irish counterparts to discuss the smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [60635]

Dawn Primarolo: No meetings have taken place between Ministers and their Irish counterparts to discuss the smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland. However, meetings have taken place between operational staff. Where inquiries have extended to the Republic of Ireland jurisdiction requests have been made by Customs under the Convention for Mutual Assistance between Member States of the EU to the Irish Customs Investigation Branch for discovery of documentation at premises of oils suppliers in the Republic of Ireland to support intended criminal proceedings in Northern Ireland.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer where a couple have opted that the working families tax credit is to be paid to a male earner, how a female parent with care will ensure that payment is transferred to her following the breakdown of the relationship; and if he will estimate the length of time such a transfer will take. [60511]

Dawn Primarolo: In the situation described, the remaining partner either would claim Working Families Tax Credit themselves or, if they were not working, could claim Income Support or Job Seeker's Allowance. This will ensure that the support the remaining partner receives is appropriate to her personal circumstances, and the deserting partner's claim for WFTC is ended. How long this would take would depend on how quickly the remaining partner made the claim.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the proportion of those couples who will be entitled to the working families tax credit where the female partner is the principal earner. [60539]

Dawn Primarolo: It is estimated that about 20 per cent. of couples entitled to the Working Families Tax Credit will have the female partner as the main earner, and that about 90 per cent. of lone parents entitled to the Working Families Tax Credits will be female.

Indonesia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total loans by (a) the IMF and (b) the World Bank to Indonesia have been in each year since 1995; what (i) environmental, (ii) human rights and (iii) economic conditions were applied; and what monitoring has taken place in respect of these conditions. [57515]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 2 November 1998]: Total loan disbursements from the IMF and World Bank to Indonesia since 1995 (US$ millions) are as follows:

	IMF	World Bank
1995	—	1,144
1996	—	959
1997	3,000	916
1998 (expected)	5,500	659

Note:

(a) (i) No environmental conditions are attached to IFM loans.
(ii) No human rights conditions are attached to IMF loans.
(iii) IMF financing to Indonesia has been conditioned on a programme of economic adjustment, involving a macroeconomic framework conducive to the return of economic and financial stability, a comprehensive strategy to restructure the financial sector, further trade and capital account liberalisation, and improvements in corporate structure and governance.
(b) (i) All World Bank projects and programmes take account of environmental guidelines issued by the World Bank and agreed by the Board. A copy of the guidelines has been placed in the House of Commons Library.
(ii) No human rights conditions are attached to World Bank loans.
(iii) Different conditions are applied to different projects and programmes; adjustment operations in countries affected by crisis typically focus on mitigating the effects on the poorest groups in society and on promoting structural reforms.

Conditions for both IMF and World Bank programmes are monitored carefully, and their fulfilment is a requirement for the release of subsequent loan tranches.

Malaysia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total loans by (a) the IMF and (b) the World Bank have been since 1995 to Malaysia; what (i) environmental, (ii) human rights and (iii) economic conditions were applied; and what monitoring has taken place in respect of these conditions. [57522]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 2 November 1998]: Total loan disbursements by the IMF and World Bank to Malaysia since 1995 (US$ million) are as follows:

	IMF	World Bank
1995	—	128.9
1996	—	86.0
1997	—	69.1
1998 (expected)	—	339.9

(a) Malaysia has not had an IMF programme in the years since 1995, and so has not received any disbursements from the IMF.
(b) (i) All World Bank projects and programmes take account of environmental guidelines issued by the World Bank and agreed by the Board. A copy of the guidelines has been placed in the House of Commons library.
(ii) No human rights conditions are attached to World Bank loans.
(iii) Different conditions are applied to different projects and programmes; adjustment operations in countries affected by crisis typically focus on mitigating the effects on the poorest groups in society and on promoting structural reforms.

Conditions are monitored carefully, and their fulfilment is a requirement for the release of subsequent loan tranches.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the terms of reference of the second review by Sir Malcolm Bates of the Private Finance Initiative. [60686]

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures showing (a) the total value of private sector investment in the period covered by the comprehensive spending review, resulting from PFI projects and (b) the public spending commitments from 1999–2000 onwards resulting from PFI projects signed or expected to be signed by the end of the comprehensive spending review period. European Central Bank

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost of meeting the United Kingdom's liability to pay up 5 per cent. of its shares in the subscribed capital of the European Central Bank. [60792]

Ms Hewitt: In accordance with Article 48 of the ESCB Statute and Paragraph 9c of Protocol No. 11 to the EC Treaty, and following the decision of the ECB General Council in September 1998, the Bank of England will pay up 36,777,250 euro to cover its share in the ECB's subscribed capital. This payment will be offset against the proceeds of the liquidation of the EMI.

UK Productivity Report

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total cost to public funds of the report on United Kingdom productivity which he commissioned from the consultants McKinsey and Company; what is the length of the main report submitted; and what is the cost per page. [60649]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Government did not commission the report. It was independently produced. There was no cost to the public purse of the report on productivity by McKinsey and Company.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Pond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list for April 1998 the number and proportion of (1) part-time manual, (2) part-time non-manual and (3) all part-time employees on adult rates earning less than (A) £3.51, (B) £4.79, (C) £6.38 and (D) £6.90 per hour excluding overtime for (a) men, (b) women and (c) both sexes and for (i) each county and unitary authority in England, (ii) each unitary authority in Wales, (iii) each London borough, (iv) each unitary authority in Scotland, (v) Great Britain as a whole, (vi) England as a whole and (vii) each Government Office region; [60442]

(2) if he will list for April 1998 the number and proportion of (1) full-time manual, (2) full-time non-manual and (3) all full-time employees on adult rates earning less than (A) £3.51, (B) £4.79, (C) £6.38 and (D) £6.90 per hour excluding overtime for (a) men, (b) women and (c) both sexes and for (i) each county and unitary authority in England, (ii) each unitary authority in Wales, (iii) each London borough, (iv) each unitary authority in Scotland, (v) Great Britain as a whole, (vi) England as a whole and (vii) each Government Office region. [60443]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Pond, dated 19 November 1998:

As the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary questions on earnings information for a range of geographical areas.

The latest available information, from the New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1998, is contained in the attached tables. These tables are voluminous and copies of them are being placed in the Library of the House rather than reproduced in Hansard.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of people in the Don Valley constituency who have changed employment in the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and what proportion of the total workforce they comprise. [60453]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Caroline Flint, dated 18 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on employment in the Don Valley constituency.

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) is the ONS's major source of labour market data on individuals. It can provide information on whether people have changed jobs in the previous 12 months. However, no LFS data is available at constituency level, and no data below county level is available for such analyses. As with any sample survey estimates from the LFS are subject to sampling error and such analyses of data below county level would not produce reliable estimates. Unfortunately no other official source can provide the information requested either.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [58587]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Treasury Ministers have made use of non-scheduled special flights for travel to and from various official meetings. All arrangements for these flights are in line with the Ministerial Code and Cabinet Office guidance on travel by Ministers.

Independent Financial Advisers

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional costs that will be incurred by independent financial advisers consequent upon phase 2 of the Financial Service Review of Pensions. [60763]

Ms Hewitt: This is a matter for the Financial Services Authority.

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will explain the phrase

"the context of room for manoeuvre" used in paragraph A5 of the Pre-Budget Report. [60685]

Ms Hewitt: The phrase used in paragraph A5 is based on the Treasury paper "Delivering Economic Stability: Lessons from Macroeconomic Policy Experience" which was published alongside the Pre-Budget Report.

Dividends (Tax Credit)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the hon. Members and peers who have made representations to his Department on the ability of non-taxpaying individuals to reclaim the tax credit on dividends. [60684]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Euro (Cross-party Committee)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his proposed cross-party group of hon. Members to discuss euro preparations. [60687]

Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer wrote to each Parliamentary Party on 10 November inviting nominations for representatives for the new Cross-Party Advisory Group on preparations for the euro. Given the importance of ensuring that UK business is prepared for the start of the euro next year, I hope that every Parliamentary Party will wish to be represented on the Group.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to write to the Treasury Spokesmen of Opposition Parties in the House in relation to his plans to establish a cross-party committee to consider preparations for the euro; and if he will make a statement. [60041]

Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer wrote to the Treasury spokesmen of each Parliamentary Party on 10 November inviting nominations for representatives for the new Cross-Party Advisory Group on preparations for the euro. Given the importance of ensuring that UK business is prepared for the start of the euro next year, I hope that every Parliamentary Party will wish to be represented on the Group.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those organisations invited by the Standing Committee on Preparations for EMU to help to prepare an outline national changeover plan to the single currency. [60633]

Ms Hewitt: The following organisations were members of the eight working parties convened to help prepare an outline national changeover plan:

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the consequences of Sweden's non-inclusion in Phase 3 of EMU for the precondition of two years membership of the ERM prior to any UK participation in EMU. [60004]

Ms Hewitt: The Government note that the Council Decision of 3 May avoided a mechanical approach, allowing for the exercise of judgment provided by the Treaty. The decision that Finland and Italy met the conditions to join the single currency, though neither country had been a member of the ERM for two years, demonstrates this exercise of judgment.

The Council Decision of 3 May, stated that Sweden did not fulfil the necessary conditions for adoption of the single currency for a number of reasons, including the incompatibility of national legislation with the requirements of the Treaty and the Statute of the ESCB.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if applicant members of the EU incapable of joining stage 3 of EMU on accession will be required to participate in an exchange rate mechanism. [59809]

Ms Hewitt: The current applicants to the EU are neither required to adopt the euro immediately on accession, nor required to join an exchange rate mechanism.

Monetary Policy Committee

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much each member of the Monetary Policy Committee is paid for their services. [59529]

Ms Hewitt: The pay of the Bank's Governor, Deputy Governors and Executive Directors are set out in the Bank of England Report and Accounts 1998. The pay of external MPC members is a matter for the Bank of England.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will enlarge the Monetary Policy Committee to include more people with industrial and manufacturing experience; [59527]

(2) if he will increase the number of members of the Monetary Policy Committee representing each region of the United Kingdom. [59861]

Ms Hewitt: In appointing the members of the MPC, the Chancellor follows the requirement of the Bank of England Act that he be "satisfied that the person has knowledge or experience which is likely to be relevant to the Committee's functions".

Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the UK's total exposure in public expenditure terms to the ESAF programme. [56522]

Ms Hewitt: The UK has contributed £236.5 million to the ESAF programme. Our projected contribution by 2003 is £310 million.

Census

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he plans to make to the way the Government categorise people's ethnic origins in the next census. [60486]

Ms Hewitt: The Government's proposals for the 2001 Census, including the topics to be covered, and details of the question, relating to ethnicity will be published in a White Paper early next year.

Smuggling (Alcohol and Tobacco)

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his latest estimates of the revenue lost to the Exchequer through (a) smuggling and (b) cross-border shopping of (i) alcohol and (ii) tobacco. [60841]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise new estimates for revenue lost (excise duty and VAT) through cross-Channel smuggling in 1998 and cross-border shopping in 1997 are set out in the tables, together with their revised estimates for earlier years.

Table 1: Revenue lost through cross-Channel smuggling

Product type	1996	1997	1998
Beer	105	110	140
Wine	45	45	50
Spirits	50	25	30
Alcohol	200	180	220
Hand Rolling Tobacco	500	630	730
Cigarettes and other tobacco products	180	160	270
Tobacco	680	790	1,000
Total	875	970	1,220

Notes:
Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Components may not therefore sum to the totals shown.
The figures shown use Customs' assumption that between 70 per cent. and 80 per cent. of all alcohol purchased abroad substitutes for similar purchases in the UK.

Table 2: Revenue lost through cross-border shopping

£ million

Product type	1996	1997
Beer	45	50
Wine	100	140
Spirits	45	50
Tobacco Products	50	60
Total	235	305

Notes:
Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Components may not therefore sum to the totals shown.
The figures shown use Customs' assumption that between 70 per cent. and 80 per cent. of all alcohol purchased abroad substitutes for similar purchases in the UK.

In addition, Customs and Excise estimate that about £50 million per year is lost through smuggling of cigarettes from non-European Union countries by air passengers.

The above estimates exclude any amounts for revenue lost on alcoholic drinks and tobacco products smuggled in freight consignments. Customs and Excise have not published any estimates for the extent of these activities.

A report on Customs' estimates of cross-Channel smuggling and cross-border shopping has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Centenarians

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the current number of centenarians by county. [60495]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Michael Jack, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking for the current number of centenarians by county.

Lead Poisoning

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths occurred through lead poisoning in each of the last 10 years. [60804]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on deaths from lead poisoning.

Between 1988 and 1997, there were no deaths certified as due to lead poisoning in England and Wales.

Car Imports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been received by his Department and from whom, on the cost to the Exchequer in lost revenue from the parallel import of motor vehicles from the Republic of Ireland to the UK; and what calculations he has made of their effect on the loss of revenue to the Exchequer. [60591]

Ms Hewitt: HM Treasury has received a representation from the British Independent Motor Trade Association concerning type approval of imported cars sold to UK customers, which also referred to VAT being paid in the Republic of Ireland rather than the UK.

No calculations have been made on the revenue effect of parallel imports of motor vehicles from Ireland.

Financial Services and Markets Bill

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the disciplinary provisions contained in the proposed Financial Services and Markets Bill with the European Convention on Human Rights, with particular reference to Article 6, in the form in which such Convention will be incorporated into the UK law under the Human Rights Act 1998. [60834]

Ms Hewitt: A draft of the proposed Financial Services and Markets Bill was published for consultation in July. The Government are now assessing a number of issues that have been raised in the responses which we have received.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been employed in his Department under the New Deal arrangements. [60369]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment with responsibility for lifelong learning, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie), on 19 November 1998, Official Report, column 755.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60537]

Ms Hewitt: NDPBs are encouraged to participate as an employer in New Deal. Information on the numbers of people taken under the New Deal by non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

Abortions

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of abortions in Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham were funded by the NHS in the last three years for which figures are available. [60346]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Harriet Harman, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on NHS-funded abortions.

The ONS routinely publishes abortion statistics by regions and health authorities (HA). The following table shows the percentage of abortions funded by the NHS for residents of Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham HA.

Percentage of abortions funded by the NHS for residents of Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham HA, 1995–97

Year	Percentage
1995	70

Figures for 1995 and 1996 are published in the ONS Annual Reference Volumes: Abortion statistics series AB nos. 22, 23. Provisional figures for 1997 were published in the ONS Monitor Series AB 98/4 Legal abortions 1997: residents of regions and health authorities on 26 June 1998. These are available in the House of Commons library.

Earnings

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the movement was between 1 April 1975 and 1 April 1998 in (a) the index of average non-manual earnings and (b) the Retail Prices Index. [60507]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mrs. Margaret Ewing, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the movement in the index of average non-manual earnings and the Retail Prices Index.

The ONS does not produce an index of non-manual earnings. Information on average earnings is available from the New Earnings Survey (NES). Regrettably, the NES cannot provide data on a consistent basis for non-manuals, due to changes in the definition of non-manuals and in the definition of adult rates of pay. Comparisons of non-manual adult earnings over the period should be treated with some caution.

The NES shows that the average gross weekly earnings for full-time non-manual employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence, was £56.30 and £425.20 at April 1975 and 1998 respectively, an increase of 655 per cent.

The percentage increase in all items retail prices index between 15th April 1975 and 21st April 1998, the relevant 'index days', was 397 per cent.

Lost Working Days (Drug Abuse)

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the number of working days lost in each of the last three years as a consequence of drug abuse-related absences. [60424]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Tony Baldry, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on working days lost as a consequence of drug-related absences.

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) is the ONS's major source of labour market data on individuals. The LFS collects information on whether people had any time off in the reference week because of sickness or injury. However, no information on the cause or type of sickness is collected. Unfortunately, no other official source can provide the information requested either.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) advice and (b) instructions have been given by the Treasury to departments in relation to earmarking of reserves within existing departmental budgets; and if he will make a statement. [59439]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 12 November 1998]: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the percentage of families with dependent children which are (a) married couples (b) cohabiting couples and (c) lone parents, by each gender; [60766]

(2) if he will list the percentage of children who are in a household where the adult or adults with parental responsibility are (a) married, (b) co-habiting (c) single, (d) widowed, (e) divorced, (f) separated and (g) co-habiting with someone of the same sex; [60765]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Edward Leigh, dated 19 November 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary questions (60765, 60766, 60767, 60768, 60769 and 60770) about the economic status of mothers with dependent children.

Tables attached show data from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) which is the ONS major source of labour market data on individuals.

The first table shows the latest available quarterly data for the United Kingdom. The second table gives the same analysis for Great Britain for the average of the period from spring 1996 to winter 1996/7 i.e. on a geography and time period consistent with the answers to your other three questions about demographic data.

In the General Household Survey (GHS), adults and children in each household are assigned to families: married couple families; cohabiting couple families and lone parent families. Children belong to the appropriate family either by virtue of being the natural children of both the parents forming the couple, or of the lone parent, or else, if they are adoptive or stepchildren, by belonging to the same family as their adoptive/step parents. Foster children, however are not regarded part of their foster parent family since they are not related to them. For the purpose of answering this question, it has been assumed that the natural/adoptive/step parent(s) are the adults responsible for the children. Attached are tables from the GHS give the information requested regarding households.

SOCIAL SECURITY

LOFIT

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what meetings he or members of his ministerial team attended in October with the London Organised Fraud Investigation Team; [59701]

(2) what the reasons were for the closure of the London Organised Fraud Investigation Team's offices and the serving of summary notices; [59704]

(3) who will take responsibility for the cases which the London Organised Fraud Investigation Team was pursuing; and if the cases will be proceeded with; [59705]

(4) if his Department was involved in the decision to close the London Organised Fraud Investigation Team's offices. [59703]

Mr. Denham: The London Organised Fraud Investigation Team (LOFIT) was set up by the Association of London Government (ALG). It was a three year pilot, tasked to look at the best ways of tackling organised Housing Benefit fraud. The pilot began in March 1996 and was scheduled to end in March 1999. The Department provided support, including funding. The ALG were responsible for the management of LOFIT and established a management committee to carry out this function on which the DSS had only observer status.

Following a value for money report from the Audit Commission, DSS and the ALG commissioned an evaluation report on the effectiveness of LOFIT by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI). Having received the report we were in no doubt that continued funding of the pilot could not be justified. The ALG agreed and decided to wind down the operation of LOFIT as from 12 October 1998. We agreed to their request for assistance on the implementation of an orderly and properly managed rundown. It was further agreed that the DSS would maintain the relevant funding until such time as that was achieved, subject to a satisfactory closure plan, as well as to provide appropriate technical investigative advice on outstanding cases.

The ALG took immediate action and has since appointed an administrator to take responsibility for the management of this rundown, along with the disposal of cases which had been referred to LOFIT. The administrator will decide how the team's remaining cases should be handled.

Neither I nor any members of the ministerial team attended any meetings in October with LOFIT.

Tackling organised fraud is a demanding task. The Government are pursuing this within the anti-fraud strategy announced earlier this year in the Green Paper "BEATING FRAUD IS EVERYONE'S BUSINESS: Securing the Future". We are continuing to look at ways to strengthen our fight against fraud including establishing better partnerships with local authorities.

NIRS2 Computer System

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to recover from the supplier the costs incurred by the public purse as a consequence of the Contributions Agency's computer system failure. [60750]

Mr. Timms: Compensation of £3.732 million has been paid in respect of changes to the original contract dates.

Work continues to assess the extent to which additional costs have or will be incurred. Consideration is also being given to the cause of any problems that may result in additional costs to the Department. Any future course of action will depend on the outcome of this work. We have not ruled out the possibility that compensation claims will in future be presented to the Supplier.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 396, on problems with the NIRS2 computer system, if he will provide corresponding figures for the basic state pension. [60594]

Mr. Timms: The estimated total amount of basic State Pension being underpaid weekly because of problems with the NIRS2 computer is about £38,000. The total amount estimated to have been underpaid since April is about £510,000.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Contributions Agency's computer system will be fully functional. [60748]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the Written Answers I gave to the hon. Members for Newbury (Mr. Rendel) and for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) on 22 October 1998, Official Report, column 1187, and 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 499–500.

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements for compensation are being made for those affected by the failure of the Contributions Agency's computer system; and when and how they will be notified. [60749]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the Written Answer I gave to the hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel) on 22 October 1998, Official Report, column 1187, and 4 November 1998, Official Report, columns 603–06.

All Work Test

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the benefits which a person with disabilities will be entitled to if under the new form of the all work test he agrees to make himself available for limited types and limited amounts of work; and to what extent payment of those benefits will be dependent on his taking any job which is suitable for his capabilities. [60725]

Mr. Timms: Reform of the All Work Test will focus on providing additional information about people's capacities which contribute to a wider assessment of employability by a Personal Adviser, to help plan a return to work where this is appropriate. More than a million disabled people say they would like to work and these reforms are intended to help them to realise that ambition.

The All Work Test will continue to assess incapacity in the same way as now, in order to determine entitlement to benefits (Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance, Income Support paid on the grounds of incapacity, and the disability premium in the income-related benefits). We have no plans to make receipt of these benefits conditional on a claimant's making himself available for work or accepting employment.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people who have been awarded incapacity benefit since April 1995 and who do not have income from an occupational or private pension also receive one or more of income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit; [60701]

(2) how many people who have been awarded incapacity benefit since April 1995 also receive one or more of income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit. [60700]

Mr. Timms: As at 31 May 1997 there were 664,000 Incapacity Benefit recipients in receipt of one or more of Income Support, Housing Benefit (HB) or Council Tax Benefit (CTB). Information is not available on the number of those whose benefit awards started after April 1995, or of those who do not have occupational or personal pensions.

Source:

1 per cent sample of the (HB/CTB) Housing Benefit Management Information System (which are rounded to nearest 10,000 and include estimates), and 5 per cent. sample of Income Support cases (rounded to nearest 1,000).

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral statement of 28 October 1998, Official Report, column 339, if he will indicate the levels of (a) health insurance and (b) pension income thresholds that would lead to dis-entitlement of payment of incapacity benefit. [60590]

Mr. Timms: Our proposal is to reduce Incapacity Benefit by 50 per cent. of income in excess of £50.00 a week from occupational or personal pensions, or permanent health insurance arranged by an employer. This will apply to new claims only; existing claimants will not be affected.

The point at which entitlement to payment of Incapacity Benefit is extinguished will depend on the level of benefit payable.

At current rates someone qualifying for the basic rate of long-term Incapacity Benefit (£64.70 a week) would need pension income or permanent health insurance of £179.40 to have no entitlement to Incapacity Benefit, and would still have nearly £115.00 more weekly income than someone whose only income is Incapacity Benefit.

Someone qualifying for an age addition of £6.80 and dependency increases for an adult (£38.70) and one child (£9.90) as well as the basic rate of long-term Incapacity Benefit (total £120.10 a week) would need pension income or permanent health insurance of £290.20 to have no entitlement to Incapacity Benefit, and would still have £170.00 more weekly income than someone whose only income is Incapacity Benefit.

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants for incapacity benefit have (a) been found fit to work following an examination by a BAMS doctor and (b) have had this decision overturned on (i) appeal and (ii) reviews. [60654]

Mr. Timms: Between April 1995 and 31 August 1998, 321,791 claims for Incapacity Benefit were disallowed following examination under the All Work Test.

Up to 31 August 1998, 49,951 of these decisions had been reversed by an appeal tribunal and 2,797 on review by the adjudication officer following an appeal by the claimant.

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants for incapacity benefit who are from ethnic minority backgrounds have been found fit for work following examination by a BAMS doctor. [60655]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60519]

Angela Eagle: This Department provides financial support to two non-departmental public bodies, the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (OPRA) and the Pensions Compensation Board (PCB). OPRA has not yet recruited anyone under the New Deal but hopes to participate in the near future. PCB does not directly employ any staff so there is no scope for them to recruit under the New Deal arrangements.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his estimate that lone parents who take paid employment as a result of the New Deal programme and who are £40 per week better off takes account of the value of those passported benefits which are available only to those on income support. [60513]

Angela Eagle: The "better off" figure quoted as £40 refers to the sample of around 300 lone parents who moved from Income Support into work (and onto Family Credit) following participation in the New Deal for Lone Parent prototypes. No statistics are collected on those who move off benefit completely. Included in the calculation of the £40 better off figure are Child Benefit, maintenance, Family Credit, net income from earnings, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

Family Credit and Income Support recipients are entitled to several additional NHS benefits such as free prescriptions, dental treatment, sight tests, vouchers for glasses, refunds of travel costs to and from hospital for treatment, wigs and fabric supports, as well as dried milk for babies under a year old. Income Support recipients are also entitled to additional benefits, such as free school meals for children, which are not available to those on Family Credit. None of the value of these additional benefits is included in any of the above calculations.

Notes:

1. Earnings are not assumed in Income Support cases.

2. The better off figure takes account of assumed rates of Housing Benefit and Council Tax benefit for Income Support cases (set at £54.10 and £8.60 respectively) and a calculated amount for each Family Credit case.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the total number of lone parents who obtained employment through the New Deal for Lone Parents between July 1997 and September 1998 have subsequently left employment to claim income support. [60702]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the average annual salary of the personal advisers in the New Deal for Lone Parents is; and what the ratio of advisers to lone parents has been in each of the pilot areas. [60744]

Angela Eagle: The average annual salary of the personal advisers in the New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP) is £20,783 gross.

The table shows the estimated total numbers of lone parents on Income Support in each of the 'pilot' areas at the commencement of Phase 1 of the New Deal for Lone Parents in July 1997 whose youngest child was aged 5 years 3 months and over.

District	Estimated number of lone parents on Income Support whose youngest child was aged 5 yrs 3 mths and over	Number of advisers	Estimated ratio of advisers to lone parents
Cambridgeshire	4,780	11	1 to 434
Sheffield East	3,200	9	1 to 355
North Worcestershire	3,320	7	1 to 474
North Cheshire	4,330	10	1 to 433
North Surrey	6,720	15	1 to 448
Cardiff & Vale	5,020	11	1 to 456
Clyde Valley	2,710	6	1 to 451
Warwickshire	3,440	8	1 to 430
Total	33,520	77	1 to 435 (average)

Notes:

1. The numbers of Advisers shown gives the numbers in post at the commencement of Phase 1 of the New Deal for Lone Parents in July 1997. There were fluctuations in these figures due to staff changing jobs etc., but the number of Advisers throughout Phase 1 of the New Deal for Lone Parents ranged between 72 and 84.

2. It is important to note that the number of lone parents shown in each of the Districts is the number in the target group—ie. those whose youngest child is aged 5 years 3 months and over. This group represents one half of the total number of lone parents claiming Income Support in each of the areas shown. In addition, lone parents from the non-target group (ie. those whose youngest child was aged below 5 years and three months) also put themselves forward and actually benefited from the New Deal for Lone Parents service.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60374]

Angela Eagle: I refer my hon. Friend to the Written Answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie), the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment with responsibility for lifelong learning, today, Official Report, column 755.

This Department has not yet recruited any young people under the New Deal arrangements. The Benefits Agency and the War Pensions Agency have recently signed New Deal contracts with the Employment Service. The other Agencies, and DSS Headquarters, expect to sign contracts shortly. With these agreements in place, we hope to begin recruiting people under the New Deal arrangements.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the additional number of (a) men and (b) women who will receive means tested benefits as a result of the abolition of severe disablement allowance for adults. [60510]

Mr. Timms: Information on the additional number of men and women who will receive means tested benefits as a result of the reforms to Severe Disablement Allowance is not available. However, current statistical data indicate that nearly 70 per cent. of the 10,000 men and 6,000 women who will no longer be able to claim Severe Disablement Allowance will, as now, claim Income Support. Of the remaining 30 per cent., most will not qualify for Income Support due to the level of other income available to them and it is unlikely that they will do so in the future.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many adjudication officers are employed to assess (a) disability living allowance and (b) attendance allowance in disability benefit centres; and what arrangements are made in the event of adjudication officers being (i) sick and (ii) on leave; [60816]

(2) how many cases are outstanding because of a shortage of adjudication officers at disability benefit centres; [60817]

(3) what vacancies there are for adjudication officers at disability benefit centres. [60818]

Mr. Timms: I will write to the hon. Member.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the amount of money currently paid to post offices for handling payments of family credit; and if he will make a statement on the implications of the loss of such payments following the introduction of the working families tax credits. [60512]

Angela Eagle: The fees paid by this Department to the Post Office are commercial in confidence. However, we can assure the hon. Member that the relevant contracts are scripted to provide flexibility for both increases and decreases in volumes of business and therefore should not be a factor in the implementation of new policies.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 96, on means-tested benefits, if he will estimate how many of those listed will be receiving, (a) income support alone, (b) income support and either housing benefit or council tax benefit alone, (c) working families tax credit alone, (d) housing benefit alone, (e) council tax benefit alone, (f) working families tax credit and either housing benefit or council tax benefit and (g) any other combinations of these benefits. [60593]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available was published in the "Cross Benefit Analysis—Population of Working Age on Key Benefits" on 29 October 1998. Copies of this document can be found in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to publish the housing benefit review. [60680]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Kidney) on 18 November 1998, Official Report, columns 621–22.

Benefit Interviews

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances, under the single gateway to benefit, attendance at the interview with a special adviser will not be a condition of receiving benefit. [60699]

Angela Eagle: We recognise that for some people claiming benefit an immediate interview about work may not be appropriate. For them, the priority will be to pay the benefit to which they are entitled and ensure that all their welfare needs are properly identified. The gateway seeks to treat people as individuals and avoid rigid categorisation. Everyone will be handled with sensitivity, taking account of their particular needs. In some cases, the work-focused interview may have to be deferred.

Mortgage Protection

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he last met the representatives of the mortgage protection insurance industry to discuss products to meet the needs of people to protect their homes; and with what results. [60717]

Angela Eagle: The Government are working in partnership with lenders and insurers to encourage greater provision outside the orbit of government to provide increased security for all home owners. As part of that ongoing process, Ministers from this Department and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions met representatives of the lending and insurance industries on 20 October, to discuss the industries' proposals for better protection for home owners, in particular the development of a new, standard mortgage payment insurance product.

Injury Compensation Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the rules under which compensation payments following personal injuries are offset against certain social security benefits. [60688]

Mr. Timms: None at present. We are monitoring carefully the reformed scheme that began in October last year.

Benefit Uprating

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the benefit rates and disregards which will not be uprated in line with the relevant price index in April 1999, stating the reason in each case. [59817]

Mr. Darling: [holding answer 17 November 1998]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the estimate by NatWest Life that 20 per cent. of those currently of working age can expect to be comfortable in old age; and if he will list the policies which he has to ensure that those who are currently unemployed will not require support from means-tested benefits in old age. [60664]

Mr. Denham: The estimate by NatWest Life forms part of one of the many surveys on retirement income that are produced from time to time by a wide variety of organisations. It is not the Government's policy to comment on the publication of such reports. The Pensions Review is currently looking at all aspects of the basic State Pension and second pensions. We intend to publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year.

SCOTLAND

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55556]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 19 October 1998]: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Task Force Schemes

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many voluntary sector and environmental task force schemes are operating in Scotland under the New Deal; where they are based; how many young people in each local authority area are involved in such schemes; and what percentage they are in each local authority area of all young people involved in the New Deal. [58981]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 11 November 1998]: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Scottish Parliament (Voting System)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to launch the programme of public education about the voting system for the elections to the Scottish Parliament; what form it will take; which non-party agency he will put in charge of it; and how much money is budgeted for this purpose. [60355]

Mr. McLeish: We envisage the planned voter education campaign commencing in the New Year. We are currently taking professional advice about the precise form and timing of the campaign and intend to discuss our proposals with the other political parties. We will make decisions on the budget to be assigned to the campaign in the light of those discussions and the professional advice we receive.

Tourism Grants

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total value of grants awarded in Scotland under section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act 1969 in each year since April 1992. [60596]

Mr. Macdonald: The total value of assistance approved by the Scottish Tourist Board in the form of grants and loans was as follows:

Year	Value of assistance
1992–93	2,863,000
1993–94[1]	963,000

[1] The scheme of financial assistance operated by the Scottish Tourist Board under section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act 1969 was suspended with effect from 29 June 1993.

Chicken Meat Imports

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the volume of chicken meat imported to Scotland from Thailand. [60406]

Mr. Macdonald: Information on the value of chicken imports to Scotland is not available.

Arable Crop Payments

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to speed up the payment to farmers of money owed by his Department in respect of arable crop payments. [60404]

Mr. Macdonald: Payments to Scottish farmers under the 1998 Arable Area Payments Scheme (AAPS) started on 16 October, the earliest date allowed under EU legislation, and some two months earlier than in 1997. To date, some 80 per cent. of arable farmers in Scotland have received over £78 million under the 1998 scheme. The remainder will be paid once they have passed all the necessary validation checks.

Bacon

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from pig farmers about labelling of Scottish-produced bacon; and what action he is taking in respect of country of origin (a) labelling and (b) packing. [60405]

Mr. Macdonald: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Lord Sewel has met industry representatives, including pig farmers, on a number of occasions since the collapse in prices in the pig sector. Labelling home-produced bacon and pork was one of the issues discussed. There is no EU legislation governing the labelling of pigmeat. However, under the Food Safety Act 1990 it is an offence to describe a food falsely or make misleading descriptions as to the nature, substance or quality of the food. The information on the food label must also meet the labelling requirement in the Food Labelling (Scotland) Regulations 1984. Food must be labelled with particulars of its place of origin, if failure to give such particulars might mislead a purchaser as to the true origin of the food. The presence of this legislation allows home-produced bacon and pork to be identified to consumers at retail level. The Government are discussing with major retailers, wholesalers and caterers how best to ensure that the consumer can exercise choice.

Beef on the Bone

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the lifting of the ban on beef on the bone. [60407]

Mr. Macdonald: A number of farming and meat industry organisations have made such representations to me since the beef on the bone ban took effect last December. In addition, I have received 126 letters from Members of Parliament and private individuals on this issue.

Teachers' Salaries

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what salary was payable, in real terms to (a) secondary and (b) primary teachers in Scotland at the (i) bottom and (ii) top of the basic scale in the year from (1) 1 April 1975, (2) 1 April 1980, (3) 1 April 1993 and (4) 1 April 1998. [60506]

Mrs. Liddell: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on by health authorities and health trusts under the New Deal arrangements. [60412]

Mr. Galbraith: On 16 September I announced that Trusts and Health Boards in Scotland had given a commitment to provide 270 New Deal Welfare-to-Work places. Information on the take up of these places is not available centrally.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on by local enterprise councils under the New Deal arrangements. [60414]

Mr. Macdonald: I understand that by 31 October 7 persons had been taken on by Scottish Enterprise, Highlands and Islands Enterprise and their networks of local enterprise under the New Deal arrangements, a further 3 are in the process of being recruited and at present 8 more are under consideration for future posts.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many young people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60371]

Mr. Dewar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today, Official Report, column 755, by the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment with responsibility for lifelong learning, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie).

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60520]

Mr. Dewar: NDPBs are encouraged to participate as employers in the New Deal. Information on the numbers of people taken under the New Deal by non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

Police Officers

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many police officers (a) were recruited, (b) retired, (c) were dismissed and (d) resigned, in total and as a percentage, per police force in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [60479]

Mr. McLeish: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Prisoners

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the percentage of prisoners who have (a) drug and (b) mental health problems; and if he will make a statement. [60448]

Mr. McLeish: This information is not readily available. However, in the year 1 April 1997 to 31 March 1998, from 7,070 samples tested under the mandatory drug testing programme, 29 per cent. of prisoners tested positive.

The rate of psychological disturbance in the prison population is not clear but research suggests that, excluding drug dependence, alcohol dependence and personality disorder, it is estimated to be twice as high as in the general population.

The following is a summary of information contained in the Third Prison Survey, relating to drug and mental health problems, which was published earlier this year:

(a) 44 per cent. of prisoners reported that they had used drugs in prison at some point during the past 6 months and 5 per cent. reported injecting drugs during the same period: and

(b) 32 per cent. of prisoners reported feelings of depression "fairly often" or "very often" and 9 per cent. reported experience of suicidal thoughts with similar frequency in the past 6 months.

Conviction Statistics

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what the total number of convictions was in each category of crime, in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [60451]

(2) what were the (a) conviction and (b) clear up rates for each category of crime and in total in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [60480]

Mr. McLeish: Information for the latest 3 years for which complete data are available is given in the table.

Clear up rates for crimes and persons with a charge proved by main crime in courts in Scotland, 1994–1996 [1]

	Clear up rates[2]			Persons with a main charge proved
				Number			Percentage of persons proceeded against

Total crimes	34	35	37	53,425	52,318	51,704	83	82	81
Non-sexual crimes of violence	64	65	67	3,588	3,655	4,303	73	74	75

Fire-raising and vandalism	20	21	21	4,781	4,878	5,176	85	84	84
Other crimes[3]	100	100	99	12,326	12,948	13,152	82	81	76

[1] Statistics dealing with court proceedings and recorded crimes are not directly comparable. A person may be proceeded against for more than one offence and it is also possible that the offence recorded by the police may be altered as a result of the judicial proceedings. In some cases the year recorded in the recorded crime statistics may not be the same as the court proceedings.
[2] Crime cleared up by the eight Scottish police forces.
[3] Most crimes in this category are cleared up immediately because the offender is caught in the act, eg possession of drugs.

Police (Expenditure)

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of police force expenditure is accounted for by labour costs. [60450]

Mr. McLeish: In 1997–98 staff costs accounted for 88 per cent. of police forces' expenditure.

Prison Populations

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the current prison population per capita is in Scotland; what the comparable figures are in (a) England and Wales, (b) France, (c) Germany, (d) the Republic of Ireland and (e) the United States of America; what is the OECD average; and if he will make a statement. [60449]

Mr. McLeish: The available information is provided in the table. An average figure for OECD countries is not available: comparisons between different jurisdictions have to be treated with caution because of the differences in definitions and recording methods used.

Prison population and rate per 100,000 population by country as at 1 September 1997

Country	Number	Rate per 100,000 population[1]

Police Force Structures

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the aims and remit of the proposed review of police force structures in Scotland. [60447]

Mr. McLeish: When my right hon. Friend announced earlier this year that there was to be a review, he made it clear that the aim was to provide the Scottish Parliament with information on which to make a sound decision on whether the current number of forces in Scotland is right for the future. The process will involve a period of information gathering on the financial costs and benefits of a change in the number of forces. This will be followed by the issue of a consultation document which will allow all interested parties to give their views on the issue. The results of the consultation will be made available to the Scottish Parliament.

Re-offending Rates

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish figures for the re-offending rates, broken down by age group, following (a) custodial sentences, (b) community sentences and (c) fines, in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [60452]

Mr. McLeish: The available information is given in the table. The analysis provides figures on the percentage of individuals sentenced in 1993 who were re-convicted within one, two and three years of the date of sentence, by the type of sentence passed and by the age of the offender at the time of sentence. Convictions for most motoring offences and for some relatively minor statutory offences are excluded. The database does not hold information on the date of release from custody. Re-convictions may therefore include convictions for other crimes committed prior to the date of sentence, thus over-stating the actual rate of re-conviction.

Mrs. Liddell: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Housing

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses and flats were available for rent from (a) local authorities and (b) housing associations in (i) 1978 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [60745]

Mr. Macdonald: I shall write to my hon. Friend and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the methodology employed by officials in calculating the figures which he has released indicating an excess of Government spending over revenue raised in Scotland. [60669]

Mr. Dewar: The methodology, which is unchanged from previous years, is described in Appendices A and B of the "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1996–1997" report.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement about the proposals submitted by health boards and trusts for the further reduction of waiting lists in Scotland; [60667]

(2) if he will make a statement about the number of patients currently awaiting a first appointment with a consultant in Scotland. [60665]

Mr. Galbraith: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his current plans are for the A80 road between Glasgow and Stirling. [60796]

Mr. Macdonald: Options for upgrading the A80 to motorway standard are being analysed within the Strategic Roads Review.

PFI Contracts

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of PFI contracts in which the Government are engaged in Scotland and the annual expenditure to service each of these, over the full term of the contracts in cash and real terms. [60797]

Mr. Dewar: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Local Authority Housing Debt

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total amount of local authority housing debt in Scotland; and what would be the cost of redeeming that debt at the present day. [60798]

Mr. Macdonald: At 1 April 1998, local authority housing debt was estimated at £3.9 billion. An estimate of the cost of redeeming the debt could be made only at disproportionate cost, since it would require detailed discussions with all authorities about their debt portfolios.

Government Expenditure and Revenue Report

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many copies of the Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland report have been printed for each edition since 1992; how many have been distributed for each edition; and what was the cost of publication for each edition. [60799]

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will appoint a representative of the Church of Scotland to the Scottish Parliament Consultative Steering Group. [60670]

Mr. McLeish: The Consultative Steering Group has been meeting since January this year and will make its final report to the Secretary of State for Scotland by the end of this year. We have no plans to appoint any further members to the Group. The Church of Scotland took the opportunity to make its views known to CSG in response to the Group's extensive consultation exercise.

HEALTH

Clinical Perfusionists

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to regulate clinical perfusionists. [60496]

Mr. Milburn: Proposals for state registration are a matter for the Council for Professions Supplementary to Medicine.

Chiropody

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to update the regulatory framework for the chiropody profession. [60517]

Mr. Hutton: We intend to bring forward for consultation proposals for legislation to replace the Professions Supplementary to Medicine Act 1960, which regulates nine professions including chiropody.

Car Park Charges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to require health authorities and trusts to consult widely on proposals to introduce car park charges. [60516]

Mr. Milburn: Guidance on the implementation of car parking charges was issued to all trusts in 1996. The guidance envisages trusts seeking the views of staff and other interested parties during the development of its plans. It advises trusts that a typical consultation will include seeking the views of local health authorities, general practitioners, staff representative groups and Community Health Councils.

Value Added Tax Order

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 561, concerning VAT Order SI 1997/2744, if he will make a statement on the effects of the VAT Order indicating when his officials will conclude their work on the administrative procedure. [60515]

Mr. Milburn: Treasury officials have notified us this week that they have concluded their work on the administrative procedure to ameliorate the effect of the Value Added Tax Order on the supply of certain renal and cancer drugs.

The position on the supply of pharmaceutical products by retail pharmacists is rather more complicated and some legal issues are still being examined.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 561, concerning VAT Order SI 1997/2744, if incontinence supplies are the subject of discussions with Treasury officials in the same way as certain renal and cancer drugs. [60514]

Mr. Milburn: Incontinence pads are no longer the subject of discussions with Her Majesty's Treasury officials.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by each of the health trusts in England; [60532]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by each of the health authorities in England. [60533]

Mr. Milburn: We are committed to ensuring that this important strand of government social policy is a success and to this end we are looking to the National Health Service to provide at least 1,000 job opportunities overall to New Deal candidates. We have not set a minimum target for each organisation and we are aware that presently 260 NHS organisations have signed employer agreements. Most recent figures collected by the Department show that at the end of October there were 897 health authority and trusts vacancies registered with the Employment Services.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate how many people in each health region are currently waiting for an appointment with a consultant following referral by a general practitioner; if he will provide a breakdown of the length of time for which those people (a) have already waited and (b) are expected to wait; and if he will list for each region the waiting time being issued to new entrants to this waiting list for (i) orthopaedic consultants and (ii) consultants in all other major specialties. [60538]

Mr. Milburn: The total number of patients waiting for a first appointment with a consultant following referral by a general practitioner is not collected centrally. The available information is shown in the tables.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55552]

Ms Jowell: There have been no occasions where a Department of Health Minister has used an RAF or privately chartered aircraft during the period 1 May 1996 to 1 May 1997 or since 1 May 1997.

Bournewood Judgment

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Bournewood Judgment. [60293]

Mr. Hutton: Preliminary guidance on the implications of the judgment was given in a circular issued by the National Health Service Executive on 10 July (Health Services Circular 1998/999). Further guidance will be included in a revised Code of Practice on the Mental Health Act 1983 which, subject to the approval of the House, will be published early next year. The wider implications of the judgments of the Law Lords are being considered in the context of development of Government policy on mental incapacity more generally, and by the expert group which has been set up to advise the Government on the review of the Mental Health Act.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 179, (1) if he will estimate the cost of providing a hardship fund for people with haemophilia infected with the hepatitis C virus through contaminated blood products similar to the scheme operating for those with HIV infection; [59883]

(2) how many haemophilia patients were infected with hepatitis C virus through their NHS treatment prior to 1985; how many are currently awaiting liver transplants as a result of the disease; how many are currently undergoing NHS treatment; and how many have died as a result of liver diseases; [59848]

(3) what is the current medical (a) evidence and (b) advice on the transmission of Hepatitis C virus (i) between partners and (ii) between parents and children. [59843]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) on 18 November 1998, Official Report, columns 679–99.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 179, what representations he has received from the Haemophilia Society concerning abuse and discrimination against hepatitis C infected people. [59884]

Mr. Hutton: The Chairman of the Haemophilia Society wrote on 31 July to say that he was aware of difficulties in some cases and of concern among those infected. Some individuals have expressed similar concerns in correspondence. For young people in particular we are funding the Society's youth information and support project aimed at helping them improve their education and employment prospects.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 179, what steps he has taken to monitor the take-up of benefits by people infected with the hepatitis C virus through contaminated blood products; and what assessment he has made of the additional costs of care for such people and the loss of income from reduced availability for work. [59882]

Mr. Hutton: There is no specific monitoring of benefit claims from people infected with hepatitis C through blood products. Their entitlement to assistance under the benefits system is assessed in the same way as for other people. Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance, for example, does not depend on whether a claimant is working, or on specific disabling conditions, but on the effects of a person's disability on their care and/or mobility needs.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which EU countries provide financial help for haemophiliacs infected with hepatitis C virus through treatment products. [59846]

Mr. Hutton: I will write to the hon. Member.

CS Spray

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the research by the Bethlem and Maudsley NHS trust on the use of CS spray by the police on people with mental health problems; and what action has been taken following this assessment. [60315]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not made any assessment of this research. However, we understand that the Mental Health Act Commission has written to the President of the Royal College of Psychiatrists suggesting that the College should convene a meeting of the relevant interests with a view to deciding what, if any, action is needed to address the questions raised by the survey.

Asylum Seekers (Birmingham)

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about Birmingham City Council's method of delivering groceries to asylum seekers in Birmingham. [60247]

Mr. Hutton: It is for the individual local authorities to decide on the level and most cost-effective type of service it provides to adult asylum seekers having regard to the needs of the asylum seekers concerned.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the conclusions of Taskforce 2000 published on 11 November in respect of his Department's most recent quarterly return on plans and progress towards Year 2000 readiness. [60220]

Mr. Milburn: The Taskforce 2000 report provided a comprehensive assessment of the state of preparedness of the Department and its agencies as it existed at the end of the summer. We welcome any independent analysis of our published returns as a double check of analysis done in-house.

The Medicines Control Agency are well aware of the problems identified and were already acting on these prior to the publication of the Taskforce 2000 report.

The figures contained in the last published quarterly review for the National Health Services Estates Agency are open to different interpretations, but were classified as 'green' (low risk) by the Central Information Technology Unit in the Cabinet Office.

The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly in the House and copies of the Department's and its agencies' latest quarterly returns will be available in the Library and published on the Internet.

Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of Opportunities For Volunteering grants for 1999–2000. [60401]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme is an important part of our overall support for volunteering in health and personal social services, and will remain so in 1999–2000. During 1999, we will consider the most effective way of developing the Department's strategy to promote volunteering. This will be done in consultation with the leading national voluntary organisations who are involved in the Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme. Pending the development of that strategy, we have ensured that grant commitments under the scheme for 1999–2000 will be fully met.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received in connection with Opportunities For Volunteering grants for 1999–2000. [60402]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has received 13 letters about the level of funding for the Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme in 1999–2000. In addition, Departmental officials have been in discussion about funding for 1999–2000 with representatives of the leading voluntary organisations involved in the scheme. I am to meet representatives of those organisations on 24 November to discuss the scheme in the wider context of developing the Department's overall strategy to promote volunteering.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many organisations currently receive Opportunities For Volunteering grants; for how long each organisation has received a grant; and when is the planned end of each organisation's funding from such grants. [60403]

Mr. Hutton: Seventeen leading national voluntary organisations receive Opportunities for Volunteering grants directly from the Department. Currently they use that funding to support 526 local volunteering organisations and projects through grants for up to three years. 176 of those local grants are due to end in 1999–2000, and a further 121 in 2000–01.

Irlen's Syndrome

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation his Department has made of treatments for Irlen's syndrome. [60600]

Mr. Milburn: No evaluation of treatments for Irlen's Syndrome has been carried out by the Department.

Incentive Project Service Payments

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many administrative personnel working for the Hillingdon Health Authority, West Hertfordshire Health Authority, North Thames Regional Executive of the NHS and the Mount Vernon and Watford Hospitals NHS Trust are subject to incentive project reviews; and what posts they hold. [60357]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 18 November 1998]: Information is not centrally held on individual payments to National Health Service staff or the number of NHS staff who could benefit from them.

Guidance on Department of Health pay arrangements is set out in the booklet "DH Pay Arrangements—Guidance for Managers and Staff". All staff at NHS Executive Regional Offices receive performance related pay, except Senior Civil Servants, who have separate arrangements. In North Thames Regional Office, for 1997–98, 110 members of staff received pay awards.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Plutonium Discharges

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the plutonium reprocessed from spent fuel discharged from BNFL's Calder Hall and Chapel Cross reactors is under safeguards. [60778]

Mrs. Roche: All plutonium recovered from the reprocessing of spent fuel from the Calder Hall and Chapel Cross reactors since May 1995 is under Euratom safeguards and subject to the terms of the UK/Euratom/IAEA safeguards agreement. The process of historical accounting announced as part of the outcome of the Strategic Defence Review (SDR) will cover all plutonium recovered from the reprocessing of fuel from the Calder Hall and Chapel Cross reactors, irrespective of whether it has been placed under international safeguards or not.

Defence Exports

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the defence equipment exported to Saudi Arabia by Allivane under export licence 1A/4650/87; [60812]

(2) if export licence number 1A/4650/87 was granted to Allivane for the supply of defence equipment to Saudi Arabia. [60813]

Mrs. Roche: Chapter 6, E6.3—6.15 of Sir Richard Scott's 'Report of the Inquiry into the Export of Defence Equipment and Dual-Use Goods to Iraq and Related Prosecutions' recorded that export licence number 1A/4650/87 was issued on 17 June 1987 to Allivane International Limited, and covered the export to the Ministry of Defence and Aviation in Saudi Arabia, of 15,000 rounds of 155mm extended range base-bleed HE ammunition. Information on exports under this licence is also set out there.

Electronic Commerce

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce measures to promote the growth of electronic commerce, including digital purchases, with particular reference to software, video, audio and intellectual property. [60679]

Mrs. Roche: I will set out my proposals, to make the UK the best environment in the world to trade electronically, in the Competitiveness White Paper to be published shortly.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will establish a development corporation to encourage Internet-based trading companies, including those facilitating digital purchases, to locate in the UK. [60678]

Mrs. Roche: The Invest in Britain Bureau—which promotes the whole of the UK as the number one location for inward investment in Europe—is giving special emphasis to identifying key knowledge-driven potential investors from around the world, including Internet technology producers and trading companies. Cisco systems, one of the world's leading Internet technology companies, announced only a few weeks ago that it will set up a new research and design centre in the UK and today announced it is extending its American Networking Academy Programme to the UK to certify schools in computer networking and Internet applications.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings he has had since his appointment with (a) British Airways, (b) British Airports Authority, (c) British Telecom, (d) British Aerospace, (e) the Ford Motor Company, (f) GEC, (g) Camelot, (h) Thames Water, (i) BSkyB, (j) Marks and Spencer, (k) McDonalds and (l) Tesco; and if civil servants were present. [60432]

Mr. Mandelson: Since my appointment as Secretary of State I have had meetings with the named companies on the following occasions. Civil Servants were present at all the meetings.

Date	Company
7 September 1998	British Aerospace
21 October 1998	British Aerospace
26 October 1998	British Aerospace
30 October 1998	British Telecom
14 November 1998	British Aerospace

Multinational Companies

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government plans to take to strengthen through international forums the obligations and responsibilities of multinational companies in respect of (a) environmental and (b) labour standards. [60663]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government are working to encourage a positive response by United Kingdom companies to calls for socially and environmentally responsible behaviour. We are also working with our OECD counterparts to review the OECD Guidelines on Multinational Enterprises, which set down the firm expectation of how member Governments expect their companies to behave in the areas covered by the Guidelines. As part of this review, we will be calling for the principles of the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work to be incorporated into the Guidelines.

Multinational Agreement on Investment

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those companies which have indicated to the Government a desire to see a multinational agreement on investment in place. [60606]

Mr. Wilson: The Government receive regular representations from UK companies, in the course of our normal day-to-day contacts, in favour of further trade and investment liberalisation. The CBI has made specific representations in favour of a multilateral framework of investment rules.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 585, on European structural funds, if he will make a statement on the negotiations within the European Union regarding the European structural funds regime for the West Midlands Region. [60251]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 585.

Millennium Dome (Public Toilets)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what provision there will be in the Millennium Dome for public toilets for women and men, including disabled people, and for babies' changing and feeding rooms. [60676]

Mr. Mandelson: The Millennium Dome site will have 608 WCs and 247 urinals. Toilet facilities for people with disabilities will be available at each of the service cores in the Dome and elsewhere around the site. The site will also offer adequate facilities for changing and feeding young children.

Trades Union Recognition

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his proposals for trades union recognition in workplaces are conditional upon those employees indicating separately that they wish the unions to represent them in collective bargaining with management. [60380]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government intend that there will be three gateways to union recognition: by voluntary agreement, as at present, which is likely to be the most frequently used route; automatically, where a union or group of unions has more than 50% of the relevant employees as members; or by a majority and at least 40% or those eligible to vote supporting recognition in a ballot. The Government will announce in due course detailed measures to give effect to these proposals.

Fairness at Work

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library copies of the submissions on the Fairness at Work White Paper from companies and business organisations. [60762]

Mr. Mandelson: The White Paper on Fairness at Work did not say that responses would be made public. Some respondents may have intended their responses to be confidential and it would be wrong to disclose them without permission. However, we have already placed a list of all respondents in the Library so that hon. Members may approach them direct to ask whether they are prepared to release their responses.

Multinational Enterprise Guidelines

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current review of the OECD Guidelines on Multinational Enterprises. [60587]

Mr. Wilson: The OECD Committee on International Investment and Multinational Enterprises (CIME) agreed at its meeting in June that the OECD Guidelines on Multinational Enterprises should be renewed. The Government, together with the majority of the other delegates, argued that this review should be completed in one year. We are strongly committed to the Guidelines, which set out our firm expectation of how UK companies should act in the areas that they cover. We are in the process of developing our detailed objectives for the review, in discussion with business, trade unions and other interested parties.

Oil Exploration (Atlantic Frontier)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the effect of prevailing weather conditions in the Atlantic Frontier on oil exploration activities. [60806]

Mr. Battle: I am unaware of any specific representations about this matter.

Oil Pollution

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what procedures he has in place to ensure continuous risk assessment and monitoring to prevent serious oil pollution incidents in UK waters arising from oil extraction activities; and if he will make a statement. [60808]

Mr. Battle: The recently implemented Merchant Shipping (Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Co-operation Convention) Regulations 1998 require that for each installation involved in oil extraction activities a plan is submitted, which includes an assessment of the risk of spills. These plans must be reviewed every 5 years, or earlier if there are any major changes which may affect the validity or effectiveness of the plan.

DTI inspectors travel offshore to inspect installations on a regular basis to ensure that operators are in compliance with any legislative requirements. In addition, all offshore installations are routinely over-flown by the anti-pollution surveillance aircraft. Operators are obliged by law to report all spills of oil resulting from their activities.

New Deal

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of people taken on under the New Deal arrangements by non-departmental bodies in receipt of financial support from his Department. [60518]

Dr. Howells: This Department provides financial support to 37 Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) which are encouraged to participate as employers in the New Deal. Information on the number of people taken under the New Deal by NDPBs is not held centrally.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people within his Department have been employed under the New Deal arrangements. [60387]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today, Official Report, column 755, by the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment with responsibility for lifelong learning, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie).

Environment-friendly Practices

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he proposes to inform businesses of the benefits of implementing environment-friendly practices. [60482]

Mr. Battle: The Department of Trade and Industry actively promotes to business the message that improved environmental performance enhances competitiveness. The main vehicle for this is the Environment Technology Best Practice Programme which is run in partnership with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. This programme produces high quality technical advice in relation to specific industrial sectors along with generic advice on issues such as waste minimisation. It also runs a Helpline which provides advice on environmental problems faced by business. This programme complements the work done—again in collaboration with DETR—by the Joint Environmental Markets Unit on promoting the capabilities of the UK Environment industry.

Apart from the programme, advice is made available on specific issues arising from current or forthcoming legislation and policy initiatives: such as guidance on producer responsibility and recycling and on ozone depleting substances. Moreover, the Department works in partnership with national organisations in promoting the business case for environmental performance and funds, through the Government Offices in the regions, local events and projects to raise business awareness of the issues and the services offered by the Department.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those who have accompanied (i) him or his predecessor and (ii) his departmental Ministers on overseas visits since 1 January indicating (a) the venue of the visit, (b) the purpose of the visit, (c) the names of those involved, (d) the job of those involved, (e) the reasons why they were included in the visit and (f) the cost to public funds. [53839]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Office Furniture

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received relating to the impact on exceptionally tall people of the most recent CEN recommendations concerning the standard height of office furniture. [59605]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Two European office furniture standards, covering office tables, desks and work chair dimensions, are currently being developed by the European Standardisation Committee (CEN) TC 207, Sub-Committee 3, Office Furniture, on which the British office furniture industry is represented. The draft standards are based on measurements of the European population. In nearly all cases the draft standards are identical to those in existing British Standards; where they differ, they are to the advantage of taller people in the UK population.

I have not received any representations to date relating to the draft European standards.

Millennium Experience

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on the rights which have been acquired by sponsors of the Millennium Experience over the names and contents of its zones and facilities; [60318]

(2) if he will publish details of sponsorship agreements between the New Millennium Experience Company and BSkyB. [60320]

Mr. Mandelson: Contractual arrangements between the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) and individual sponsors are currently under discussion. These discussions are commercially confidential. To reveal details of these contracts at this stage would damage the NMEC's negotiating position with potential sponsors and contractors.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the ticketing arrangements and charges for events in the theatre/cinema complex on the Millennium site. [60319]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is responsible for ticketing arrangements across the whole Millennium Experience project—including charges. Ticketing arrangements will be finalised in line with the NMEC's timetable as set out in their Corporate Plan for 1997/98–2000/01, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions he has been present during discussion of sponsorship by BSkyB of the Millennium Experience. [60321]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), Official Report, 27 October 1998, columns 130.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if information about the euro will be included in the Transaction Zone of the Millennium Experience. [60087]

Mr. Mandelson: Development of the detailed content of the Transaction Zone is progressing to timetable. The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is currently considering with the zone's designers a range of issues, including how information about different currencies might best be presented.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the agreements that the Millennium Experience Company has entered into with foreign financial backers which will exclude the display of examples of British culture and industry in the Millennium Dome. [60754]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has entered into no such agreements.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the guidelines used by the Millennium Experience Company in determining (a) approaches to potential financial backers of the Millennium Dome displays, (b) acceptance of financial backing for the Millennium Dome displays, (c) the relevance of proposed displays put forward by potential financial backers to British culture and industry and (d) preferences among proposals from potential financial backers which promote exclusively British culture and industry; [60747]

(2) what proposals the Millennium Experience Company has to ensure that private sector financial backing does not mitigate against the Millennium Dome being a showcase for British culture and industry. [60755]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has responsibility for maintaining the integrity of the Millennium Experience as the focus for the nation's millennium celebrations. To achieve that the NMEC, in its discussions with private sponsors, retains the overall control of the contents of the exhibit zones within the Millennium Dome.

I am confident that the Millennium Experience will be a symbol of British confidence; a beacon for British creativity; and a fantastic day out for all who visit.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what instructions he has given to the Millennium Experience Company on exclusive franchising arrangements with private sector financial backers that would prevent the display of examples of British culture and industry. [60753]

Mr. Mandelson: I have given no such instructions.

Customer Trolleys

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make regulations to ensure that retail outlets which provide trolleys for customers operate a returnable deposit system. [60235]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 17 November 1998]: Section 99 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 provides local authorities with powers to collect, store and dispose of abandoned trolleys.

Wherever possible they must inform the trolley owner that they have collected a trolley, and if not collected within 6 weeks that they will dispose of it. Local authorities are able to make a charge to the trolley owner which is sufficient to cover the costs of collection, storage and disposal.

The Government prefer local authorities to enter into voluntary arrangements with trolley owners. If local traders are unwilling to co-operate then local authorities may decide to use the S.99 powers.

I have no plans to make any regulations in this area.

Wellcome Trust Planning Application

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will publish the submissions made by his Department to (a) the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and (b) the Inspector in respect of a planning application by the Wellcome Trust at Hinxton in South Cambridgeshire; [55424]

(2) when he plans to provide a substantive reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire on 3 September (ref. 55424) on a planning application by the Wellcome Trust. [60456]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: My Department has not made any submissions to either the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions or to the Inspector in respect of the Wellcome Trust planning application at Hinxton, Cambridgeshire.

Following the decision by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to reopen the inquiry, my Department will be considering whether to submit views to the Inspector.

Royal Observatory

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations he has had with the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council concerning the winding up of the Royal Observatory. [60101]

Mr. Battle: My noble Friend the Minister for Science meets the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) from time to time to discuss a range of issues. However, it is for the Council to determine the specific priorities for funding within a specific area.

PPARC decided to concentrate the work it funds at the RGO, which is based at Cambridge and the Royal Observatory Edinburgh (ROE) in a new UK Astronomy Technology Centre (UKATC) at Edinburgh. This decision was a unanimous one by the Council of PPARC. It will allow PPARC to reorganise the Royal Observatories in the way which best meets their scientific requirements. A substantial amount of money, equivalent to 20 per cent. of the budget for astronomy, is being released as a result of this decision which will be reinvested in their scientific programmes.

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and, for each trip, (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary costs for the adviser. [55995]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 22 October 1998]: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which a Minister in his Department has used (a) an aircraft belonging to the RAF and (b) a privately chartered aircraft together with (i) details of the take-off and destination points, (ii) ground waiting time, (iii) dates of departure and return, (iv) purpose of the trip, (v) cost of the trip to his Department and (vi) details of people accompanying the Minister, indicating the total costs of all such travel borne by his Department (1) since 1 May 1997 and (2) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997. [55559]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: This Question could be answered in full only at disproportionate cost. Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration.

Between 2 May and 30 September 1998, Ministers in this Department have used RAF aircraft/private charter aircraft on the following occasions:

Date	Destination	Purpose	Numbers accompanying Minister
January 1998	Bonn	European Aerospace and Defence Restructuring meeting	2
February 1998	Liverpool to London	Visit to Liverpool	1
February 1998	Madrid-Lisbon	European Aerospace and Defence Restructuring meeting and EU Presidency meeting	5
May 1998	Berlin	Airbus Ministers meeting and Air Show	3
May 1998	Paris	WTO Conference	3
June 1998	Luxembourg	Social Affairs Council	1
July 1998	Paris	European Aerospace and Defence Restructuring meeting and Air Show	2
July 1998	Berlin	European Solutions to German Challenges Conferences	2
July 1998	Swakupmond to Windhoek	Meeting with South African Minister of Trade	1
September 1998	Farnborough	Farnborough Air Show	1

The average cost of the flights taken to meet these trips for the 17 months between May 1997 and September 1998 is £2,204 compared to an average cost of £6,049 under the last year of the previous Administration.

Special Advisers

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list his special advisers indicating their (a) remuneration, (b) official accommodation, (c) staff and other resources allocated to them, (d) age, (e) previous employment, (f) subjects on which they advise and (g) restrictions imposed on access to official papers and meetings. [56661]

Mr. Mandelson: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 319

SESSION 1997–98

9th November—19th November 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
